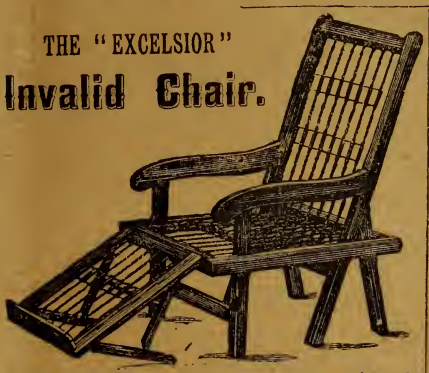
PROPRIETORS AND MANUFACTURERS OF

THE "EXCELSIOR" PATENT SPRING MATTRESS.

Nine Prize Medals and Ten Certificates of Merit have been awarded.

THIS Mattress forms a wonderfully elastic, comfortable and healthy bed, adapting itself to the recumbent form, noiseless and simple, strong and durable in construction, and though never out of order can, if damaged, be easily repaired; the springs running lengthwise ensure complete isolation where two or more occupy a bed, the principle of construction preventing depression in the centre. Only a thin Hair Mattress is required with the "EXCELSIOR," the old-fashioned thick flock and straw palliasses and feather beds being dispensed with, the cost of bedding is much reduced, the labour of bed-making is materially lightened, and cleanliness and purity are ensured.

MATTRESS on Polished Pitch Pine Frame.



Made any size, to fit Wood, Brass, or Iron Bedsteads.

WOOD'S PATENT SPRING LATHS FOR IRON BEDS,

FORMING A SPRING BOTTOM EASILY APPLIED TO ANY BEDSTEAD REQUIRING NEW LATHS.

THE "EXCELSIOR"

Invalid Chair.

With Moveable Back, and with or without adjustable Leg Support. The Leg Rest, when detached, forms an admirable Bed-Rest.

The "MATLOCK" INVALID COUCH,

With Swivel arrangement, reducing length from 6ft. 9in. to 4ft. 3in.

Also made in one length (not reducible), 6ft. 9in. long. An elegant and useful article of Furniture, made in Mahogany, Oak, Pitch-Pine, and Imitation Ebony.

THE "EXCELSIOR" & "MATLOCK" BED-RESTS,

FOR SUPPORTING AN INVALID WHEN IN BED.

THE "EXCELSIOR" INVALID BED.

With appliance for raising an Invalid to any angle easily, painlessly and immediately by one person.

When the moveable rest is put to its lowest position, the Bedstead can be used as an ordinary Bed.

PREFACE.

The Directory of the Counties of Berks, Bucks and Oxon is intended to form a sequel to the Directory of the Six Home Counties, the Counties included herein being equally closely connected with the Metropolis, and largely occupied by the residences of the professional and commercial classes of London.

The number of pages covered by the account of the three Counties included in the present book has greatly increased; in the Edition for 1877 it was 646, but this extends to 790 pages.

The contents are similar to those in previous editions—a general account is given of each County; Lists of Hundreds and Poor Law Unions are included, and also the Polling Places appointed pursuant to "The Ballot Act, 1872;" a sketch of the Geological Features of each County, by Mr. W. J. Harrison, is also given; then follow the Places in each County, alphabetically arranged, with their Inhabitants, both Private Residents and Commercial; it is stated under each Parish in what Hundred, Union, and County Court District, as also in what Diocese, Archdeaconry, and Rural Deanery it is situate; and the College and University of every Beneficed Clergyman have been given as far as they can be ascertained; the names of the Parish Clerks are given under each Parish; lists of Farm Bailiffs of Gentlemen farming their own land are inserted; the population of each place, from the Census of 1881, has been inserted as far as it could be ascertained.

A Map of each County is also given.

The Proprietors have again to return their thanks to those Clergymen, Magistrates' Clerks, Registrars, and other Gentlemen, who have assisted the Agents while collecting the information.

BERKSHIRE.

Berkshire, commonly called Berks, is a southern inland shire, on the south bank of the navigable Thames, which forms its northern boundary mark, and in the valley of which it lies, approaching within 20 miles of London, and situate about midway between the mouth of the Thames and the Bristol Channel. The county is of very irregular shape, with its greatest length of 43 miles from east to west, and with its greatest breadth of 30 miles from north to south at the western end.

The area is 752 square miles, or 450,132 acres; and the population in 1831 was 146,234; in 1841, 161,759; in 1851, 170,065; in 1861, 176,256; in 1871, 196,475; and 1881, 218,382, viz., males, 108,324; females, 110,058.

The Isis, or Thames, divides it on the north from Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire, on the south-east it is bounded by Surrey, on the south by Hampshire, and on the west by Wiltshire. There is much woodland, in which grow hazel, oak, ash, beech and alder. The southern part of the county rises to the chalk range, but in the west the oolite begins. The great chalk range runs through the middle of the west to the south of Wallingford and joins the Chiltern Hills and Marlborough Downs. Inkpen Beacon is the highest point of the chalk in the county, being 1,011 feet in height. The Berkshire Downs rise at White Horse Hill to 893 feet high.

The main river is the Thames, on the northern border, which bears large craft throughout its length to London and the sea, and by canal opens the way to Wiltshire, Bristol, Gloucestershire, Oxford, Birmingham, the Midland Counties and the North. From the winding of the Thames it has a waterway between Lechlade and Windsor of 110 miles and passes Oxford, Abingdon, Wallingford, Reading, Henley (Oxon), Marlow (Bucks), Maidenhead and Windsor. This river is popularly called the Thames throughout its course, but its proper name is the Isis until it receives the smaller stream the Thame, which, flowing by Dorchester, Oxon, joins the Isis between Day's Lock and Shillingford Bridge. Among its fish are trout, barbel, pike, eels, carp, tench, chub, roach, dace, and crayfish. Between the chalk downs in the west and the Thames runs its feeder, a small river 20 miles long, called the Ock, falling into the Thames at Abingdon.

The Kennet is the chief river of South Berks: it rises in Wiltshire, passes by Hungerford, Avington, Kintbury (Kennetbury) and Newbury, where the Lambourn, which rises at Lambourn, falls in; it afterwards receives the Emborne, or Amburn, and falls into the Thames at Reading. The Kennet is navigable for about 20 miles, from Newbury to Reading; it has some fine trout and other fish. The Emborne rises in the parish of Inkpen and forms the Hampshire boundary of the country for about 15 miles; the Blackwater forms a portion of the southern boundary. The Loddon rises in Hampshire and flows through East Berks into the Thames below Reading. Besides the navigation of the Thames and the Kennet, the county is crossed by two canals, the Wilts and Berks in the north, proceeding from Abingdon by Wantage into Wilts, where it joins the Kennet and Avon canal at Semington; the Kennet and Avon canal runs through South Berks from Newbury by Hungerford into Wilts and thence by Devizes to Bath, and so by the Avon to Bristol.

Berkshire is now well supplied with railway communication: the chief railway is the Great Western, the main line of which enters this county by Slough, with a branch to Windsor, thence to Maidenhead and proceeds by Twyford to Reading, which is a principal station, thence by Pangbourne, Moulsford, Didcot & Steventon and so near Wantage and Uffington to Swindon and Bath; it has branch lines from Didcot by Abingdon to Oxford and from Didcot to Newbury; from Maidenhead, down the Thames, to High Wycombe (Bucks), through Cookham; from Moulsford to Wallingford; from Uffington to Faringdon; from Twyford to Henley; from Reading to Basingstoke on the South Western, and from Reading to Hungerford and Devizes, by the Berks and Hants Extension, thence to Bath. The Reading, Guildford and Reigate line of the South Eastern and South Western railway, connecting the towns from which it is named, crosses the South Western at Guildford and joins the South Eastern and Brighton lines near Reigate, thus uniting the town of Reading with the whole of the southern system of railways. The South Western line starts from the same station in Reading as the South Eastern and passes by Wokingham, Ascot and Staines, with a branch to Windsor, through Richmond to London. The lines from Oxford to the north also place Reading in direct communication with the northern parts of the kingdom. Berkshire is a healthy county, with a good soil, though the hills run into chalk. The valley of the Thames has very rich ground, particularly meadow, and so have the vales of the White Horse and the Kennet.

Berkhire seems, like most of the southern shires, to have come into the possession of the Belgians before the Roman period, by the expulsion of the Welsh or Celts. Julius Cæsar found the country in the power of the Atribates, though perhaps the Bibroci and Segontiaci had also settlements within its bounds. Berkshire had several Roman towns, stations and roads. Spinæ (Speen, near Newbury), is the only well known station. There are camps and walls of various ages at Wallingford—Uffington Castle, on the top of White Horse Hill; Sagbury Castle, on Letcombe Downs; Hardwell Camp, near Uffington; Sherbury Camp, near Faringdon; Cæsar's Camp, on Bagshot Heath; Ashbury Camp, or Alfred's Castle, near Lambourn and also camps on Sinodun Hill and Badbury Hill. Many of the hills have barrows in them and some seem to have cromlechs. On the chalk hills near Lambourn are some remarkable piles of large stones, one of which is called Wayland Smith's Cave, but which some maintain to have been habitations of the ancient Welsh. At Kingston Lisle, near Lambourn, is a curious stone, called a blowing stone, bored, and on blowing into which a sound is given forth which can be heard six miles off. The English held Berkshire as part of the kingdom of Wessex, but it was sometimes under the Mid-English. The White Horse, which is the figure of a horse cut out of the turf on the side of the chalk hills, and left white, is by most thought to have been done by the old English; it may be seen from a distance of fifteen miles and gives name to the hill in which it is cut and to the adjoining valley. Berkshire was invaded by the Danes, with whom several battles were fought, a very famous one at Ashdown, in which Ethelred and Alfred the Great beat the Danes. The battle of Ethandane, in which Alfred defeated the Danes, is also thought to have been fought in Berkshire. During the middle ages frequent forays took place in this county, but of its many castles few remain: of Wallingford and Donnington there are remains.

In the Parliamentary Wars most of the Berkshire towns were the scenes of conflict. Two great battles were fought at Newbury in 1643 and 1644. Reading was besieged and taken; Abingdon, Windsor Castle and Donnington were attacked.

At Abingdon and Reading were large Benedictine establishments, richly endowed, of which the abbots were mitred.

Of these fine buildings there are extensive remains; those of the Grey Friary at Reading are converted into a church called Greyfriars; of the Benedictine monastery at Hurley some remains are to be seen.

Avington is a very ancient church, said to be old English or Norman; there are also specimens of Norman in St. Nicholas church, Abingdon and in Wilford church.

The number of parishes is between 140 and 150, some being partly out of the shire. Berkshire is in the Oxford circuit, and sends three members to Parliament. Abingdon is the nomination town for members of Parliament. The county has one court of quarter sessions and 11 petty sessional divisions. The shire towns are Reading and Abingdon; by an Order in Council of September 14th, 1868, the assizes and sessions are to be held exclusively at Reading.

The parliamentary boroughs are:—

	Members.	Pop. 1881.
Abingdon	One	6,608
Reading	Two	42,050
Wallingford	One	8,194
Windsor	One	19,080

The municipal boroughs are:—Abingdon, population in 1881, 6,608; Maidenhead, 8,219; Newbury, 10,143; Wallingford, 2,803; and New Windsor, 12,273. Other towns are—Faringdon, Hungerford, Wantage and Wokingham.

The manufactures are not of importance—some silk, mats, sacking and sailcloth—though Reading, Newbury and Abingdon used to be great clothing towns: this trade is reviving at Abingdon. At Reading are the large biscuit works of Huntley and Palmers, the Reading Iron Works and the great seed establishment of Sutton and Sons. Whiting is made at Kintbury from the soft upper chalk. Chairs and many articles of turnery are made from the beech woods with which the county abounds. The produce of Berkshire is lime, coarse stone for building, brick-earth, corn, beans, apples, cherries, onions, asparagus, timber, hoops, broomsticks, osiers, cart-horses, calves, butter, pigs, sheep, wool, besides trout and other fish.

The shire is divided into twenty hundreds (at Domesday Survey, twenty-two). They are Beynhurst, in the east; Bray, in the east; Compton, in the midland; Charlton, in the south; Cookham, in the south-east; Faircross, in the midland (formerly Thatcham); Faringdon, in the north-west; Ganfield, in the north-west; Hormer (formerly Hornimere), in the north; Lambourn, in the west; Kintbury Eagle, in the south-west midland (formerly Kennetbury and Egley); Moreton (formerly Blewbury), in the north-east; Ock, in the north-east; Reading, in the north-east; Ripplesmere, in the east; Shrivenham, in the north-west; Sonning, in the east; Theale, in the north-east; Wantage, in the midland; and Wargrave, in the east.

The superintendent registrars' districts are:—

The following is a list of the hundreds in the county, with the parishes contained in each:—

Hundred of Beynhurst—Bisham, Bray, Hurley, Remenham, Shottesbrook and White Waltham.

Hundred of Charlton—Barkham, Broad Hinton, Earley, Finchamstead, Hartley Dummer, Shinfield, Swallowfield (part of) and Whistley-in-Hurst.

Hundred of Compton—Aldworth, Catmore, Chilton, Compton or Compton Parva, East Ilsley or Market Ilsley, Farnborough or Farmborough and West Ilsley.

Hundred of Cookham—Binfield, Cookham and Sunninghill.

Hundred of Faircross—Bagley Wood, Beedon, Boxford, Brightwaltham, Brimpton, Chandlings Farm, Chieveley, Frilsham, Greenham, Hampstead Norris, Leckhampstead, Midgham, Peasemore, Sandleford, Shaw-cum-Donnington, Speen, Stanford Dingley, Wasing, Welford, Winterbourn and Yattendon.

Hundred of Faringdon—Great Coxwell, Great Faringdon (part of) and Little Coxwell.

Hundred of Ganfield—Buckland, Charney, Hatford, Hinton Waldrist, Longworth, Pusey, Shellingford and Stamford-in-the-Vale.

Hundred of Hormer—Besselsleigh, Cholsall, Cumnor, Kennington, Northcourt, North Hinksey, Radley, St. Helen (Abingdon), Sandford, Seacourt, Shippon, South Hinksey, Sunningwell, Thrupp and Wick, Wootton and Wytham.

Hundred of Kintbury Eagle—Avington, Chaddleworth, Chilton Foliatt (part of), East Challow, East Shefford, Enborne, Fawley, Hampstead Marshall, Hungerford, Inkpen, Kintbury, Letcombe Basset, Letcombe Regis, Shalbourn (part of), West Challow, West Shefford and West Woodhay.

Hundred of Lambourn—Blagrave, East Garston, Eastbury and Bockhampton, Hadley and Lambourn.

Hundred of Moreton—Allhallows (Wallingford), Ashampstead, Aston Tirrold, Aston Upthorpe, Basildon, Brightwell, Clapcot, Didcot or Dudcott, East Hagbourne, Harwell, Moulsford, North Moreton, Sotwell, South Moreton, Streatley, Upton with Nottingham Fee and West Hagbourne.

Hundred of Ock—Appleford, Appleton and Eaton, Denchworth (part of), Draycot Moor, Drayton, Frilford, Fyfield, Garford, Goosey, Kingston Bagpuize, Little Wittenham, Long Wittenham, Lyford, Marcham, Milton, Steventon, Sutton Courtney, Sutton Wick and Tubney.

Hundred of Reading—Beenham Vallence, Blewberry, Bucklebury, Cholsey, Graizeley or Grasley, Pangbourn, St. Giles (Reading), St. Lawrence (Reading), St. Mary (Reading), Southcot, Sulhampstead Abbots, Swallowfield (part of), Thatcham, Tilehurst and Whitley.

Hundred of Ripplesmere—Clewer, Dedworth, Easthampstead, Old Windsor and Winkfield with Ascot.

Hundred of Shrivenham—Ashbury, Balking, Beckett, Bourton, Buscot, Coleshill, Compton Beauchamp, Eaton Hastings, Fernham, Great Faringdon (part of), Idstone, Kingston Lisle with Fawler, Kingstone, Winslow, Longcot, Odstone, Shrivenham, Uffington, Watchfield and Woolstone.

Hundred of Sonning—Arborfield, Newland, Ruscombe, Sandhurst, Sunningtown, Winnersh, Wokingham and Woodley, with Sandford.

Hundred of Theale—Aldermaston, Bradfield, Burghfield, Englefield, Padworth, Purley, Stratfield Mortimer, Sulham, Sulhampstead, Bannister, Tidmarsh, Ufton or Ufton Nervet, Wokefield and Woolhampton.

Hundred of Wantage—Ardington, Charlton, Childrey, Denchworth (part of), East Hanney, East Hendred, East Lockinge, Grove, Sparsholt, Wantage, West Hanney, West Hendred, West Lockinge.

Hundred of Wargrave—Waltham St. Lawrence, Warfield and Wargrave.

Borough of Abingdon— St. Helen and St. Nicholas.

Borough of Maidenhead—Maidenhead.

Borough of Newbury—Newbury.

Borough of New Windsor—New Windsor.

Borough of Reading—St. Giles, St. Lawrence and St. Mary.

Borough of Wallingford—Allhallows, St. Leonards, St Mary-le-More, St. Peter and Wallingford Castle Precinct.

Coroners for the County.—Abingdon district, A. D. Bartlett, Abingdon; Newbury district, J. C. Pinniger, Newbury; Reading district, Wilham Weedon, Reading; Wantage district, Llewellyn Jotcham, Wantage.

H.M. Prison for the county, in the Forbury, Reading, is a red brick castellated building with white stone dressings, built for 224 prisoners; Capt. Cheslyn Abney Blyth, governor; Rev. M. T. Friend M.A. chaplain.

Royal Berkshire Hospital, London road, Reading, opened in 1839, is an extensive stone building, having a portico in the Ionic style, with two wings added in 1882; it is supported mostly by voluntary contributions raised in the county; it will hold 120 beds. E. Wells M.D. R. C. Shettle M.D. and J. Shea M.D. physicians; George May and F. A. Bulley, consulting surgeons; G. May, jun. M.B. W. W. Moxhay and O. C. Maurice, surgeons; F. Workman, J. H. Walters and H. G. Armstrong, assistant surgeons; Rev. T. C. Cardew, chaplain; F. W. Sutton, house surgeon; John T. Hugo, secretary; Miss Baster, matron & superintendent of nursing

The County Lunatic Asylum, called the Moulsford Asylum, was opened in September, 1870; it occupies a prominent position on the Wallingford road, three-quarters of a mile from Moulsford station and 2 miles from Wallingford; it is built of red brick relieved with stone and coloured brick dressings, the style of architecture being a modification of Early English, forming nearly a square; the asylum stands on an estate of 80 acres, extending to the banks of the river Thames, and is cheerful in aspect and convenient and suitable in arrangements; the cost was £68,600, but it has been enlarged at additional cost of £55,500. The number of male patients is 194; females 260. Robert Bryce Gilland M.D. medical superintendent; John Barron M.A., M.D. assistant medical officer; Rev. R. W. P. Circuitt, chaplain; John Thornhill Morland, clerk to the committee of visitors; Moses Nicholls, steward and clerk of the asylum; Mrs. Horton, housekeeper.

The Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum near Wokingham, opened in 1863, is an extensive range of brick buildings capable of affording accommodation to 563 inmates and planned and erected under the exclusive direction of the late Sir J. Jebb at a cost of £118,039; but since altered and enlarged at a further cost of £48,000: it stands on an elevated site about 400 feet above the sea level, sheltered by pine woods on the north and north-east and open to the south and south-west. Wm. Orange M.D. medical superintendent; David Nicholson M.D. deputy medical superintendent; John Bladwin Isaac M.D. assistant medical officer; Rev. Thomas Ashe M.A. chaplain; Charles Phelps, steward.

THE rocks of Berkshire have been very carefully studied by the officers of the Geological Survey. Complete geological maps of the surface were published in 1860-61, and in the splendid memoir on the Geology of the London Basin, by Mr. W. Whitaker, a very full account will be found of all the strata except those which form the extreme north-west corner. The Tertiary Beds of the south and east were first described by Professor Prestwich in a masterly series of papers published between 1840 and 1860 in the Journal of the Geological Society: Professor Rupert-Jones has also written on the same subject.

As the longest axis of Berkshire extends nearly east and west, while the different beds of rock run across it in a slanting direction from north-east to south-west we naturally expect to meet with a good variety of formations in the county, and this we shall find to be the case. From the absence of disturbances, however, and from the dip being gentle and coinciding with the general slope of the surface, the variety is not so great as might have been expected.

We shall commence with the oldest rocks, which occupy the extreme north-west of the county.

THE OOLITE. (1.) The Oxford Clay.—Entering at Coleshill and Lechlade, and running east by Thrupp Common and Newbridge and north-east by Hinksey, Wytham and Oxford, we have the Berkshire portion of a tract of stiff clay, which extends across the Thames into Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire. It contains frequent bands of limestone nodules or septaria, is of a blue colour when dug at any depth, but weathers yellow where exposed to the air; it forms a low tract of land bordering the Thames for about a mile or two on its southern side, and is of little economic value. It is mostly in pasture: a boring at Wytham passed through 596 feet of Oxford clay.

(2.) The Coral Rag.—This term is applied to a series of beds, clayey and sandy at the base, of which the middle portion is a rubbly oolitic limestone full of corals, capped in a few places by irony sands. The muddy sea in which the Oxford clay was deposited must have cleared and shallowed, and in the warm waters coral reefs grew irregularly, resembling those now forming in tropical seas. Where present the thickness of the Coral Rag varies from 10 to 30 feet, and it constitutes a ridge overlooking the valley of the Thames. Entering the county near Shrivenham, we can trace it round Faringdon, and thence it occupies a tract three miles wide north of the river Ock as far as Abingdon and Cumnor: at Wytham it rises as an outlier to an height of 583 feet; it is largely quarried for road metal. The lower portion contains characteristic Ammonites; corals, and spines and plates of sea-urchins occur in the middle portion in large numbers.

(3.) Kimmeridge Clay.—Another thick mass of blue clay with bituminous shales succeeds the coral rag; it forms flat wet land from Shrivenham station to Longcott. Passing under the well-known sponge gravels of Faringdon, it reappears south of Shillingford and Stanford, and forms the "Fields of East and West Hanney and Drayton." Crossing the Ock at Abingdon, we can follow the Kimmeridge clay to Radley and Bagley Wood. Of the fossils Ammonites biplex is rather common and beautifully preserved; Ostrea deltoidea is very abundant. The clay is dug at several places for brickmaking.

(4.) Portland Sand.—There is a small outlier forming the hill on which the village of Bourton is built; it is well exposed in a large quarry there.

THE CRETACEOUS SYSTEM.—This term is derived from the Latin 'creta' chalk, which is the best known and most conspicuous member.

(1.) The Lower Greensand.—This is a bed of loose reddish sand, often full of pebbles and very variable in thickness. At Fernham and Great and Little Coxwell it assumes considerable local importance, constituting the "sponge-gravels of Faringdon;" here it is largely quarried for gravel, which from its bright yellow hue is much sought after for walks and avenues. From Baulking eastward to the Thames it is not seen, being overlapped by the Gault, but there is an outlier north of Sunningwell which forms a hilly tract; it makes a light dry arable soil.

(2.) The Gault.—This is a blue micaceous clay containing occasional nodules of limestone; it runs as a band about one to two miles wide between Ashbury and Stainswick to Uffington, where it turns due east and reaches through West Challow and Steventon to Wittenham; its upper boundary is well marked by a line of springs thrown out by the impermeable clay; forming a low plain at the foot of the chalk escarpment it is seldom exposed in sections, except in an occasional brick-pit; its thickness is about 100 feet.

(3.) The Upper Greensand or Chloritic Series.—From Wittenham Wood past Wallingford to Aston Tirrell the outcrop of this rock is not less than five miles broad. Following it westward through Hagborne, Didcot, East Hendred and Wantage it rapidly narrows, until at Childrey, Sparshot, Compton Beauchamp and Ashbury it only forms the slope of the escarpment of chalk, which consequently becomes steeper as we follow it in this direction. Frequently the exact boundary is obscured by landslips. As the name implies, the rock is usually full of greenish grains. At Woolstone it is 60 feet thick, but above 100 at Didcot.

(4.) The Chalk.—This is perhaps the best known rock in England—lithologically speaking; it constitutes the central and most elevated portion of Berkshire. On the west the main mass spreads across from Hungerford to Compton Beauchamp, a distance of 12 miles. The strike, or direction, is here nearly east and west and continues so to the Thames. The dip is to the south-east at a very small angle, from one to three degrees only. In the south the chalk dips under the Tertiary beds of the valley of the Kennet, and rises up further south at a sharp angle along a line from Inkpen to Kingsclere; at Inkpen Beacon it attains an elevation of 1,011 feet, the highest point reached by the chalk in the south of England. The total thickness in Berkshire of this great mass of white soft limestone is probably about 900 feet; the chalk was eminently a deep sea deposit, for when we examine it microscopically we find it to consist in large part of the tiny chambered shells of foraminifera, being very similar in composition, in fact, to the greyish-white ooze which numerous soundings have proved to form the floor of the North Atlantic Ocean.

The Lower Chalk has marly beds at the base about 80 feet thick, whose top is marked by a hard band called the Totternhoe Stone. This lower division may be seen in the Great Western railway cutting at Wallingford Road station. Above it we get about 400 feet of chalk without flints, but containing marly partings which indicate the line of bedding: this division forms the comparatively low and flat table-land which extends from Moulsford and Streatley by Blewbury and Chilton, narrowing greatly as it goes westwards. Fossils are not very numerous, but Ammonites varians and Turrilites are characteristic. The top is formed by a hard cream-coloured band—the Chalk Rock—some 8 or 10 feet thick, which from its superior hardness usually forms the top of the chief chalk escarpment. Thus, we can trace it all along the northern brow of Ilsley Common and Childrey Warren; the Ridge Way runs along the edge, and sections are exposed at Cuckhamsley Knob, &c.

The Upper Chalk is characterised by the presence of flints, which occur most frequently in small irregular lumps, but also in flat sheets. The origin of flints is still a vexed question: many appear to have been formed by the deposit of siliceous matter on and around organic bodies, as sponges; the flat tabular masses of flint would seem to have been deposited in the bedding-planes probably after the consolidation of the rock. Such lines of flint may be seen in the railway cutting near Pangbourn, and in the chalk-pits at Courage, north of Newbury, and at Cookham Dean, near Great Marlow. Fossils are of frequent occurrence both in the flint and the chalk; sea-urchins or Echinoderms as Anauchytes and Micraster, abound, with sponges and such shells as Terebratula &c. The main mass of the chalk passes in Berkshire as far east as Remenham, Wargrave and Maidenhead, but Windsor Castle is built on an inlying boss, probably elevated by some disturbance, of which there are also traces near Great Marlow.

The scenery of the Chalk Downs is very marked. The beautifully smooth swelling curves are covered with a short dense herbage which affords good pasturage for sheep and capital galloping grounds for horses. The higher part is, however, often covered with clayey deposits, as south of Ilsley, and then forms a soil on which the beech grows well; but as a rule the wide open nature of the country is always discernible. The valleys are often waterless, the rain being soon absorbed by the porous soil. White Horse Hill rises 893 feet above the level of the sea. Economically regarded, chalk is valuable as a dressing for clay lands; much is also dug to burn into lime, and it forms an ingredient of Portland cement. Whiting is solely made from chalk, Kintbury being the seat of manufacture. The soft upper chalk is here ground into a pulp with water and allowed to settle in tanks; about 2,000 tons are made per annum; it is mostly sent to Bristol by canal, and fetches about 8s. per ton. Chalk was formerly more used for building than at present, and when carefully selected is well suited for inside work, being very easy to carve; examples may be seen in Sonning and Tilehurst churches. The chalk-rock affords a poor road-metal. Flints furnish an almost everlasting material for building; they have been used with good effect, dressed into a cuboidal form, in the beautiful little church at Shottesbrook; they are also ground up to use in the manufacture of glass and porcelain.

THE EOCENE SYSTEM.—A great break in the succession of the rocks intervenes here. In those now to be described, we find the remains of animals altogether different to those in the chalk, and we believe there was a great interval of time during which either (1) no deposit was formed, the country being a land surface, or (2) deposits were formed which were afterwards washed away—denuded off—before the rocks of which we now have to speak were laid down as sediment: perhaps both things happened.

(1.) The Reading Beds in Berkshire rest immediately upon the chalk, and were formerly known as the "Plastic Clay;" they consist of alternations of clays and sands of many colours, with rolled flint-pebbles. Fossils are few, Ostrea bellovacina, which much resembles the oyster of the present day, being the only one found in any number. Commencing at Prosperous Wood, about two miles south of Hungerford, we can trace these beds along the south of the Kennet to two miles east of Newbury: on the opposite side they continue nearly to Theale, then, after a gap formed by the connection of the Pang with the Kennet, we find the same sands, &c. spreading out east and west of Reading. Here they are largely worked at Katesgrove, Coley Hill &c. The plastic clays are made into tiles, drain pipes, &c.; the sands are mixed with the clays in brick-making, or when white and clean are used in glass works. Thence the outcrop continues about half a mile wide through Sonning and the two Walthams towards Windsor. There are numerous outliers on the chalk hills north of the Lambourne and the Pang, as at Beedon Hill, Basildon, and Farnborough Copse. The junction with the chalk is often marked by swallow-holes, which are caverns or funnel-shaped pipes, into which the water, running down the slope of the Tertiary beds, enters and disappears.

(2.) The London Clay.—Where the junction is exposed with the Reading beds we see a "basement bed" of blackish flint pebbles which are traversed by cracks, so that they fall to pieces on receiving a gentle blow: they are embedded in a brownish loam; above this are sandy clays passing up into stiff blue and brown clay; this formation has a broad outcrop in Berkshire. There is a good section in Shaw brick-kiln, north of Newbury. Eastwards of Reading these clays occupy a district gradually widening from 3 or 4 to 10 or 15 miles in breadth, over which are scattered large outlying masses of rocks presently to be described. Brickyards and railway cuttings afford the only sections, as at Sonning, Windsor, Englefield, Frilsham, &c. Pectunculus, and Ditrupa plana are characteristic shells.

a White angular flint gravel. b Brown flint gravel, containing large blocks of grey-wether sandstone. c Lower Bagshot sand.

(3.) The Bagshot Beds.—These are sandy, forming ranges of barren heath-covered hills in the south of the county; sections and fossils are equally rare: they form the high grounds of Coldash and Bucklebury Commons, north of the Kennet; south of that river they extend from Inkpen Common by Greenham Heath to the commons of Tadley, Silchester, and Burghfield; then we come to the valley of the Loddon, where the beds have been denuded. Crossing this gap we find ourselves on the western end of the main mass near Finchampstead and Wokingham, and it continues by Ascot race-course to Egham: south of this line we pass over some more clayey beds, known as Middle Bagshot or Bracklesham Beds, and ascending Easthampstead Plain find ourselves on the northern extremity of the well-known Chobham Ridges, on the loose Upper Bagshot Sands.

Standing here on the latest formed of the stratified rocks, which constitute the county of Berks, we should, in imagination, sink a deep borehole and picture it passing in succession through all the beds we have named until, at a depth of perhaps 2,000 feet, it entered the formation—the Oxford Clay—which we found at the surface in the north-west corner near Lechlade.

A well lately sunk at Wokingham passed through London Clay, 263 feet; Reading Beds, 54 feet; Sand, 16 feet; and pierced the chalk for 64 feet, obtaining a good supply of water.

GREY-WETHERS OR SARSEN STONES.—Blocks of a hard sandstone are frequently found on the surface of the chalk, &c.: they are used for building and mending roads. They would appear to be consolidated masses of either the Reading Beds or the Bagshot Sands, which have been let down, as it were, by the washing away of the looser matter in which they were once embedded.

SURFACE DEPOSITS.—Our examination of the strata at any point is often interfered with by the presence of beds of gravel, brick, earth &c. many feet thick, which cover over and hide the underlying rocks. The chalk is often covered with a stiff brown and red clay full of unworn flints. This would seem to be the residue left by the removal of the carbonate of lime, by the chemical action of water charged with carbonic acid; this "clay with flints" is well seen in the road cutting south of Remenham. Of brick-earth there is not much; some may be seen near Cookham.

The Flint-gravels occur at high levels as at Pebble Hill, south of Kintbury, and often capping the hills of Bagshot Sand; or at low levels, as from the foot of Enborne Hill to Newbury, and on both sides of the Thames.

Alluvium.—In former times the river Kennet deposited much mud for about a quarter of a mile on either side of its present course: this now forms valuable water-meadows, always green. Beds of peat occur in it, from 5 to 15 feet thick; this peat is largely dug at Newbury, and when burnt the ashes form a valuable fertilizer, probably from the quantity of gypsum they contain. In the Museum of the Newbury Institution, there is a fine specimen of the skull and horns of Bos primigenius, a large extinct species of ox, which was dug out of the peat in Ham Marsh. In a large excavation close to Reading a fine section of old river-gravels and loams is exposed, in which Mr. E. B. Poulton has found trunks of trees and remains of such extinct animals as the mammoth, rhinoceros &c

Stemmed and barbed Flint arrow-head, found in a burial-mound on Lambourne Down, Berkshire, and now in the British Museum.

PREHISTORIC MAN.—Of those early dwellers in our islands to whom the use of metal was unknown, and who made their tools of flint, several relics have been found in Berkshire. From a "barrow" or interment on Lambourne Downs a beautiful dagger of white flint was obtained, which is now, with an arrow-head and other objects from the same locality, in the British Museum. Some beautifully formed arrow-heads of the same material, a scraper probably used for preparing skins, celts or flint axe-heads, and a nodule of iron pyrites are also recorded by Mr. Evans, in his "Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain," as having been found on the Berkshire Downs. A flint arrow-head was also found at Sutton Courtney. A large chipped but unground celt, 8 inches long by 2¾ broad, was found in the peat at Thatcham; and in the Geological Museum, Jermyn street, London, there is a fragment of a slender pointed flint "pick," which was picked up near Maidenhead. A perforated stone hammer-head was found at Sunninghill, and an oval flint blade near Long Wittenham. A triangular scraper of ochreous flint occurred in the Thames near Windsor. Probably many more such objects would turn up if they were intelligently searched for, and there is no better preparation for the task than to endeavour with two flint nodules or a flint and a hammer to produce similar specimens; the task will give us some idea of the dexterity, and acquaintance with the properties of the material, which must have been possessed by our predecessors who lived in Berkshire, perhaps 10,000 years ago. W. J. H.

The following table shows the acreage under each kind of crop, and the number of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs in Berkshire, as taken from the agricultural returns, 1882:—

ABINGDON.

ABINGDON is a parliamentary and municipal borough, a polling place for the county, market and union town and head of a county court district, in the hundred of Hormer, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 56 miles from London by road, 103¾ by the river and 59 by the Great Western railway, with which it is connected by a single line, about a mile and a half in extent, joining the main Oxford line at Radley station, 25 miles north-west from Reading, 6 south from Oxford, 10 north-west from Wallingford and 21 north from Newbury.

The town of Abingdon is situated on the right bank of the Thames, at the confluence of the Ock, and consists of a spacious Market place at the east end of the town, from which several streets diverge to the north, south and west; the last of these, High street, is much contracted at its western extremity, where it gives off tributary streets to the right and left and then expands into a smaller square, and the wide thoroughfare, called Ock street, extending to the western limit of the town. The name in legendary history is derived from Aben, a noble hermit, who is said to have built on this site a dwelling house and a chapel in honour of the Holy Virgin: according to other writers, the town was originally called Seovechesham or Seusham, and some identify it with Cloveshoe, a place famous in the annals of English Church Councils, but it no doubt owes both its name and historical importance to its abbey, formerly one of the wealthiest mitred abbeys in England: Seovechesham was at a very early period a royal residence, but was subsequently deserted by the Saxon kings, until Offa, king of the Mercians and West Saxons, while accidentally visiting the spot, was so charmed with the beauty of the Isle of Andersey, a district lying south-west of the town, and between the monastery and St. Helen's Church, that he prevailed on the monks to exchange it for the manor of Goosey, and built for himself on the island a royal residence, which was there maintained until Kenwulf, his successor, resold Andersey to Abbot Uthemus for the manor of Sutton and £120 in silver; the site is now indicated by a large tract of land encircled by the Thames and a tributary inlet. William the Conqueror, in 1084, kept his Easter at Abingdon, being splendidly entertained by his powerful adherent, Robert D'Oyley, to whose charge he entrusted his younger son, afterwards Henry I. while receiving his education at this abbey. During the civil war Abingdon was garrisoned for the king, who, on 17th April, 1644, arrived here with the queen, attended by Prince Rupert and the Duke of York, and after holding a council of war, returned to Oxford; on the following day, May 25th, the Royalist general deserted the town, and the Earl of Essex, arriving with his troops, plundered it, and placed there a Parliamentary garrison; on the 31st of May, a new Parliamentary force under General Waller, which had been quartered at Wantage, entered the town and demolished the beautiful cross which then stood in the market place; various attempts were made by the king's party during the years 1644-6 to recover the town, but in the main with little success, and it eventually remained in the hands of the Parliament.

Abingdon increased much, both in population and wealth, by the building of Burford or Borford bridge, near the town, and another bridge at Culhamford, about half a mile east of it, the erection of which has been attributed by some to Henry V. who, however, only granted his licence and protection: of these works, begun in 1416, John Houchons and John Banbury were zealous promoters; and among the chief of those who contributed to the building and preservation of the bridges and intermediate road were Sir Peter Besils, of Besilsheigh; Geoffrey Barbour, a merchant, and William Hales and Maud his wife, who, in 1453, added three arches to Burford bridge. In the reign of Queen Mary, Sir John Mason, a native of Abingdon, and Chancellor of the University of Oxford, obtained for the town, in the year 1556, a charter of incorporation, under which it was governed by a mayor, two bailiffs and 9 aldermen. The corporate body, acting also as the Urban Sanitary Authority, now consists of the mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors. Abingdon returned one member to a single parliament in 1337, and has continued to return one since it was incorporated; among its representatives have been Sir Simon Harcourt and Sir Frederick Thesiger, afterwards Lord Chelmsford; it is divided into two parishes, St. Helen and St. Nicholas: the parliamentary borough, including, in addition, part of Sutton Wick, in the parish of Sutton Courtney was extended by the Boundary Act, 1868. The river is crossed by a stone bridge of seven arches (connecting the town, by Culhamford bridge, with the parish of Culham, in Oxfordshire), which bears marks of the attack made by General Gage when the town was held for the Parliament by Colonel Brown; a high and broad causeway, constructed in the fifteenth century by the munificence of Geoffrey Barbour, connects the two bridges. At an early period of its history Abingdon possessed a Benedictine abbey of great wealth and high distinction, and of which the mitred abbot was summoned with the barons to parliament. Cina, father of King Ina, whose rule extended over Wiltshire and a large part of Berkshire, is said to have founded it (A.D. 675) on a site described in the abbey chronicle as a "table land surmounting a rising ground of delightful aspect, in a retired spot, enclosed within two most pleasant streams." About A.D. 866-71, the Danes overran the country, and coming to Abingdon, destroyed the monastery, leaving only the bare walls; but on their extermination by Alfred, it was rebuilt, and subsequently, between A.D. 946-55, reconstructed under King Edred. On the arrival in England of William the Conqueror (A.D. 1066) Abbot Aldred took the oath of allegiance to him, but was displaced, and the abbacy bestowed upon Ethelhelm, a Norman: at the general dissolution of the monasteries the abbey was surrendered to the king by the abbot, Thomas Rowland B.D. sometimes written and called "Rowland Ponticost," and 25 monks, under the common seal of the convent, on the 29th May, 1537, the value of the yearly revenue being returned as £1,876 10s. 9d. while the abbot himself was allowed to retain the manor of Cumnor, with an annual pension of £200: the site of the church has been swept bare; the early minster of St. Mary, 120 feet long, with east and west apses, was only attended for mass on Sundays by a little community of 13, who occupied separate cells provided with chapels, within a precinct wall; the later church was 434 feet long, with a Perpendicular nave, western and central towers: the existing remains comprise the Perpendicular gate-house, a vaulted structure, adjacent to the church of St. Nicholas, with central and side arches, and rooms above occupied by the corporation, and some other buildings situated eastward of it, on the backwater of the Thames, now occupied as a brewery, but readily accessible and principally consisting of a long building, with walls of great thickness, and massive buttresses, at one end of which a flight of wooden steps, with a time-worn balustrade, gives access to several apartments with lofty open timbered roofs, and connected by a corridor running along the north side; the room at the west end contains a fine Early English fire-place, with graceful shafts and foliated capitals; and the doorway is flanked on either side by good traceried windows; underneath is a spacious vaulted crypt, now used for storing ale: the windows facing the river are in good preservation, and from a lane between the brewery and the abbey gateway a very picturesque view is obtained: Henry I. (Beauclerc) was a student here, and Egelwyn, Bishop of Durham, died while imprisoned in the abbey in 1071.

St. Helen's church, situated close to the river, south-west of the town, is a spacious edifice, chiefly in the Perpendicular style, consisting of five parallel aisles of unequal length and breadth, tower and spire on the north-east, with a porch in the lower stage, vestry on the south-east, and a small chapel or chantry west of the tower: the church was completely restored in 1873, under the direction of Mr. Woodyer, when the high pews and cumbrous galleries were removed, the nave and chancel roof renewed in open timber work and considerably heightened: the chancel was also newly enclosed by a stone screen on the north side, and separated from the nave by a lofty and elaborate wood screen of oak: the north aisle has a timber ceiling, richly painted with figures of kings, prophets and saints, and is traditionally said to have been moved hither on the dissolution of the abbey: the south aisles, one of which was built in 1539, for the use of a guild, are rather later, but of the same character as is the south porch, which has a good doorway and niches: the tower is Early English, and has a plain parapet with crocketed angle turrets, from within which flying buttresses support a tall octagonal spire. it contains a peal of 8 bells, remarkable for their exceeding sweetness of tone: the east and west windows, both of which are new, have been filled with stained glass; the former as a memorial to the late Thomas Hyde esq. and the latter in memory of his son, the late John Hyde esq. and there is a third on the south side of the church, erected by subscription to the late George Bowes Morland esq.: in the north aisle, beneath a feathered arch, is the altar tomb of John Roysse (1571), the founder of the Grammar School; the upper slab, brought by his direction from his garden in London, served, until within the last few years, as a table, from which bread was distributed every Sunday, in accordance with his will, to 12 poor persons; it now bears the shield of arms—gules, a griffin sejeant—with crest and mantling, formerly placed above it; and also an inscribed brass plate, affixed, on the restoration of the tomb, by the past and present scholars, in 1873: in the north aisle is a huge monument, by Hickey, with portrait figures and busts, erected pursuant to the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Hawkins, ob. 1780, and commemorating the deceased, her relatives, and the Rev. Walter Hart, vice-principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, who died in 1768, on the eve of their intended marriage; here also is a monument inscribed to Richard Curtaine, gent. "a principall magistrate of this Corporation," 1643; and at the foot of this memorial a brass, within a large slab of Carn stone, to Galfridus (Geoffrey) Barbur, 1417, with his effigy in the attitude of prayer; he was the town's chief benefactor, and his remains removed from the abbey on its dissolution, were re-interred in this church; at the east end of the south aisle is a portrait, on panel, of Mr. William Lee, five times mayor of Abingdon, who died in 1637, aged 92; accompanying the portrait is a genealogical chart, and an inscription, stating that he had in his lifetime issue from his loins two hundred, lacking but three: the organ, enclosed in a panelled case of carved oak, displays a quaint figure of David, carved in wood, with gilded harp and crown: the font of white marble, was executed by Mr. H. P. Peyman, of Abingdon, and shewn in the Great Exhibition of 1851: in 1644-5, the parliamentary army, under General Waller, while quartered here, used the north aisle as a stable; among the vicars may be mentioned Ethelmarus or Aymer de Valence, half-brother to Henry I. and afterwards Bishop of Winchester: there are 925 sittings, of which 200 are free. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £380, with the sinecure rectory of St. Nicholas, value £27, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1878 by the Rev. William Cobham Gibbs M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge; a lectureship, founded by Richard Rigglesworth in 1647, provides a Friday evening service for St. Helen's church during the winter, and a Friday evening service for Marcham church during the summer months; a vicarage house for the parish of St. Helen has been erected upon a healthy site on the north side of Albert Park.

The church of St. Nicholas, situated on the north side of the market place, adjoining the abbey gateway, was built, according to Dugdale, by Nicholas de Coleham or Culham, prior, and afterwards abbot of Abingdon, between the years 1289 & 1307, although portions of the west front seem to indicate an earlier origin, perhaps during the period 1200-20; traces of the triple lancet window, which originally lighted the west front, are still visible, as well as of other similar windows in the north wall; and it may therefore be concluded that the building existed at least 60 years before the abbey of De Coleham: the church is a small structure, consisting only of chancel and nave, a small chantry, organ chamber and vestry on the north, and a western battlemented tower, containing 6 bells, cast in October 1741, by Abe Rudhall, who received for the work the five old bells and clappers, valued at £141 10s. 4½d. and £70 1s. 10d. in cash: the tower is built partly upon the west wall, and is otherwise supported from within the church by two stone piers or legs, standing clear of the walls attached to it; on the north side is a singular square stair turret, with a gabled roof and a small triangular window: the west doorway, with its lateral arcading, is a good example of late Norman work, but the rest of the church, as now existing, is chiefly Perpendicular: during the year 1881 the church underwent a thorough restoration at the hands of Mr. Edwin Dolby, architect of Abingdon, in course of which the nave roof was entirely renewed in English oak, and a panelled and embattled parapet, with numerous carved shields, indifferently executed, was imposed upon the north wall; the floor was also relaid with small blocks, tiles and disturbed gravestones; the old pulpit refixed and the chancel and nave refitted in oak: the heraldic glass, with which the east and other windows were previously filled, including a shield of arms of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, was wholly removed and sold; of this some may still be seen in the windows of Baston Farm, and other portions at the Abbey House, the residence of E. J. Trendell esq. who has refilled the east window with Bristol glass, and one lancet window has also been renewed in memory of the late Mr. Henry Yeates, of Abingdon: the reredos, given by the rector, is of carved oak, and the Perpendicular font was restored at the cost of Mrs. Summers, of the Grammar School: on the north side of the nave is the tall mural monument of John Blacknall, a great benefactor to the town, and Jane his wife, both of whom died on the 21st August, 1625: there are kneeling effigies of both, and the decorations have been renewed: there is also a monument to Walker Dairell esq. recorder of Abingdon, 1628; and a small inscribed brass to the Bostock family, 1669: there are 250 sittings, all of which, except a few in the chancel, are free. The register dates from the year 1621. The duty of the church is in a great measure provided for by a Sunday lectureship, in the gift of Trinity College, Oxford, held by the Rev. Henry George Woods M.A. fellow of that college, the Rev. Edgar Summers B.D. master of the Grammar School, acting as his deputy; there is also a readership for daily prayers, held by the Rev. Harry Bingham McNair M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

The church of St Michael, a chapel of ease to St. Helen's and situated on the south side of the Albert park, is a structure of stone in the Decorated style, from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. and was erected, at a cost of £2,500, by a former vicar, the Rev. N. Dobson M.A. and consecrated 1867: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and open bell-cot on the western gable with 3 bells: the east window was inserted by subscription; a new window has just been placed in the chancel in memory of the late hon. Mrs. Bligh: the weekly offertory system is here adopted and all the services are choral: there are sittings for 500 persons, half of which are free: there is also a small iron church in the Oxford road, for the convenience of parishoners in that district: it will seat 100 persons, all seats being free.

The Catholic church, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Edmund of Canterbury and situated on the Oxford road, is a stone edifice in the Decorated Gothic style and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave with aisles, lady chapel, sacristy and cloister communicating with presbytery: the east window is stained: there are sittings for 300 persons: near to the church are schools, and adjoining it a convent of the Sisters of Mercy, the whole erected by Sir George Bowyer bart.: a cemetery is attached to the church on the north side.

The Wesleyan church (Trinity) in Albert Park, erected 1875, is an edifice in the Decorated style, from designs by the late Mr. Woodman, architect of Reading, and consists of chancel, nave, transept, south porch and a tower with broad spire at north-west angle: there are sittings for 900 persons; adjoining are schools and a chapel-keeper's house; the whole are built of local ragstone with Bath stone dressings and form three sides of a square, laid down in the centre with turf and enclosed by a low wall with open iron work alternating between stone piers.

The Baptist Chapel, in Ock street, is a building in a quaint Gothic style, lying back some distance from the street; the front exhibits four huge pillars supporting a heavy pediment: and extending therefrom to the entrance gates is a burial ground: a baptistery is attached to the chapel, the first foundation of which was in 1640, but its registers are not earlier than 1764: it has sittings for 800.

The Congregational chapel, in the Square, rebuilt some years since in the Italian style, has records from 1780: it will hold 800. There is also a chapel for Particular Baptists in Abbey street; and one for Plymouth Brethren in the Vineyard.

The Primitive Methodists have a chapel in Spring road with seats for 150.

The Cemetery in the Spring road consists of about six acres of land prettily laid out and planted; with two mortuary chapels of stone, in the Decorated style, and curator's residence.

The Free Grammar school was founded in 1563 by John Roysse, citizen and mercer of London, then in the 63rd year of his age for the education of 63 boys, natives of Abingdon; an ushership was subsequently founded by Thos. Teasdale, of Fitzharn's Farm in Abingdon and afterwards of Glymptou, Oxon, who was the first scholar admitted by the founder, and at his death he bequeathed a sum of £5,000 for the maintenance of 7 Fellows and 6 scholars in the University of Oxford; William Bennett, also a former scholar and Teasdale's nephew, left lands in Wiltshire for the education of 6 poor boys at the school, and these benefactions were augmented by the liberality of Robert Orpwood, John Kent in 1604, John Blacknall in 1625 and Richard Wrightwick, rector of East Ilsley, Berks; the united benefactions of Teasdale and Wrightwick, first offered to and declined by Balliol, were subsequently applied, under letters patent of James I. dated 29 June, 1624, to the reconstitution of the ancient hall of Broadgates, Oxford, into a college, by the name of "Pembroke College," from the Earl, at that time Chancellor of the University; the fellowships have for some time been abolished, and the scholarships, fixed by the Oxford University Act of 1854 at 5 in number, with a yearly value of £50 each, are now consolidated into 4 scholarships of the annual value of £75 and tenable for 4 years, with the power of extension to 5 years; there are also entrance and home scholarships: new buildings, comprising a school-room and class-rooms, dining hall, library, master's residence and dormitories for 40 boarders were erected in 1869 in Albert park, on the outskirts of the town, and to these have since been added 5 fine class-rooms, a master's common room, private studios for the use of elder pupils and spacious infirmaries: by a scheme of the Charity Commissioners, which came into operation in September, 1878, the school is placed under the control of 12 governers, of whom 2, the Mayor and Recorder of Abingdon, are ex officio, 6 representative and 4 coöptative; and the subjects of instruction laid down comprise all those taught at schools of the first grade; the senior boys are divided into a classical and a modern side the former preparing for the Universities and learned professions, and the latter for the services, mercantile life, and examinations not mainly classical; in the lower school great attention is paid to writing and arithmetic: attached to the premises are a covered playground and fives-courts: and close adjoining is a recreation ground of 15 acres: the founder, John Raysse, died in 1571, and was buried in the north aisle of St. Helen's, Abingdon, where his tomb still remains; in 1863, the tercentenary commemoration of the foundation was celebrated by a gathering of old scholars and friends, on which occasion the foundation stone of the Albert Memorial was also publicly laid: among the eminent men educated here may be named, Sir Thomas Smythe, clerk of the Parliaments and of the Council to Queen Elizabeth; Clement Banksdale, author of the Life of Grotius; Lord Chief Justice Holt; Sir Edward Turner, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer in 1671; Job Roy, a Presbyterian writer; Richard Greaves, author of the "Spiritual Quixote;" William Newcomb, archbishop of Armagh; Philip Morant M.A. the historian of Essex; Thos. Winkle, Bampton Lecturer in 1794; and Sir William Boxall R.A.; the school has also furnished to Pembroke College no fewer than 5 of its masters; and in the roll of head masters are the distinguished names of Thomas Godwyn B.D. the philologist, John Abbott D.D. father of Charles Abbott, first Lord Colchester; and John Lempriere D.D. author of the well known classical dictionary.

The Council Chamber and other municipal buildings are situated on the south side of the abbey gateway and include an apartment over the gateway itself, now or formerly let for masonic purposes: the lower stage of these buildings apparently formed a portion of the abbey, or of the ancient hospital of St. John the Baptist, and consists of a large and rather low room, lighted by wide perpendicular windows, and fitted up as a Borough Court; a substantial balustraded oaken staircase conducts from this to the Council Chamber, a long and somewhat narrow, but spacious hall, panelled all round with rich dark oak and entered by a tall pedimented doorway, adorned with massive foliated carving: the ceiling is flat and ornamented in stucco, and the floor has recently been laid down in parqueterie at considerable cost: a series of recessed windows lights both sides and on the walls are hung portraits of George III. and Queen Charlotte, painted by Gainsborough in 1794; Charles II. James II. Richard Mayott first and 3 times Mayor of Abingdon, 1556; John Roysse, founder of the Grammar School, 1563; Simon, Baron Harcourt, Lord Chancellor and formerly representative in Parliament for Abingdon, ob. 1727; Charles Abbott, first Lord Colchester, born at Abingdon in 1757, and Speaker of the House of Commons, presented in 1859 by the Rev. Herbert Randolph of Marcham; Sir Fredk. Thesiger, first Baron Chelmsford, Lord Chancellor and formerly M.P. for this borough, ob. 1859; Montague Bertie, Earl of Abingdon and High Steward of the borough and Admiral Sir Geo. Bowyer bart. presented by his grandson, the present Sir Geo. Bowyer bart. Oct 6th 1870; there is also a very fine painting of the Martyrdom of St. Sebastian by Vandyke and a portrait group by Hen. J. Brooks, of Abingdon, of the Corporation of Abingdon in 1877-8; at the west end is a noble pier glass, presented by the Earl of Abingdon, High Steward in 1823, during the mayoralty of James Cole esq. and adorned with the arms and coronet of the donor: adjoining is a smaller council chamber with other rooms, and in the basement below there are kitchens: immediately adjoining these buildings on the south is the old school-room, now used as the headquarters of the Abingdon company of Berks volunteer rifles; it is a long room, panelled on either side to a considerable height, and lighted by plain square windows above the panelling; the whole north end is also panelled and at the south end is a balustraded gallery; a door on the east side opens into the old dining hall, now serving as an armoury, and another at the north end leads to the porch, over which is inscribed the invitation, "Ingredere ut proficias"; the other sides of the quadrangle are occupied by the former head master's residence and the houses in Bridge street, between which and the municipal buildings is the old school gateway; this is built of stone, and was erected by the Earl of Abingdon in 1811; it consists of a single depressed arch, flanked by small square battlemented turrets, decorated with niches containing demi-figures on pedestals and surmounted by an elongated pediment with finial; the space above the arch bears the arms of the founder, with those of Lord Abingdon and the town and several inscriptions, and is finished by a string course and a quatrefoiled parapet.

The Corporation plate includes 2 silver maces of the reigns of James I. and Charles I. and one of a more ancient date, and the great mace of silver gilt also of the reign of Charles I.: the Mayor's chain originated with the gift in 1879 of an elaborately worked gold badge, bearing the arms of the town, by J. C. Clarke esq. M.P. for Abingdon since 1874, together with a link representing his year of office; other ex-mayors have since made similar additions, and the chain is now an exceedingly handsome and valuable official symbol, consisting of a series of links alternating with shields bearing the arms and names of the donors, pendent from which is the badge enclosing the Borough Arms in coloured enamel, surrounded by municipal emblems in gold, and surmounted by the shield of the donor: the Corporation also possesses a magnificent gold vase, presented, October 6, 1870, by Sir George Bowyer bart. D.L., J.P., D.C.L.: it occupies the site of the ancient and famous cross, erected probably in the reign of Henry VI. by the fraternity of the Holy Cross "as a monument of their name," repaired in 1605, and destroyed by the troops of General Waller, May 31, 1644, during the occupation of the town by the Parliamentary army; it was then the greatest ornament of the place, and is described by Richard Symonds, an officer in the King's army, who had quitted the town only a few days before its demolition, as an octagonal structure, surrounded with figures of kings, saints and apostles and prophets, in three stages and adorned with escutcheons of arms and heraldic metal vanes; a view of the Cross, which served as a model for the still more sumptuous one at Coventry, may be seen among the paintings on the river-side gable of Christ's Hospital in Abingdon.

The County Hall is a spacious and remarkable building, of ashlar and rough freestone, erected it is said, from designs by Inigo Jones, who died in 1652: it was restored in 1853 and is a lofty rectangular edifice of 2 stories, the lower consisting of an open arcaded market, above which is the Hall, a fine apartment, lighted on three sides by tall round-headed windows; a series of stilted pilasters of the Corinthian order surrounds the building, supporting a deeply projecting truncated roof, relieved by dormers and crowned by a balustrading, from within which rises a cupola, surmounted by a cross and a vane, on the north side is a square pinnacled tower, containing a wide oaken staircase, opening into the market space below.

The County Gaol a plain stone building, in Bridge street, erected in 1811, at an expense of £35,000, was sold on the transference of the assizes to Reading to J. C. Clarke esq. M.P. and is now in the occupation of Mr. Chas. Woodbridge, jun.: all prisoners are now sent to H.M. prisons at Reading and Oxford; by an Order in Council, dated September 14th 1868, it was directed that the assizes and quarter sessions should be held at Reading; the petty sessions for the division are still held at Abingdon.

The Drainage works and farm, erected and laid out in 1877, are situated some distance south of the town; and include a pumping station and adjacent offices; the drainage scheme was carried out in 1877-78, under the direction of Mr. Bailey Denton, at a cost of nearly £30,000, and water works have since been completed at a further outlay of £9,000: to the excellent system of drainage and the supply of water furnished by gravitation from Boar's Hill may be attributed the very low death rate in Abingdon, viz: from 12 to 14 per 1,000: the sewage farm is let to Mr. Pritchard, at £4 10s. per acre yearly; the sewage being raised and delivered on to the farm at the cost of the town.

The Borough Police Station is of local stone with Bath stone dressings, built a few years since, on the south-east side of the Abbey gateway: the local force consists of a superintendent, 1 serjeant and 4 men.

Christ's Hospital, situated on the west side of St. Helen's churchyard, dates its present foundation from a charter granted by Edward VI. May 18, 1553, to Sir John Mason, of Abingdon and others, bestowing upon the founders the lands belonging to the dissolved fraternity of the Holy Cross, established in or before the time of Richard II. together with other property, then of the total value of £65 11s. 10d.

on condition that the body thus incorporated should maintain the four bridges over the Ock and Thames, with their causeways, furnish a home and food for 14 poor persons and devote their surplus funds to other works of charity: the statutes formed by Sir John Mason, the first master, remained in force exactly 300 years: in 1859, by a new scheme approved by the Court of Chancery, the number of the almspeople was increased to 36, with two nurses and 18 additional houses built and endowed: the original buildings consisted of a long range of dwellings with an open timber cloister extending along the whole front; in the centre is a panelled hall, used for daily prayers, above which rises a quaint domed lantern, surmounted by a large vane: the hall contains a picture of the building of Abingdon bridge, given by Francis Little, one of the governors in 1607, portraits of Edward VI. Sir John Mason, John Roysse, founder of the grammar school and other benefactors; the original charter of the hospital is also preserved here, and there is a fine oak table, with curiously-carved legs: over the central porch and on the gables are curious paintings, representing the giving of alms, the Good Samaritan and other scripture subjects, as well as a portrait of Edward VI.; and the cloister walls are inscribed with various texts: on the south side of the churchyard are six almshouses of brick, with open arcades, rebuilt from the funds of the hospital in 1797; the almspeople receive 8s. and the two nurses 10s. 6d. each weekly, and there are beside three almshouses for married couples, each receiving 10s. weekly: the income of the charity now exceeds £3,000 a year and it supports a dispensary and provides for various educational and charitable objects: the mastership of the hospital, always regarded as an office of great trust and importance, is now held by J. C. Clarke esq. M.P.

Albert park, consisting of about 15 acres to the north of the town, well planted with trees and shrubs, was presented to the town by the governors of this charity in 1864; on the north side is a monument to the late Prince Consort, 48 feet high, erected by subscription in 1863-4, from a design by Mr. Gibbs, of Oxford: it consists of an octangular stone base from which rise clustered and banded columns supporting an enriched pedestal whereon is placed a statue of the prince, 7ft. in height, attired in the mantle and collar of the Order of the Thistle; at the foot of the pedestal are sejant lions supporting shields of the royal arms and those of the prince, together with the arms of the borough, Christ's Hospital, and the Abbey.

The hospital of St. John the Baptist, originally erected without the Abbey gate, against St. Nicholas church, is said by Leland to have been founded by one of the abbots: in 1801 it was removed by the corporation to new buildings situated in the vineyard; these are of brick and surround three sides of an open courtyard; to the new hospital Bernard Bedwell esq. of London was a liberal contributor, and in 1826 E. Beasley added £600 to its endowments: the inmates, six in number, receive about 5s. per week; the ancient hospital now forms part of the municipal buildings.

Twitty's hospital, situate on the north side of the churchyard, was erected in 1707 from a sum of £1,700 given by Charles Twitty, and further endowed with £600 in 1825 by E. Beasley, J. Bedwell, Samuel Cripps and many other donors, for the maintenance of three men, three women and one nurse; it is under the management of the vicar and churchwardens and the inmates receive about 4s. each weekly and clothing.

In 1823 F. Klein bequeathed £1,000 for the poor of Abingdon, now producing £30 19s. 6d. yearly, which is distributed in money: there are other charities amounting to £427 17s. yearly for distribution in money and kind and £112 for apprenticing.

Beside the above charities there are almshouses in Ock street, built by the late B. Tomkins esq. for ten persons who are Dissenters; these houses are built of brick and form three sides of an elongated quadrangle opening to the streets by iron gates, and are endowed with land and money invested in New £3 Per Cents. producing £173 9s. 3d.

Wrigglesworth charity, for the payment of a lecturer and the relief of the poor, is now undergoing revision at the hands of the Court of Chancery.

The Liberal hall in Ock street, formerly the Wesleyan chapel, is a building of stone, in the Early English Gothic style, erected about 1845 from a design by Mr. Wilson of Bath; the front is lighted by a triple lancet window of good design and is flanked by open turrets with short stone spires

The Beaconsfield Working Men's Conservative club, in Ock street, occupies part of the premises formerly used by the Literary Institute: the front is adorned with portraits in relief of the Earl of Beaconsfield, the Marquess of Salisbury and Sir Stafford Northcote, and the interior is very conveniently arranged with commodious rooms for reading, chess and draughts and smoking; the club was formally opened on Whit Monday, May 29th, 1882, by the president, J. Tomkins esq.; the rooms are well supplied with the current newspapers and periodicals and handsome contributions of books have been made to the library by the Marquess of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J B. Beresford-Hope, Miss Hope, Henry Hucks Gibbs esq. Mrs. Gibbs and others. There are now upwards of 400 members; hon sec. Mr. George Harris.

An amateur regatta is usually held here in July, under the auspices of the Abingdon Rowing club.

John Leland, whose itinerary was published in 1549, speaks of Abingdon as distinguished for its manufacture of cloth, indeed, says he, it "standith by clothing," and this reputation, in a modified form, is still fully maintained, the clothing manufactory of Messrs. Clarke, Son and Co. being probably the largest of the kind in the kingdom and employing hundreds of workpeople both in the town and surrounding neighbourhood: a considerable trade was also formerly carried on in sailcloth and sacking, still to some extent maintained, and there are also breweries, engineering works, flour mills and maltings.

A pitched market is held here every Monday, which is well attended; fairs are held on the first Monday in Lent, May 6th, June 20th; lamb fairs, August 5th, September 19th, December 11th; wool fairs, first Monday in July; hiring fair, Monday before old Michaelmas day; all for cattle except the last, which is for hiring servants and pleasure; they are held in the principal streets of the town.

The Volunteer Fire Brigade was established in 1871, and is supported by voluntary contributions; the brigade consists of about twenty members with head quarters at the Old Grammar schoolyard; there are two manual engines and a fire escape, with the usual appliances.

The Borough Waterworks, situated at Wootton, 3 miles distant, have an underground reservoir, from which, by the aid of a syphon half a mile in length, water is obtained to a depth of 10 feet below the outlet of the reservoir and supplied to the consumers by meter; numerous hydrants are fixed at various points in the town in such a manner as to reach with hose any part of the town without the aid of a fire engine.

On the north side of Ock street, near Tomkins' almshouses, is a well within a brick recess, enclosed by pilasters supporting a pediment, and erected by Richard Eley in 1673; the old Conduit house, in which rises the spring from which it is supplied, stands in Albert Park.

The population within the municipal borough in 1881 was 5,662 and in the parliamentary 6,608; the population of the parishes of St. Helen and St. Nicholas in 1881 was—St. Helen, 6,410; St. Nicholas, 699; the former includes the townships of SANDFORD and SHIPPON, and the hamlets of CHOLSALL and NORTHCOURT, which are within the limits of the borough; the area of St. Helen parish is 3,184 acres, and of St. Nicholas 177; respective rateable values, £20,862 and £3,227.

Parish Clerks, A. Miles, St. Helen's; William Gerring, St. Nicholas.

ALDERMASTON is a pleasant village and parish on the Hants border, with station on the Hungerford and Devizes branch of the Great Western railway, 46 miles by rail and 49 by road from London, 10 south-west from Reading, 9 south-east from Newbury, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford: in Domesday this place is given as "Ældremanestone" and "Heldremanestune." The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure standing in the park of Aldermaston Court, and consists of chancel, nave, south chapel and a western tower, with spire, containing 5 bells and a clock: the east window of the chancel is Early English, having three lancets under one arch; most of the other windows are Decorated; in the south chapel is a Transition Norman arch and a Decorated piscina; the tower is of the same period, with a Norman doorway built in at the west end: the pulpit is of finely carved oak; in the chancel is an altar-tomb of alabaster, with recumbent figures of Sir George Forster, who died in 1526, and his wife Elizabeth, heiress of the De la Mares; around the sides, under canopies, are small figures of 11 sons in armour and 8 daughters in angular head dresses; there are also monuments to Ralph Congreve esq. Richard Congreve, the dramatist, and others, and a shield of the ancient family of Achard: this church was a chapelry of the Priory of Monks Sherborne, near Basingstoke. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is an unendowed vicarage, gross yearly income £150, in the gift of Daniel Higford Davall Burr esq. and held since 1881 by the Rev. James Wescomb Douglas B.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge. There are almshouses for four widows, built in 1706, by the Rev. Robert Dixon formerly minister here, but without endowment; the charities for church purposes amount to £7 17s. 6d. yearly. About a mile from the village is Aldermaston Wharf, on the river Kennet and Kennet and Avon canal, where a considerable business is done in timber and coals; there is also an extensive brewery and malting establishment, the property of Messrs. Strange and Sons. Near the village is Aldermaston Court, a modern mansion in the Tudor-Elizabethan style, rebuilt by P. Hardwick esq. architect, in 1856, after partial destruction by fire, and standing on an eminence in a park of 1,000 acres of finely varied scenery, with groves of oak, hawthorn and yew: the clock tower may be seen at many miles' distance: this is the seat of Daniel Higford Davall Burr esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 3,699 acres; rateable value £4,498; and the population in 1871 was 583.

ALDWORTH is a village and parish 12 miles north-west from Reading, 3 west from Goring station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Compton, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Reading and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a building of mixed styles, chiefly Decorated, and consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle and tower, the north and south windows and a piscina in the chancel being the earliest examples in the church of that period, while the lately removed chancel screen, and some bench ends are of late Perpendicular work: this church is well known as containing the famous tombs of the De la Beches, who were resident in this parish in the fourteenth century; these consist of eight altar-tombs bearing nine recumbent effigies, two being ladies, and th rest, with one exception, of knights in armour, six of these lying under richly foliated ogee arches: the figures, together with the slabs on which they repose, are each carved out of a single block of stone, excepting that in the middle of the church, which is in three pieces; the large figure to the east, in the north wall, represents the Godfrey de Beche, of Domesday Book, founder of the family, and is 7 feet 2 inches in length; the effigy of latest date is that of the lady under the central arcade at the east end, probably representing Lady Isabella de la Beche, with her husband, Sir John de Beche, ob. 1329; the single figure in the middle of the church is that of Sir Nicholas de la Beche, Constable of the Tower, and tutor to the Black Prince, ob. 1346; the effigies have, unfortunately, received much wilful injury, and on one, which has lost both hands and feet, may be seen the dates 1511, 1561, 1641, and 1706; they were celebrated even in the time of Queen Elizabeth, who herself came hither from Ewelme to inspect them; the De la Beche family became extinct in the direct male line, probably by the death of Edmund de la Beche, archdeacon of Berks, in 1371. The church has lately been restored under the direction of Mr. J. P. St. Aubyn: in the churchyard is a very ancient yew tree measuring nine yards round the trunk and supposed to be older than the church. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £450, with residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge, and held since 1858 by the Rev. Francis Llewelyn Lloyd B.D. formerly fellow of that college. Beche Castle, the ancient residence of the De la Beches, was situated a short distance south-east of the church: its site is now occupied by a farm house, but numbers of encaustic tiles have been found on the spot, and in 1871 a silver seal was met with inscribed "* S' Isabelle de la Beche," and engraved with a trefoil cusped and roseated like the south canopies in the church, within which are three shields of arms. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. J. B. Monck esq. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is chalk and clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots; the area is 1,960 acres; rateable value £1,750; the population in 1881 was 275.

APPLEFORD is a village and parochial chapelry of Sutton Courtney, 3 miles south-east from Abingdon, 3 from Culham station, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, separated from Oxfordshire by the river Isis, which is here crossed by the Great Western railway. The chapel is ancient and is a small plain edifice, consisting of chancel, nave, porch and wooden tower with 3 bells. The living is a chapelry annexed to the vicarage of Sutton Courtney, joint yearly value £148, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1856 by the Rev. Richard John Howard Rice M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, who resides at Sutton Courtney. Mr. Edmond Bradstock gave a messuage and 36 acres of land in perpetuity to found a Free school; the income is now applied in support of the National schools here and at Sutton Courtney: there are charities of £9 yearly for distribution. Charles Eyston esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is green sand and gravel; subsoil, chiefly gravel; the crops are wheat, barley and roots; the area is 829 acres; rateable value £2,922; the population in 1881 was 346.

APPLETON is a parish in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford, situated about 5 miles north-west from Abingdon and 6 south-west from Oxford, bounded on the west by the Isis which separates it from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Lawrence is a plain structure with chancel, nave, square embattled tower and a fine peal of 10 bells; it contains several memorials to the families of the present and former lords of the manor. The register dates from the year 1569. The living is a rectory, yearly value £307, with residence, in the gift of the President and fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held since 1878 by the Rev. William Moore M.A. formerly fellow of that college. There are charities connected with the parish, producing about £50 a year for church and poor and 3 acres for providing fuel. The Manor House is supposed to have been built in the reign of Henry II.; it was formerly surrounded by a moat, part of which has been filled up. The manor of Appleton was successively in the possession of the families of Fitz Warine, Caston, Petyt and Fettyplace: it was purchased of the Hanleys by an ancestor of Robert Southby esq. who is now lord: the manor house is occupied by John Walker Wearing esq. The principal landowners are Robert Southby esq. and St. John's College, Oxford. The soil is loam and clay; the chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips; the area, including the township of Eaton, is 1,991 acres; rateable value £2,934; the population in 1881 was 573. EATON township is 1 mile north.

ASCOT HEATH is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1865 out of the civil parishes of Sunninghill and Winkfield, and includes ASCOT SIDE: it is in the hundred of Ripplesmere, union and county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, and contains several fashionable villa residences and two good hotels, and is noted for the races which are held here. The South Western branch railway to Reading has a station near the Grand Stand, 28 miles from London and 7 south-west from Windsor. The church of All Saints, erected in 1864, is a brick building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles and bell-turret, with a painted roof and mural decorations; there are some stained windows. The register dates from the year 1865. The living is a rectory, yearly value £110 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1864 by the Rev. Beauchamp Kerr Warren Pearse M.A. of University College, Oxford. The London and Ascot Convalescent Hospital for convalescents and incurables, under the patronage of H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, is an extensive building situated between Winkfield Row and Ascot Heath, built in 1850 by and belonging to the Sisters of the Devonport Society, but supported in part by subscriptions and payments for patients: it has room for about 100 patients; the site is in very bracing air, as well as picturesque; the original plan was to provide for several hundred patients of both sexes, but it has been limited by want of funds. Patients are received without any reference to their creed, though a chaplain, licensed by the Bishop, attends to the spiritual wants of patients; a medical officer is appointed to the hospital; the sum of £10,000 was expended by the Society on its present building, the site included. Ascot Heath House, the seat of Miss Delane, is a modern brick mansion situated in a firwood. Ascot Wood is the seat of Lady Shaw-Lefevre; there are also many other newly-erected mansions in this parish. Ascot racecourse is situated in the parish; the races take place in June and are usually honoured by the presence of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and others of the Royal Family; the grand stand is a building of considerable beauty, with front and back porticoes, an elegant staircase, with extensive drawing and refreshment rooms and offices; it was built by subscription; the ground for the races was appropriated by Act of Parliament for the purpose. The extensive nursery grounds called the Royal Nursery, belonging to Mr. Joseph Ashby, trading as John Standish and Co. are situated here, and the Royal Kennels, where her Majesty's buckhounds are kept. The principal landowners are her Majesty the Queen and General Charles Crutchley. The population in 1871 was 1,357, and in 1881 was 1,699.

ASHBURY is a parish in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles south-by-east from Shrivenham station on the Great Western railway, 8½ miles from Faringdon and 21 from Newbury; it is the extreme parish on the north-west of the county near Wiltshire, with the hamlet of Kingstone Winslow and the tithings of Odstone and Idstone annexed. The church of St. Mary is an ancient cruciform structure, consisting of chancel, nave, with aisles separated by arcades of 4 arches each, a north porch and massive pinnacled western tower containing 6 bells: an old Norman door was re-opened in the south aisle at the restoration of the church in 1872: the chancel, which was restored by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, is principally Early English work: the aisles and north porch Perpendicular: the latter has a good groined roof, over which is a parvise; a few of the windows are filled with Decorated tracery: in the chancel are brasses with effigies, one bearing date 1440, to the Rev. William Skelton, formerly rector of this parish, and another to John de Walden esq. dated 1448: a stained window in the south transept was erected in 1873 to the Rev. William Chambers B.D.; ob. 1860; 36 years vicar. The impropriate rectory belongs to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The register dates from 1653, but there is an old parish book which dates from 1602. The ancient name of the benefice was Ashbury St. Mary-cum-Chapelwick, and there was formerly a chapel (nothing of which remains) at the northern boundary of the parish. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £112, augmented by a grant from Magdalen College, Oxford, to about £400, with residence, in the gift of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held since 1860 by the Rev. Henry Miller M.A. late fellow of that college. There is a small Primitive Methodist chapel in the village and a Baptist chapel at Kingstone. The charities are £10 yearly, two-thirds of which go to the school and the remainder for coal. It is, perhaps, worthy of remark that with the Rev. Thomas Stock, curate of this parish, originated in 1777 the Sunday school system of instruction, he having commenced it by collecting together the children of the poor in the chancel; in 1778 he went from Ashbury to Gloucester, where he became acquainted with Mr. Raikes, who rendered the most important aid in promoting and establishing these charitable institutions, and which may be regarded as having prepared the way for the National system of education. Here is a Public Reading-room and Library, established in 1874. In the parish, adjoining Ashdown Park, is a valley containing a large number of huge stones, called, "Sarsden Stones," probably the indurated remains of a tertiary formation formerly overlying the chalk. A spot, now marked by a clump of trees or circular plantation, contains what is considered to be a British remain, called "Wayland Smith," situated about a mile eastward of the village. At one time several large Sarsden stones formed a circle, but some of them have been broken up for the repair of the roads; in what was the centre are now to be seen three of the largest, with a fourth laid on the top, after the manner of the British cromlechs. A singular tradition of an invisible blacksmith who shod any horse left within the enclosure, provided a piece of money was left, has been perpetuated by Sir William Scott in his novel of "Kenilworth," and has invested the spot with considerable interest and renders it a favourite resort of the antiquary and the tourist On the downs in this parish, there is reason to believe, was fought thegreat battle between the Saxons and the Danes,called the battle of Ashdown, in which the latter were totally defeated. Ashdown Park, the seat of the Earl of Craven, is 103 acres in extent and well-wooded, 2½ miles south, the mansion, erected by Webbe, a pupil of Inigo Jones, is an old stone building. The manor of Ashbury was given by King Edred to the monastery of Glastonbury; after the Dissolution it was granted by Henry VIII. to the family of Essex, of whom it was purchased in 1625 by Sir William Craven, ancestor of the Earls of Craven. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chalk and clay; subsoil, rubble and clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley, turnips and clover. The area of the entire parish is 5,520 acres; rateable value £7,737; and the population in 1881 was 684: the population of the township of Ashbury, including Ashdown Park, 388.

KINGSTONE WINSLOW is a hamlet half a mile north-east. The population in 1881 was 138.

ODSTONE tithing is one mile north-east. The population in 1881 was 34.

IDSTONE is a tithing three-quarters of a mile south-west. The population in 1881 was 124.

ASTON TIRROLD, in Domesday "Estone," is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, 4 miles south-west from Wallingford, 3 west from Moulsford station on the Great Western railway, 3 miles east from Upton station on the Didcot and Newbury railway, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is a building of flint with stone dressings, and appears to have been at first an Early English work; it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south transept and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells; both rood-loft doors remain, but the stairs are walled up: a modern screen stretches across the tower arch, converting the lower stage into a vestry; the south door has a round head, resting on simple jambs, with a moulded fillet; the porch is Decorated, and was formerly open timbered, but has been plastered up; outside the north aisle is an ancient doorway, with plain hollowed corbels and walled up within it, a fine stone coffin lid, bearing an elegant, but partially mutilated foliaged cross; the priests' door has graceful Early English shafts with foliaged caps; the windows on the south and west of the transept are Decorated, on the east side are two cusped lancets; the west window is late Perpendicular; the east window, Decorated, with ogee head, is partially filled with stained glass in memory of Mark Robert Taylor esq. of Aston and Blewbury (1868), who lies buried with his wife (1872) on the south side of the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1720. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift of the President and fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held since 1845 by the Rev. Sir John Leigh Hoskyns bart. M.A. late fellow of that college, hon. canon of Christ Church, Oxford, and rural dean. There is here a Presbyterian chapel, originally founded for an Independent Congregation in 1670; the existing structure is of some antiquity, and has an attached cemetery, well kept and pleasantly shaded with trees; the baptismal records are said to date from 1738. The charities amount to £12 annually, of which £2 10s. from Rigby and Smith's charity, is given in money to the National school, £4 10s. distributed in bread and clothing, and £5 given to the poor in money. Thomas Wellingham Fuller esq. who is lord of the manor, George Frederick Fuller and Edward Fairthorne are chief landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, chalk. The land immediately round the village is celebrated for its apple and cherry orchards. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,674 acres; rateable value, £2,060; the population in 1881 was 310.

ASTON UPTHORPE, situated within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, and formerly a chapelry of the parish of Blewbury, was, in 1862, united to Upton as a separate ecclesiastical parish; it is 4 miles south-west from Wallingford and 3 miles west from Upton station on the Didcot aud Newbury railway, in the union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a plain edifice of great antiquity, consisting of chancel and nave and a wooden belfry with short lead-covered spire on the western gable, containing 2 bells: the church was originally a Norman structure, and the south door with plain semi-circular head remains, and there is a Norman window on the south side, and a blocked doorway on the north, of the same date; the old timber and plaster roof of the nave is also existing, and an ancient timber-framed Decorated porch covered with ivy: the west window is Perpendicular, the font rude and massive Norman work; the church was restored, and the chancel rebuilt of flint with stone dressings, in 1859-60, and the church reopened in April, 1860; it will seat 100 persons; in the chancel are several tablets to the Slade family. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is a vicarage, united with Upton, tithes commuted at £370 4s. 1d. joint net yearly value £340, with 2 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1862 by the Rev. Richard Hooper M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, and surrogate, who resides at Upton. Bishop Gibson and some modern writers following him have fixed upon this place as the scene of the battle of Æcesdun A.D. 871, between Alfred and the Danes, and perhaps the existence of the fortified eminence lying west of it, and called "Blewburton" (Blesbyrigdun), affords support to this view; tradition, however, has always fixed the scene of the fight at Ashdown, near Lambourn, but the matter is still unsettled and some authorities are of opinion that the term "Æcesdun" refers not to a particular spot, but to a range of these downs extending for some distance; it may be added in connection with this place that one point of the hills rising immediately to the south of it, is still known as "King's Standing," and a tradition lingers that after the victory Alfred came down hither and gave thanks in an ancient church standing on the same site as the present church of All Saints. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor; Robert Henry Valpy esq. is chief landowner. The soil is loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,320 acres; rateable value £1,322; the population in 1881 was 168.

AVINGTON is a parish in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Kennet, about 2½ miles east from Hungerford and 2 west from the Kintbury station. The Kennet and Avon canal borders on the south. The church, a very good example of the Norman style, believed to have been dedicated to SS. Mark and Luke, from symbols of those saints in the sanctuary, dates from the eleventh century, and consists of chancel and nave, with an Early English bell-turret at the western end; the whole structure forms an elongated parallelogram, on a scant foundation, the four walls enclosing an area 75 ft. long by 15ft. broad, or five widths in length, and of these five square spaces one forms the sanctuary, one the choir and three the nave, the sanctuary is divided from the choir by pilasters, intended to sustain a semi-circular arch, which seems never to have been constructed: the chancel is separated from the nave by an arch of 15 feet span, richly ornamented with roses and dog-tooth and zigzag mouldings and grotesque heads: the centre of the arch has undergone a singular depression, probably owing to the lateral pressure of the arch itself and the absence of any internal pier or external buttress as well as to the incomplete state of the originally projected stone vaulting of the chancel roof, the ribbed groins of which are ornamented with beak-heads and flowers: the south door of the nave is a good example of a shafted Norman arch, with bead and dog-tooth ornaments, but was much mutilated in the 16th century by the erection of a porch by Richard Choke, then lord of the manor, about 1574: the font is circular with cable moulding round its upper edge and thirteen rudely sculptured figures, most of them in ecclesiastical vestments: two are archbishops in palls—one seated and one in attitude of benediction; two are bishops in copes—one with crosier and one with pastoral staff; two are priests in albs—one with hands crossed in prayer and one in the embrace of the fiend; two are priests giving each other the kiss of peace; two are ecclesiastical lawyers in copes—one with brief in hand and one with a Lord Chancellor's wig; the foul fiend, with horns and cloven feet, is twice repeated; and the thirteenth is indescribable, except as probably representing Boethius, or some other decollated saint, with his head in his own hands: behind the font stands an ancient slab, with a striking but rudely-incised Calvary cross upon its upper half: the only monuments of importance in the church are three slabs on the chancel floor and an escutcheon suspended in the porch, all memorials of the Berkshire family of James, represented by Sir Walter Charles James bart. the neighbouring estate of Denford having been the residence of this family from the time of the first Tudor sovereign, during whose reign its then possessor, Lord Lovel, was attainted of high treason, down to the commencement of the present century: all the windows and, with one or two exceptions, every other opening in the walls is semi-circular; the chancel has eight windows, the nave five, and there is a square aumbry, a piscina and a beautiful sedile: all the semi-circular arches, save that of the south doorway, are faced internally with freestone, the windows being deeply splayed. The register dates from the year 1725; the earlier records are supposed to have been destroyed by fire. The benefice is a rectory, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Sir Francis Burdett bart. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Walter Francis Lanfear M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. This manor, in the time of Edward the Confessor, belonged to a family named Gunner or Gonnere; immediately after the Conquest, to Richard Puingeant (Anglo-Saxonicé Bigge), the supposed founder of the church; then to the Longespees, Earls of Salisbury, who appear to have held it from the reign of Henry II.; at a later period it was in the families of Coventry and Choke; Richard Choke married the heiress of the Coventrys of Avington; his grandson Francis was knighted in 1643; latterly it was in the possession of the Jones family, of Ramsbury Manor, in succession from whom it now belongs to Sir Francis Burdett bart. who is also the sole landowner. The soil is light chalk; subsoil, gravelly chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The parish comprises about 1,143 acres, in two farms; rateable value, £926; the population in 1881 was 98.

BARKHAM is a parish and village 2 miles south-west from Wokingham and 7 south-east from Reading, in the hundred of Charlton: county court district of Reading, union of Wokingham, rural deanery of Reading, archdeconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James was rebuilt in 1862 in the Early English style; it is of flint with Bath stone dressings, and consists of chancel and nave with a tower containing 4 bells and spire. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of John Walter esq. M.P. and held by the Rev. Arthur Roberts M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The children attend the Arborfield school. Allwright's charity of £3 yearly is for bread. The poor allotments have been purchased by John Walter esq. M.P. for between £400 and £500 and the money invested in the £3 per Cent. Consols, and the interest is expended in coal for the benefit of the poor. The Manor House, a red brick mansion, with pleasant grounds and shrubberies, is the residence of Major-General William Rickman. John Leveson-Gower esq. who is lord of the manor and John Walter esq. M.P. are the chief landowners. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, London clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,358 acres; rateable value, £2,037; the population in 1881 was 217.

BASILDON is a village and parish 8 miles north-west from Reading in the hundred of Moreton, union of Bradfield county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is pleasantly situated on the river Thames which is here crossed by a bridge of four arches, on the line of the Great Western railway, the erection of which cost £25,000; the nearest station is at Goring, 2¾ miles. The church of St. Bartholomew is supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward II.; it consists of chancel and nave, with a square tower, 4 bells and a Gothic porch; it contains some handsome monuments to Sir Francis Sykes bart. and family, formerly residents here; the eastern window is stained; in 1878 the church was completely restored. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the alternate gift of the Rev. Edward John Sykes and Simeon's trustees and held since 1859 by the Rev. Edward John Sykes M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. The poor's land of 8 acres produces £16 yearly. In excavating for the railway a beautiful tesselated Roman pavement was discovered a few inches below the surface, and on an elevated spot not far from the Thames coins of Vespasian, in good preservation, domestic utensils and several human skeletons, with a Roman sword lying near them, were found. The Grotto, a pretty residence, is the seat of Arthur Smith esq. J.P. Near the village is Basildon House, formerly the seat of Sir Francis Sykes bart. but now the property and in the occupation of Charles Morrison esq.; the mansion is modern, with wings and portico with Corinthian pillars: the park contains 400 acres and is enclosed within a brick wall. Charles Morrison esq. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is chalk and loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,083 acres; rateable value, £10,025; and the population in 1881 was 651.

BAULKING (anciently BETHELKING) is a scattered village and parish formerly a hamlet in Uffington parish, in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, Vale of White Horse rural deanery, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles south from Faringdon, 12 from Abingdon and 18 from Oxford; the Uffington Junction railway station on the Great Western main line to Bristol is situated in this parish, about half a mile west of the village, from which there is a branch to Faringdon. The river Ock separates this parish from Shellingford and the Wilts and Berks canal is half a mile distant. The church of St. Nicholas is a small ancient structure, in the Early English style, comprising chancel, nave and turret at the west end. The registers date from the year 1846, previous to which they were kept at the mother church at Uffington. The living is a vicarage united with Woolstone, joint yearly value £65 with residence, in the gift of Charles Eyre esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Edmond W. St. Maur Macphail M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford: a vicarage house was erected in 1864. The trustees of the late Edwin Martin-Atkins esq. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Messrs. Reade and Matthews. The soil is principally clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are the usual cereals. The area is 1,367 acres; rateable value, £5,510; and the population in 1881 was 169.

BEARWOOD is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1846, consisting of the townships or liberties of NEWLAND, part of WINNERSH, and SINDLESHAM forming part of the civil parish of Hurst; in Wokingham union, Reading county court district, Berks archdeaconry, rural deanery of Sonning, Oxford diocese; Bearwood is 2 miles west from the Wokingham railway station and 6 south-east from Reading. The church of St. Catharine is a handsome stone Gothic building, consisting of chancel, nave and tower, built and endowed about the year 1845 at the expense of John Walter esq. M.P. and his father: it contains a fine organ, the gift of T. R. Harman esq. of Sindlesham House, and handsome memorial and other stained windows: the church stands on rising ground at the top of the village of Sindlesham: the churchyard is laid out with great taste and kept in the most perfect order; on the south side is the family vault belonging to Mr. Walter. The register dates from the year 1845. The living is a rectory, yearly value £180 with good residence and 6 acres of land, in the gift of John Walter esq. and held since 1867 by the Rev. Dolben Paul M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Bearwood, the seat of John Walter esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. for the county of Berks, was formerly an outlying part of Windsor Forest, and still retains much of its primitive wildness of character; its name is supposed to be derived from the Saxon word here, signifying beech, which is still the predominant tree in the wood: hollies and junipers flourish here in great perfection, and the gardens abound with rhododendrons and other American plants; most varieties of the fir tribe, including a large number of Cedrus Deodara, are to be found here; but the chief attraction is the magnificent lake, which covers a space of 80 acres and contains several islands; this fine sheet of water yields to none in the county but Virginia Water in point of size, and perhaps not even to that in beauty; below the lake-head are the kitchen garden, the dairy farm and other buildings: the waste water of the lake is applied to turning a large water wheel, which drives a saw mill and other machinery. The mansion, which was rebuilt in the Elizabethan style between 1865 and 1869, is a stately edifice of red brick with dressings of Mansfield stone; it contains a suite of fine reception rooms, including a picture gallery of 70 ft. by 24 ft. containing the collection of Dutch and Flemish pictures well known to connoisseurs; it was built under the immediate superintendence of the proprietor assisted by his clerk of works, without the intervention of a contractor, and it is one of the finest specimens of brick and masonry which this country has produced.

Sindlesham House, pleasantly situated a short distance from the road, is the residence of T. R. Harman esq. The principal landowners are John Walter esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. T. R. Harman, John Simmonds and James Simmonds and T. C. Garth esqrs. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, London clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is about 3,000 acres; and the population in 1881 was about 876.

NEWLAND is 1½ miles south-west.

SINDLESHAM, ½ mile north, which has been almost entirely rebuilt by the present proprietor, consists of about 60 cottages, an inn and the school. Here is a Baptist chapel.

BEECH HILL is a tithing and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1869 out of the Berkshire portion of Stratfieldsaye parish, Hampshire, 2 miles east from Stratfield Mortimer railway station, 7 south from Reading and 10 north from Basingstoke, in the union of Bradfield and county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is situated on the river Loddon. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of brick and flint, built in 1867 in the English style of the fourteenth century; it has a chancel, nave, north aisle, wooden belfry with 3 bells, porch, organ, seven stained windows and font of various marbles. The register dates from the year 1868. The living is a vicarage, £180 yearly tithe rent-charge with 1½ acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Miss Forbes and held since 1869 by the Rev. Charles Stephen Turner M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. There is a chapel for Baptists with endowed stipend. The common lands have been enclosed. The priory of St. Leonard on the Loddon retains no features older than 1648. Beech Hill House, the seat of Henry Lannoy Hunter esq. J.P. is a large plain brick building. This is a parcel of the manor of Stratfieldsaye, of which the Duke of Wellington is lord. The principal landowners are the Duke of Wellington, H. L. Hunter esq. Major Allfrey and the provost and fellows of Eton College. The soil is clay; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, beans and grass. The area is 915 acres; the population in 1881 was 277.

BEEDON is a village and parish 7 miles north from Newbury and 3 south from East Ilsley, in the hundred of Faircross, county court district of Newbury, union of Wantage, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Nicholas, formerly a chapel to Farnborough, is a small building in the Transition Norman style and consists of chancel and nave, with a bell cot: the east end has three Transition Norman windows, with the tooth ornament and banded shafts between the lights: the chancel arch is of the same date, with corbel shafts, as is also the north doorway; the south doorway is Early English: the church was re-opened after complete restoration on the 22nd of July 1882: the chancel was undertaken entirely at the expense of Col. Sir Robert and Lady Loyd-Lindsay: the nave is due principally to the exertions of the vicar and his friends, assisted by Col. Sir Robert Loyd-Lindsay: Mr. Edwin Dolby, of Abingdon, was the architect. The register dates from the year 1732. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Walter Edward Buckland M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. In 1877-8 a quantity of Roman antiquities, comprising fragments of Samian, Durobrivian and other fictile ware, together with bones and skulls of the short-horned ox, goat and red deer and a variety of other remains belonging to the Romano-British period were discovered here by Mr. Walter Money F.S.A. of Newbury. Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is various, principally clay and chalk mixed; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,004 acres, including woods; rateable value, £1,822; the population in 1881 was 323.

STANMORE is a hamlet 1¾ miles north-west; in April, 1815, a large bell-shaped barrow, here called by the villagers "Burrow-hill," was opened by the late Charles E. Long esq. then resident at Langley Hall; and at the depth of about 10 feet, some remains of burnt bones, with fragments of a funereal urn were met with, below which the floor of the barrow was reached and found to be pierced by seven perpendicular holes, about a foot deep, cut in the solid chalk and each containing a deposit of charred wood.

BEENHAM VALLENCE is a parish in the hundred of Reading, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles west-south-west from Reading and 8 east from Newbury. The Aldermaston station on the Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway is at the south-west end of this parish, 45 miles from London. The church of St. Mary is an ancient fabric of Early English architecture and formerly belonged to the monastery of Reading; it comprises chancel, nave, aisles, porch and tower and contains an organ presented by the last vicar; the church was struck by lightning and partly burnt in the year 1794; it was last repaired and restored in 1859: here is a monument to Stackhouse, who wrote "The History of the Bible." The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £230 with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Bushnell and held since 1855 by the Rev. Thomas Hext Bushnell M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel. Near the village is Beenham House, the property of Lieut.-General Samuel A. Dickson, who is lord of the manor; it is a large square brick building facing the Bath road, situate in a park of about 60 acres and is at present occupied by Henry Waring esq. The principal landowners are Lieut.-General Dickson and W. H. H. Hartley esq. The soil is clay and loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,890 acres; rateable value, £3,277; the population in 1881 was 517.

Parish Clerk, Joseph Hatto.

BESSELSLEIGH is a parish in the hundred of Hormer, union and county court district of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford, 4½ miles north-west from Abingdon and 5½ south-west from Oxford, on the road from Faringdon to Oxford. The church of St. Lawrence is a small Gothic structure with chancel, nave and belfry; it contains an ancient monument to Sir John Lenthall knt. and bart.: the church was restored and beautified by Speaker Lenthall in 1637. The register dates from the year 1689. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of Edmund Kyffin Lenthall esq. and held by the Rev. Hugo Daniel Harper D.D. principal of Jesus College, Oxford. The charities are £2 15s. yearly. The old Manor house, formerly the residence of Speaker Lenthall, stood near to the west end of the church: his son, Sir John Lenthall, governor of Windsor Castle, a colonel in the Parliamentary army and M.P. for Gloucester and Abingdon, died November, 1682, and was buried in the chancel of the church. Oliver Cromwell is said to have been a frequent visitor here, but this statement seems to rest on tradition only. Besselsleigh Manor, the seat of Edmund Kyffin Lenthall esq. J.P. is a handsome modern mansion in the Tudor style, built of white stone with Bath stone dressings. The parish is mostly the property of Edmund Kyffin Lenthall esq. who is lord of the manor. The soil is loamy sand; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 893 acres; rateable value, £1,086; and the population in 1881 was 105.

Parish Clerk, John Bullock.

BINFIELD is a scattered village and parish 2½ miles from the Bracknell station of the London and South Western railway, 3½ north-east from Wokingham and 9½ east from Windsor, in the hundred of Cookham, union of East-hampstead, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a stone structure in the Third Pointed style, and was probably built in the latter part of the reign of Edward III.: in the chancel is a fine brass of Water de Annefordhe, a former rector, of the date of 1335: a north aisle was added by subscription and the church re-seated in 1848: in 1859 a north chancel-aisle was also added by the late Mrs. Young, at the same time the chancel was restored at the expense of the late rector, the Rev. James Randall and a vestry built and other alterations made in the church at the expense of various parishioners; it has a fine old square tower: the east window is stained; there are two other stained windows in the chancel in memory of the family of the late rector; there is likewise a memorial window in the east end of the south aisle to Mrs. Parker and in the west end to C. Parker, esq. and in the east end of north aisle is a memorial window to Mrs. Young: the pulpit and reading-desk are of oak, handsomely carved, of the date of 1628; attached to the pulpit is a very ancient hour-glass stand of iron, curiously wrought with the arms of the Smiths' and Farriers' Companies of the City of London. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £628, including residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1859 by the Rev. Edmund Savory M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford, who is surrogate, hon. canon of Christ Church, rural dean and diocesan inspector of schools for the rural deanery of Maidenhead. St. Mark's is a chapel of ease and is a handsome red brick building with stone facings in the Early English style, erected by subscription in 1866, an aisle being added in 1876; it now consists of chancel, nave, aisles and transepts. Here is a Baptist chapel. There is a fuel allotment of 13 acres, producing £10 yearly and charities of £40 for distribution. Binfield Park House, formerly the seat and property of Mrs. Young, who also owned Pope's Wood, at one time the favourite retreat of the great poet, was sold in 1877 to Lord Arthur Hill; it is a good brick building surrounded by a park of about 300 acres and occupied by Mrs. Rock; there is a Catholic chapel attached to the house; Binfield Court is the seat of Frank Davenport B. Webster esq.; Forest Lodge, a handsome house surrounded by a park of about 100 acres, is the seat of Sir Warwick Charles Morshead bart. J.P.; The Firs, of Lucius Henry Fitz Gerald esq.; Egmont, Gen. Sir Trevor Chute K.C.B.; Allanbay, James Allan Wiggett esq. J.P.; The Grove, Sir Henry Mervin Vavasour bart. D.L., J.P. A portion of Billingbear Park, the property of Lord Braybrooke, is situated in this parish. Binfield Manor House, the seat of Miss Meynell Ingram, is in this parish; it was in 1738 in the possession of the Pitt family. The chief manor of Binfield was given up to the Crown in 1548 by the then Lord Sandys; an inferior manor existed and still exists, of which Henry Skrine esq. is the lord. The manor was formerly included in Windsor forest, and many of the old forest trees still remain on the estate, which is very remarkable for some magnificent oaks and a cedar of extraordinary growth. By the Act of Parliament enclosing Windsor Forest, passed in 1813, the right to a spring of water, a mile from the manor house, was reserved to the lord of the manor, who has the sole right to it. The principal landowners are Lord Arthur Hill, Lord Braybrooke, General Crutchley, Allan Wiggett esq. and Sir Warwick Charles Morshead bart. J.P. The soil is principally gravel and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 3,207 acres; rateable value, £9,388; the population in 1881 was 1,682.

BIRCHETT'S GREEN is a hamlet situated on an elevation commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country and adjoining the beautiful demesne of Hall Place, 10 miles north-east from Reading and 3½ west from Maidenhead. A small portion of this hamlet is in the parish of Bisham and the remainder in the parish of Hurley; it is in the county court district of Henley-on-Thames. Hall Place, the seat of Sir Gilbert Augustus Clayton East bart. J.P. is a red brick mansion situated in a picturesque, well-wooded park of about 160 acres, in which are about 100 head of deer; the park is noted for its magnificent avenues of lime trees, one of which leads to the mansion, the others extending right and left. A school chapel was opened and licensed by the bishop of the diocese (Bishop Wilberforce) on February 28th, 1869, in which divine service is held on Sunday afternoon. The land is the property of Sir G. A. Clayton East, bart. J.P. and of the vicar and churchwardens of Hurley, who are trustees and managers. The population is included in the respective parishes.

BISHAM (formerly BUSTLEHAM) is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Great Marlow (Bucks), beautifully situated on the bank of the river Thames, 13 miles north-east from Reading, 7 east from Henley, 5 north from Maidenhead and one mile south from Marlow station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. There is a suspension bridge across the river to Marlow (Bucks), built in the year 1836. The church of All Saints, which is of great antiquity, is in the Norman style and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a square western tower with 3 bells, and was thoroughly restored in 1856; it contains some ancient monuments, among which are three to Sir Thomas, Sir Philip and Lady Hobye; Sir Philip was last English legate to the Pope and died in 1558; Sir Thomas, who was ambassador to France, died in 1566: there are effigies of these brothers in alabaster, in the south burial chapel, also a handsome stained window with arms of twelve of the Hobye family, placed there in the year 1609. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £156 with residence, in the gift of Geo. Hen. Vansittart esq. D.L., J.P. and held since 1848 by the Rev. Thomas Edward Powell M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. The charities are of £2 10s. yearly value. Here is a portion of Bisham Abbey, which was built in 1138 for canons regular of St. Augustine, surrendered 1536 to Henry VIII.; for many years it belonged to the Hobye family and came into the hands of the Vansittarts in the year 1780. Here the Princess Elizabeth, afterwards Queen of England, was confined during the reign of Queen Mary; a well is still called the Princess Elizabeth's. Temple House, the seat of Major-General Owen Lewis Cope Williams M.P., J.P. is a noble square brick mansion situated on the banks of the river Thames, surrounded by a beautiful park and grounds. George Henry Vansittart esq. D.L., J.P. of Bisham Abbey, who is lord of the manor, and Major-General Owen L. C. Williams M.P., J.P. and H. D. Skrine, esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is light and chalky; subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,424 acres; rateable value £4,981; and the population in 1881 was 703.

BLEWBURY, called in Domesday 'Blitberie' and 'Blidberia,' and in the Monkish Chronicles 'Bleobyrig,' is a parish 7 miles south-west from Wallingford, 10 east from Wantage, 10 south from Abingdon, 4 north-east from East Ilsley, 4 south from the Didcot junction station on the Great Western railway and 1½ miles from Upton station on the Didcot and Newbury railway, partly in the hundred of Moreton, but chiefly in that of Reading, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The village, with the exception of one principal street, is scattered; from its position at the foot of the downs it enjoys a pure and invigorating air and abounds with springs affording an ample supply of good water. The church of St. Michael, formerly dependent on Reading Abbey, is a structure of rubble, flint and stone, consisting of chancel, with a chapel on the south side, nave, aisles, transepts, the piers and lantern stage of a central tower, north and south porches, and a western tower of three stages, with a quatre-foiled parapet and crocketed pinnacles with vanes, and containing a clock and 6 bells, of which the 4th and earliest is dated 1586, and the others respectively 1633, 1689, 1704, 1752 and 1825; it was originally a building of the Late Transition or Anglo-Norman period, dating from about A.D. 1180, of which a considerable portion still exists; the chancel, with its interior south wall, is Transitional; it retains a fine stone groined roof and one of its original windows, besides a small circular opening in the apex of the eastern gable, but its other windows are Late Decorated; the south wall of the chancel was cut through about A.D. 1350, on the erection of the chapel; this is a Decorated work, and the reticulated tracery of the windows is characteristic of the style at its best period; it was not improbably built by the Lattons, who then resided in the adjoining village of Upton; on the south-side is a piscina, two pointed arches, enclosed by oaken screens open to the chancel; one of these screens is good Perpendicular, and there are also two ancient prayer desks of the same date, all of which are elaborately carved; the piers of the central tower, also Transitional, are of unusual thickness, and at the angles are slender nook shafts, with the volute and straight-leaved ornament on the capitals peculiar to this date; from the chafings of the ropes upon the arches, still plainly distinguishable, it would seem that this tower had 4 bells; the vaulting is perfect, the two easternmost piers are pierced with hagioscopes, that on the south Perpendicular, while that on the north is square and probably original; the south-west pier contains a flight of stone steps leading to an open archway on the right of the nave and anciently the entrance to the rood-loft, which it appears had a piscina, a unique feature carefully reproduced during the recent restoration; the lower door is Perpendicular, with elaborately carved panelled tracery; the nave is separated from the south aisle by an arcade of five Transition arches, of the same date, the two westernmost being wider and loftier than the others; these spring from stilted circular columns, the capitals having the volute ornament, and in one instance Early foliaged work; the north arcade is Decorated and has two arches only, supported by octagonal columns; plain Perpendicular windows light both aisles, and the west window in the tower is a good example of the same date: the tower opens to the nave by a bold and lofty arch, and its lower stage serves both as a vestry and ringing chamber; the original porches seem to have been removed in the Perpendicular period and replaced by substantial porches of open timber-work with barge boards richly carved; of these the south porch remains, but the north porch has lately been rebuilt in flint with stone dressings, its carved work reproduced and new oak door hung; above the doorway is a stone niche, and on either side are small stone slabs, one containing brass figures with scrolls: the south door, a venerable relic, has a huge wooden lock and fine Early English iron work: the font is of Perpendicular date, octagonal and panelled in quatrefoils; around the under surface are alternate fleurs de lis and Ecussons à bouche. The Humfreys, still a numerous family in this locality, have been connected with the parish from a remote period—a William Humfray being resident here so far back as 1340; the Lattons, who took their name from Latton, in Wilts, and derived themselves from the Stutvilles or Estotevilles of Normanby, were once a family of high consideration in these parts, and owned 26 manors in Berks alone, besides large property in other counties; they appear to have resided in this neighbourhood from an early period, Willelmus de Latton, fourth in descent from Roger de Latton of Latton, having settled at Upton in 1325 and married Joan, an heiress of a younger branch of the Percies; they lived at Upton it would seem until about 1500, and then removed to Chilton, about 2 miles distant, where their manor house, called Latton's Place, though much modernised, is yet standing; of their memorials in the church the earliest is that of a knight in a full suit of plate armour with his two wives, date probably, c. 1500, and perhaps representing Thomas Latton, of Upton, who died Ap. 8, 1503; these brasses were formerly affixed to the walls, having been removed from their stone slab, a portion of which, with a brass shield of Estbury, has long served as a step at the south door; during the recent restorations, the figure of the knight with one wife and some children, have been affixed to a new stone and placed on the north wall of the chancel, the other wife being left on one of the lower piers, but that they all belonged, until the last century, to one memorial there is ample evidence to show; on the south side of the chancel, on the floor, is the brass of John Latton, of Chilton, esq. habited in a tabard of his arms, with Anne his wife and six children out of the 14 named in the inscription; he died 31 May, 1548; Alice, sister of this John Latton, married Sir John Dannce, general surveyor of Crown lands in the reign of Henry VIII.; he accompanied the King to France in 1513, and was knighted by him in the church at Tawnay; in 1515 he was sheriff of Oxon and Berks, and represented Oxfordshire in the parliament of 1529; the remains of the tomb erected apparently both to himself and his wife is now in the chancel aisle, having been removed thither since the time of Ashmole; it was originally an altar tomb, but only the upper slab and some portion of the bust now exist; on the former are the figures in brass, of Sir John and Dame Alice Daunce; both are heraldically clad, and around are the shields of Daunce, Latton, Estbury and Percy; with an inscription to Dame Alice Daunce, who died 27 Aug. 1523, and her husband 7 Dec. 1545; against the south-east pier in a slab of Purbeck marble, is a brass with effigy and inscription to John Balaam, a former vicar, ob. 1496, and on the south side a modern brass, with a figure of Faith and inscription to the Rev. Jacob Macdonald LL.B. of Cains College, Cambridge, 35 years vicar of this parish, who died 4 June 1871; his wife Eliza, 1849, and son John, 1841; below this is a marble tablet to the Rev. Arthur Bromley, formerly curate here 1831: on the opposite wall, previous to the restoration, was a large monument of good classic design, with fluted columns supporting a pediment to Mrs. Sarah Witherell, 1728; this has entirely disappeared, and the memorial stones formerly on the chancel floor have been buried, and the floor entirely relaid with encaustic tiles; of these, one bore an inscription to Elizabeth, wife of Daniel Lousley, 1828; the remainder are indicated only by initials; a small Norman window on the north side has been filled with stained glass to Eliza Serre Rotch, Ap. 16, 1878; there are existing mural monuments to John Bushnell esq. 1816; Ann Goddard, 1847; John Gamman, 1828, and to the family of Humfrey, 1788—1860; and floor stones inscribed to Thomas Plott M.A. fellow of Pembroke College, Oxon; Martha, daughter of James Baker Jauno, 1720, and to the family of Slade, 1757-1820; on the north aisle is a small inscription on brass to "John Casberde, one of the good benefactors to this church," c. 1500, and a large floor slab in the tower retains a similar one, much worn, to John Boldre 1499; of other antiquities attached to the church may be mentioned two venerable copies of the religious books ordered to be provided by every parish in the reign of Edward VI. viz.: Udal's Edition of the Paraphrase of Erasmus on the New Testament, and Jewel's Defence of his Apology for the Church of England; these are partly bound with iron, and have the chains by which they were probaby attached to a lectern; Ashmole, however, says that in his time two large books were chained to the monument of Sir John and Dame Alice Dannce, mentioned above: outside the church porch, on the south side, are two recumbent figures of stone, apparently of a knight and his lady, but they are now much worn and overgrown with weeds and nothing seems to be known about them. The restoration of the church, which has been proceeding at intervals for several years past, has, up to the present time, included the lowering of part of the floor to the depth of about a foot, the entire renewal of the nave roof, in exact facsimile of the old open timber roof, the entire relaying of the floors with wood blocks and tiles, re-glazing the windows, and generally renovating the interior; in the nave, chairs have been substituted for the high pews, a new pulpit of carved oak erected, and the font set up at the west end; in the chancel the eastern end has been raised, a sedile formed in the eastern arch of the arcade, closed by a new screen, an ancient ambry refitted, and a reredos of carved alabaster set up; the galleries which encumbered the north aisle and west-end have been taken down and the tower opened to the nave, and north porch erected. The church was re-opened on the completion of these works by the Bishop of Oxford; more recently the north aisle has been restored and an organ introduced, for which a special service was held on Thursday, Sep. 14, 1882: the communion plate includes a silver chalice dated 1663, and a paten of silver given by Malthus's trustees. The register dates from the year 1588. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £270 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1874 by the Rev. John Hugh Burgess. Among the past curates may be mentioned the Rev. Morgan Jones, an eccentric character known as "The Blewbury Miser," who died worth about £40,000; he wrote his sermons on scraps of paper sometimes torn from the walls, and lay in bed while his single shirt was washed; a threadbare coat, said to have been worn by him for 40 years, is now in the possession of Mr. Luke Lowsley, of Hampstead Norris. Sir Robert Hanson, Lord Mayor, 1673, was a native of this place. From old Lady-day to Old Michaelmas-day a bell is regularly rung here at 8 in the evening and till lately also at 4 in the morning, in continuance of an ancient custom instituted for the guidance of any who might get lost upon the Downs. There are two almshouses, one for the oldest man in the parish, erected 1738 by the gift of one James Bacon, who died in 1734, with an allowance to the inmates of 8s. weekly; another, erected 1838, for the use of Bacon's charity, on a site given by the late John Shaw Phillips esq. of Culham, with an allowance of 7s. weekly; Hanson's charity of £6 and Jones' of £2, are expended in bread for the poor; Justices of £3 and Tyrell's are distributed in money. The Church Acre and Play Close produce about £3 yearly for church purposes. The Wesleyan chapel is a building of brick with stone dressings, in a simple style of Gothic, erected from designs by the late Mr. W. H. Woodman, of Reading; there is also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The village was on several occasions visited by Wesley; the chapel in which he preached is now a dwelling house. A short distance from the village, eastward, is a remarkable hill called Blewburton (Bleobyridun), scarped on its western side into a series of broad plateaux rising one above another, and generally supposed to have been a fortified position, although regarded by some as a sacred eminence devoted to the sun-worship of the Celts; in the lands around, many coins, from the time of the Romans to that of the Stuarts, have been ploughed up, together with bullets and other evidences of former wars. During the Civil War the neighbourhood was frequently scoured by the Royalist and Parliamentary forces. The parish is intersected by a Roman road and a British road, called respectively the Ickleton or Icknield way, and Grimsditch; the former represented here by the high road between Reading and Wantage, at Streatley throws off a collateral branch called "The Ridgeway," which runs along the hills south of the village by Cuckhamsley (Cwickelm's hleew) to Wantage. Col. Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are The Rev. C. R. Powys and Nathaniel Humfrey esq. The soil is chalk and marl and the land chiefly arable, producing wheat, barley, roots and beans, but within the village it is principally laid out as cherry orchards, and large quantities of this fruit are annually sent out to the London and other markets. Watercress is also extensively cultivated. The entire area is 6,814 acres; rateable value of Blewbury, only £4,829; the population in 1881 was 746.

UPTON, with ASTON UPTHORPE, were formerly chapelries, but have now been united together as a separate ecclesiastical parish.

SCHOOLS:—

The Endowed school was erected in 1709 by the trustees of William Malthus esq. citizen of London, who bequeathed lands at Noke, in Oxfordshire, for the education & clothing of 30 boys & 30 girls; the endowment also providing premiums of £10 for the apprenticeship of the boys to various trades at the age of 14, & a certain sum to each girl on leaving the school, this charity at the last return (1808) produced a total gross income of £725 per annum, of which £27 yearly was available for apprenticing & the same sum for distribution in blankets, sheets & coal on New Year's day; the property, consisting of 664 acres, now produces only £495 yearly, out of which £280 is paid for the 10 boys at the Blue & Green Coat schools at Reading; the distribution of gifts, for some years suspended, has been to a slight extent resumed, but there is at present no free education nor any provision for apprenticing. An infant school is attached, in which about 50 children of both sexes are taught, supported partly by the school pence & partly by the trustees

Endowed, founded in 1709, for 60 children, but has now space for 200; James Watkins, master; Miss Anne Louisa Watkins, mistress

Infant, Miss Annie Caroline Hillier, mistress

BOURTON is a township and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1867 out of the civil parish of Shrivenham, in the union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, three quarters of a mile south-by-west from Shrivenham station on the Great Western railway, 6½ miles from Swindon and 7 south-west-by-south from Faringdon, situate on the Wilts border. The Wilts and Berks canal passes through. The church of St. James was built by public subscription, by far the largest benefactor being the late Thomas Tucker esq. who gave £500, parsonage garden and site of church; it is a stone building in the Early English and Pointed styles and has chancel, nave and bell-gable with 2 bells. The register dates from the year 1860. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £100, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1867 by the Rev. John Batchelor Kearney M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Baptist chapel. Messrs. John Baker and John Tucker built and endowed six almshouses; they are of stone, in the ornamental Pointed style. Great quantities of fossils of various kinds are frequently dug up in this village. A very old cross stands in the centre of the village. Bourton House, a handsome edifice, commanding extensive views, is the residence of Mrs. Tucker. Viscount Barrington is lord of the manor, and he and Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Lawrence are principal landowners. The soil is part loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, oats, clover and turnips. The area is 1,251 acres; rateable value, £5,030; the population in 1881 was 284.

BOXFORD-cum-WESTBROOK is a parish and village on the road to Lambourn, 4 miles north-west from Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Newbury and diocese of Oxford. The Lambourn river separates Boxford and Westbrook. The church of St. John is an old stone edifice: the chancel and nave are probably of the fourteenth century: the low square tower, which is of flint and brick, contains a peal of 5 bells and a clock: the north aisle was built in 1841 for the use of the poor by the Rev. John Wells, then rector. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, rent-charge commuted at £867 with 20 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of and held, since 1872, by the Rev. George Francis Wells B.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Here is a chapel for Wesleyans; there is also one for Primitive Methodists on Wickham Heath. The benefactions to the poor are—the rector pays 13s. 4d. on every Easterday in the church; Mr. Gregory Ironmonger gave £27 by will; Mrs. Wayte gave 6s. 8d. payable yearly; Mr. Richard Whare gave £30 by will; Mr. Willoughby gave an annuity of 20s. by will, dated 1610; John Shepherd gave £20, the interest to be paid to poor widows. On the road at the northern end of the parish is a boundary stone of the parishes of Boxford, Welford and Leckhampstead; this road is called Hangmanstone lane from the following legend:—A man having stolen a sheep, was carrying it with its hind legs round his neck, and sat down to rest on the large boundary stone; the sheep struggled and drew him backwards, and he was found in the morning strangled by the hind legs of the sheep: this road is conjectured to have been the Roman road from Spinæ to Wanting. The Earl of Craven and Charles Eyre esq. are lords of the manor: the latter is the principal landowner. The soil is mixed gravel and chalk; subsoil loam and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, and turnips The area is 2,769 acres; rateable value, £4,295; the population in 1881 was 568.

WESTBROOK is a tything in this parish.

BOYNE HILL is a long, irregular village and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1858 out of the civil parish of Bray, comprising the village of Boyne Hill, the outlying hamlets of Cox Green and Tittle Row, and parts of the town of Maidenhead near the station, on the south side of the great Bath road, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is 7 miles south-west from Windsor. The church of All Saints was built in 1857 of red, white and black brick, with carved stone dressings, and ornamented inside with carved work; all the windows are stained; the nave is very lofty and the aisles, which are proportionately so, are separated from the nave by stone columns and arches; the chancel has carved stalls and decorations: in 1865 a noble Decorated tower with a peal of 8 bells and lofty steeple (together 147 feet) were added by the incumbent and his friends: a parsonage-house is connected with the vestry by a corridor of 36 feet. The register dates from the year 1857. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £180, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1877 by the Rev. Arthur Hislop Drummond M.A. Christ Church, Oxford. St. Paul's mission chapel and Infant school, in Albert street, Maidenhead, belong to this district: there are likewise almshouses for six persons. Near this village is a spring, known by the name of Reading Pond. The land is the property of William H. Grenfell esq. and the trustees of the Salters' Company. The soil is gravel and in some parts loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,000 acres; the population in 1871 was 1,554.

Cox Green is a long, irregular village, in the parish of Bray, situated on the south side of the great Bath road, and separated from Boyne Hill by the Great Western railway. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel.

Tittle Row, or Altwood Road, is a small village adjoining Boyne Hill, close to the Great Western railway; it terminates at Maidenhead Thicket, and is situated on the south side of the great Bath road.

BRADFIELD is a scattered village, parish and head of a union, 8 miles west from Reading and 3½ south-west from Pangbourne railway station, in the hundred of Theale, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford: the village is situated in a valley, on a stream called the Kimber, which rises in this parish. The church of St. Andrew was enlarged and, with the exception of the tower and part of the north aisle, rebuilt by a former incumbent, was re-consecrated in 1848; it consists of a rich Early English chancel, nave, aisles, transept (in which is an organ) and a tower: the windows are stained. The register dates, with interruption, from 1539. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,148 12s. with residence, in the gift of John Thompson esq. J.P. of Broughton Hall, Chester, and held by the Rev. Charles Harry Owen M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. There is a chapel of ease (The Holy Trinity) situated at Buckhold, about 2 miles north of the village, also a chapel of ease (SS. Simon and Jude) about a mile from the church, intended specially for the use of the inmates of the Union Workhouse; there is also a small chapel belonging to the Primitive Methodists. The charities consist of the interest of £300 Three per Cents. left by J. Buller, of Privy Gardens; Wilson's £100 £3 per Cent. Consols; seven acres of land and some smaller amounts left by other persons for the benefit of the poor. Bradfield Hall, the seat of Miss Connop, is a substantial building of red brick about one mile and a half west of the village. Bradfield Lodge, the property and residence of Otho Cooke esq. is one mile south of the church. The principal landowners are Richard Benyon esq. and Miss Connop. The soil is generally gravelly; subsoil, for the most part chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 4,384 acres; rateable value, £5,991 3s. 9d.; the population in 1871 was 1,182.

BRAY is a village and parish in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, separated from Buckinghamshire by the river Thames; it is 1 mile from the Great Western railway station at Maidenhead, 5 north-west from Windsor and 10 south-east from Henley and comprises the divisions of Bray, Tutchen End, East Oakley, Boyne Hill and part of Maidenhead, and is supposed to be on the site of the Roman station Bibracte; it is now within the liberty of Windsor Forest, being part of the Royal demesne. The church of St. Michael was built in the reign of Edward I. in the latest Perpendicular style; various additions were made at different times in the fifteenth century and the whole was repaired and restored in 1859 at a great cost, under the superintendence of Thomas Wyatt esq.: it now consists of chancel, nave and aisles: it is a very handsome structure and has sittings for 900 people: there are several stained windows. The register dates from the year 1656. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500, arising from an estate of 400 acres, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1874 by the Rev. William Brassey Hole M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. William Goddard esq. in the year 1627 founded and endowed an hospital, called Jesus' Hospital, and placed it under the government of the Fishmongers' Company of London, of which he was a member; the buildings consist of a chapel and 40 houses, forming a uniform square, with cultivated gardens in the centre and at the back; six of the inmates must be free of the above company; a single man or woman is allowed 7s. a week, a man and his wife 12s. all the other occupants, who are parishioners of Bray, have when single 4s. 6d. when married 6s. 6d. per week, besides other allowances; the Rev. Cecil Henry Fardell, of Gloucester Theological College, is paymaster and chaplain. There are several charities amounting to about £50 per annum, for educating and apprenticing boys, also for coal and clothing. A late Act of Parliament has vested in the magistrates (instead of the lord of the manor) the power to appoint chief and petty constables and tithing-man. William H. Grenfell esq. is lord of the manor of Bray Lowbrooks and also of Philberds. The principal landowners are William Henry Grenfell esq. John Hercy esq. Lt.-Col. Victor Wm. Bates Van de Weyer and the Fishmongers' Company. The soil is gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 9,102 acres; rateable value, £47,453; the population in 1881 was 6,422, of which 2,805 were in the rural and 3,617 in the urban district (Maidenhead town).

BRIGHTWELL is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, 2 miles north-west from Wallingford, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Agatha is an Early English structure, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, and has still remaining some brasses in the flagstones; it was thoroughly restored in 1858; the tower, which has 6 bells, was rebuilt in the year 1797. The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a rectory with Sotwell annexed, tithes commuted in 1841 at £855 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Francis Macaulay Cunningham M.A. of Trinity College, Cmbridge. By Order in Council of 14th May, 1868, the chapelry of Sotwell was transferred from St. Leonard's, in Wallingford, to this parish, certain tithes in the parish of Harwell, belonging to Brightwell, being transferred to St. Leonard's in exchange. There are bequests amounting to £25 a year, one by the Rev. Dr. Woodward, who gave in perpetuity the sum of £5 to be appropriated to apprentice poor children born in the parish. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Edward Fairthorne esq. Edward Toovey Wells esq. John Dearlove esq. and William Toovey esq. The land, both arable and meadow, is very good. The soil is green sand; subsoil, chiefly clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 2,024 acres; rateable value, £4,622; and the population in 1881 was 618.

BRIMPTON is a parish on the borders of Hampshire, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 6½ miles east-south-east from Newbury, 2 south-west from the Midgham station on the Great Western railway and 12½ south-west from Reading. The river Kennet and the Kennet canal are on the north and the river Auburn passes on the east, separating the parish from Wasing. The church of St. Peter was erected in 1869 on the site of the old one, at the sole cost of the late James Blyth esq.; it is built of flint with stone dressings in the Decorated style and consists of chancel, nave, north annexe and south aisle and has a tower coataining clock and surmounted by a light and graceful spire: most of the windows are stained, the glass which originally filled the east window has been taken out and placed in the north annexe; it is in memory of George Henry, Earl of Falmouth, who died 1852: the stained window in the south side of chancel is in memory of Edward Goldny B.A. late vicar of this parish, and is dated 1857. The register dates from the year 1500. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1878 by the Rev. George Crawford Caffin M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. The Baptists have a chapel here. The late Earl of Falmouth gave a small plot of ground, on which is built a National school, supported partly by voluntary contributions and an endowment by the late Countess of Falmouth of £20 a year; in 1861 it was almost rebuilt and enlarged, with additional Infant school and class rooms, with residence for master attached, additional ground for which was given by the late James Blyth esq. Here are a few small charities. The Countess of Falmouth built and endowed seven almshouses for the aged and destitute inhabitants in 1854 under the name of St. Peter's Almshouses and bequeathed £3,000 £3 per Cent. Consols for their support. Robert Burn-Blyth esq. of Woolhampton House, is lord of the manors of Brimpton, Shalford and Woolhampton and the principal landowner. The soil is peat in the Kennet valley, with loam and gravel mixed on the high lands; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, clover and beans. The area is 1,692 acres; rateable value, £3,450; the population in 1881 was 427.

BUCKLAND is a pleasant village and parish, 3¾ miles east from Faringdon, 10 west from Abingdon, and 14 from Oxford, in the hundred of Ganfield, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situate near the road from Faringdon to Abingdon and extending to Oxfordshire, from which it is separated by the Isis. The church of St. Mary is a cruciform edifice, principally Early English, consisting of chancel, nave and transepts, with central tower containing 5 bells: the tenor bell dated 1721 is inscribed—"I to the church do call and to the grave do summon all;" the others are dated 1636: the chancel has a panelled oak roof with bosses and an oak screen at the back of the altar, forming the vestry; on the south side are sedilia and a piscina; there is a small but excellently carved marble slab representing the "Adoration of the Shepherds;" adjoining is a sepulchre containing an altar tomb and a bracket: a triangular enclosed niche on the north side contains a curious casket enclosing the heart of Wm. Holcot; he and his ancestors owned the manor of Barcote from 1292 to 1575: the family records are inscribed on a mural monument in the south transept: Wm. Holcot was a lay preacher after the Reformation, but recanted to escape persecution in the reign of Mary; by his eccentric will he directed his heart to be interred at Buckland: there are 3 stained windows in the choir and chancel; an oak screen divides the latter from a very good Early English tower of late character: in the north transept is a brass to John Yate, ob. 1578, with effigies of himself, wife and 12 children, also a mural marble monument to Sir Edward Yate, bart. and members of his family, dated 1648: the south transept contains, in addition to the Holcot tablet above named, numerous tablets to the Southby family, of Carswell, dating from the first year of James 1st; both transepts contain a piscina: the nave has a few Norman features and a Perpendicular font: the south porch still retains its original Early English oak door: the church was restored in 1870 by subscription. The register dates from the year 1679. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Francis Joseph Leigh M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, and ad eund. Oxford. There is a handsome Catholic church in the Early Decorated style, built by the late Sir Robert Throckmorton, father of the present baronet, and dedicated to St. George: the chancel, lady chapel, reredos and font are very good. The Baptists have a chapel here. The Parochial school numbers about 100 children, boys and girls, supported in part by ancient endowment of £40 yearly. There is a charity, of the yearly value of about £20, for the poor. Buckland House, the seat of Sir Nicholas William George Throckmorton bart. D.L., J.P. is a handsome mansion in the Italian style, having a centre and two wings, each terminating in an octagonal building; there is a well-wooded deer park of 130 acres behind the mansion. Barcote, the seat of William West esq. is a handsome commodious mansion, in the Tudor style, erected in 1877: the view from the north front is very extensive, embracing portions of Berkshire, Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire. Carswell House, one mile west, is the residence of Thomas Hayward Southby, esq. The principal landowners are Sir N. W. Throckmorton bart. (lord of the manor of Buckland), William West esq. (lord of the manor of Barcote), Thos. Hayward Southby esq. (lord of the manor of Carswell) and Sidney Cole esq. The soil is a rich sandy loam; subsoil, various, clay, sand and gravel. The chief crops are the usual cereals and roots. Buckland contains an area of 3,242 acres, while the total amount of acres in the entire parish—including the hamlets of Carswell 611, and Barcot 580- is 4,434; rateable value, £6,531; the population in 1881 was 723.

BARCOT, or Barcote, is 2 miles west.

CARSWELL is one mile and a half north-west.

Parish Clerk, Alfred King.

BUCKLEBURY is a village and parish, 3½ miles north-east from Thatcham station on the Great Western railway, 12 miles south-west from Reading and 7 north-east from Newbury, in the hundred of Reading, union of Bradfield, county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Newbury and diocese of Oxford; it contains the liberties of HAWKRIDGE and MARLSTON. The church of St. Mary is an ancient building, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, western tower containing 6 bells: the greater part of the chancel seems to have been rebuilt in 1705, by Sir Henry Winchcombe: the chancel arch is destroyed: the nave is divided from the aisle by an arcade of three plain Pointed Transition Norman arches; the aisle itself is Perpendicular, as also is the tower, which has a good eastern arch: in the chancel are several monuments to the family of Winchcombe-Hartley: the south doorway is a beautiful specimen of Norman work, with highly wrought zigzag mouldings, and shafts with sculptured caps: in the churchyard is a very fine yew tree. The register, including that of Marlston, dates from the year 1538; and is in good condition; it contains a list of the rectors of Bucklebury from 1303 to the present time. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Marlston annexed, joint yearly value £453 with residence, in the gift of the co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq. and held since 1873 by the Rev. Thomas William Watts LL.M. of Caius College, Cambridge. Here is a Congregational chapel. The Rev. Winchcombe Hartley left £1,220 in the £3 per Cent. Consols for the endowment of a school to educate and clothe six boys and six girls. Lady Winchcombe left £60, the interest for the poor. There is an iron foundry in the village. The manor, which belonged to Reading abbey, was granted in 1539 to John Winchcombe, son of the famous clothier of that name, known as "Jack of Newbury;" Henry Winchcombe esq. of Bucklebury, was created a baronet in 1661. In one of the chambers of the manor house is a portrait of Mr. Winchcombe, the grantee, with the date 1550, and his age 61. Marlston House, the residence of Henry Mill Bunbury esq. D.L., J.P. is a stone building, pleasantly situated. The co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq. and Henry Mill Bunbury esq. D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners; the former are owners of the manor. The soil varies very much, but is chiefly sand, clay and chalk; subsoil, clay and chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 5,255 acres; the population in 1871 was 1,154. MARLSTON is a liberty 2 miles north-west. The chapel of ease has been repaired and embellished and the outside re-cased with flint in 1876 by W. M. Bunbury esq. Henry Mill Bunbury is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq.

HAWKRIDGE is a liberty 1 mile north. Richard Fisher esq. is lord of the manor.

The UPPER and LOWER COMMON, 1 mile south, the Slade, 1 south-west, Westrop Green, 2 west, and Alley are in this parish.

BURGHFIELD is a parish, 2½ miles south-east from Theale railway station and 5 south-west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The river Kennet flows on the north. The church of the Virgin Mary was rebuilt, at a cost of £2,500 and re-consecrated in June, 1843: it is in the Lombard style, consisting of chancel, nave and apse, with octagonal tower covered by a small dome containing 6 bells: in the chancel is a handsome stained window, presented by the Rev. H. C. Cherry M.A. late rector, containing a full-length figure of the Virgin holding the Infant in her arms; the late rector, Rev. F. B. Boyd, presented the church with five stained windows representing the Four Evangelists and St. John the Baptist; a window representing Faith, Hope and Charity has been added by the Rev. B. B. Bockett, in memory of his brother and two sisters. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a rectory, annual tithe rent-charge £1,023 with residence and 13 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot and held since 1879 by the Rev. Dallas Oldfield Harington B.A. of St. Alban Hall, Oxford. The Brightwell charity for the apprenticeship of poor boys of the parish, by the sale of land and the investment of the proceeds in the funds, has now an increased annual income of £28 14s. 4d. There are three other charities with an aggregate income of £30 per annum, which is given to aged poor persons. There are also three almshouses for widows, built and endowed by the late Miss Mary Lyne. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a small chapel here. Mrs. Davis, of the Manor House, Burghfield, is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are Richard Benyon esq. Major Thoyts, Major Goodrich Holmesdale Allfrey, Mrs. Shepherd and T. Bland-Garland esq. J.P. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are barley and wheat. The area is 4,237 acres; rateable value, £8,500; the population in 1881 was 1,296.

BUSCOT is a village and parish in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, about 4 miles north-east from Faringdon and 2 south-east from Lechlade, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the Isis, which separates it from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Mary is a very old structure, in the Early English and Decorated styles, with chancel, nave, north porch and western embattled tower, containing 3 bells: the interior is plain and has numerous mural tablets: it was new-seated and repaired at the expense of the late rector. The register dates from about the year 1700, those of an earlier date having been destroyed. The living is a rectory, yearly value £535 with residence and 64 acres of glebe, in the gift of Robert Campbell esq. and held since 1854 by the Rev. Fredk. Akers Dawson M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a charity of the annual value of £35, accruing from the sum of £1,166 13s. 4d. in the £3 per Cent. Consols left by Mrs. Nash, of Maidenhead, at the request of her late husband, formerly a sugar refiner of London, which interest is to be appropriated by the churchwardens and overseers for the yearly purchase of coats for 20 poor men and gowns and petticoats for 20 poor women residing in the parish; there is an additional yearly charity of £2 4s. for the purchase of clothing. Buscot House, the seat of Robert Campbell esq. F.R.G.S., J.P. was built by Edward Loveden Loveden esq. about the year 1780: it is a stone mansion surrounded by gardens, skirted by an extensive deer park (with a lake of about 25 acres, over which is a bridge of three arches) and in the midst of a rich wooded country. Robert Campbell esq. is lord of the manor and the chief owner and occupier of the land. The soil is various, mostly strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and clover. The area is 2,846 acres; rateable value about £5,288; the population in 1881 was 371.

CHADDLEWORTH is a village and parish, 9 miles north-west from Newbury and 7 south from Wantage, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Andrew is a building of Norman date, consisting of chancel and nave under one roof and a low western tower, the upper part of which is Perpendicular with a square stair turret on the north side: on its western side is the date 1637, when it was probably repaired: the south doorway is good Norman with finely carved chevron ornament and on the right of the entrance is a stoup-niche: the tower arch is in part Norman, but has a Perpendicular ogee head: the windows are chiefly Norman or Transitional: in the tower is an ancient font, discarded about 1811: the church contains monuments to the Wroughton family, of whom P. Wroughton esq. M.P. of Woolley Park is now the representative, and others to the Nelsons, formerly lords of the manor; among the latter are memorials to Mary Nelson, 1618, and Dorothy, wife of Wm. Nelson esq. "cheefe prothonotarie of the comon pleas," 1619: in the churchyard is an ancient but much dilapidated cross, two oblong monuments and a flat stone with a raised cross thereon. The register dates from the year 1538 and is an uninterrupted record from that date and in good preservation: it has the following unique entry:—"Thos. Nelson, sone of Thomas Nelson, Nov. 8, 1644. This was the Thomas Nelson that fought two dragoons in Hangman Stone lane in the time of the Civil Wars, and was never well afterwards;" a later entry in Latin records the planting of a yew tree in the churchyard by Hugh Posock, then vicar, on 20 Feb. 1694: it does not now exist. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £272 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster and held since 1851 by the Rev. Edward Thompson B.D. of Clare College, Cambridge. In this parish was the celebrated monastery of Paughley, founded by Ralph de Chadworth about 1160, in a wild and secluded spot, on the site of a little lowly hermitage in a dale, hard by a forest side, at a place called Elmsfordsmere, for Canons Regular of the Order of St. Augustine and dedicated to St. Margaret: a little before its suppression the revenues of the Priory amounted to £71 10s. 7d. and it was given, 23 Hen. VIII. to the abbot and convent of Westminster, in exchange for 100 acres of land (a portion of which now forms St. James's park), conveyed by that house to the king, having been surrendered by John Somer, the last prior, Feb. 14th, 1524: the existing remains have been converted into a farm house: there are also some ruins of the chapel and an excavation is pointed out as having been one of the fishponds; these remains include what was formerly the kitchen, with an oven and cooking places and some dormitories over, with lancet-shaped windows; in an angle between these and the large window over the doorway is a figure of a monk in a sitting posture, with the head inclined to the left and resting on his hands: in 1796, a large heap of earth at the back of the farm was removed and thrown into pits about the farm and with it some quantities of human remains: in moving the foundations of the chapel the lid of a stone coffin slightly bevelled was discovered with the inscription, "Hieronimus Robertus, Prior Primus;" this memorial is now in good keeping at East Hendred, but the stem and base of the cross are wanting: within the years 1867-72 other discoveries were made, including a similar lid or slab of Caen stone, also bevelled and bearing the full length figure of a priest, with the hands joined beneath a floriated canopy, supported by angels; the figure would date from about 1500: in the ruins of the chapel were found a carved corbel of elegant design, a large portion of the arch of a doorway, a piscina and fragments of a clustered column and encaustic tiles, one of which bore the word "Magdalene:" twelve quarries from a stained glass window in the priory are now in the entrance porch at Prior's Court, having been removed thither by the late Mr. J. T. Wasey, then lord of the manor; these exhibit curious figures of men, women and monkeys: the well of the monastery is deep and large and the water very poor: hoards of money have been discovered in the adjoining woods and on the manor; in 1811 many coins were found in a pit at Field Coppice, and in 1825 a pot containing 800 coins of the Emperors Constantine, Julian, Gratian, Valentinian and others was found by some labourers about 24 yards from the Newbury road; subsequently a party of gipsies, encamping in Margaret's Head, there discovered another hoard of the reputed value of £300. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. Baker's Charity of £1 6s. 8d. is forthcoming; and there is an allotment of 12 acres, producing £18 yearly, also distributed in clothing. Woolley (Wulvely) Park, the seat of Philip Wroughton esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. contains a handsome mansion situated on a beautiful slope: the Park is very extensive and well wooded: the Deer Park extends over an area of 116 acres: in the park was formerly a small church, given in the twelfth century to the monastery of Paughley; there were no remains of it in 1759 but its site was known. Philip Wroughton esq. who is lord of the manor, and Herbert Humfrey esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is principally chalk; subsoil, chalk and rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 3,319 acres; rateable value, £3,484; the population in 1881 was 412.

EAST and WEST CHALLOW townships, in the civil parish of Letcombe Regis, were formed in 1852 into an ecclesiastical parish (each maintains its own poor and is separate for parochial and other purposes), in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford, situated to the south of the Great Western railway, which has a station here and is intersected by the Wilts and Berks canal. East Challow is one mile west from Wantage. The church of St. Nicholas is a small structure of stone, consisting of chancel, nave and south aisle and an Early English bell-cot on the western gable, containing 2 bells: the east window is Decorated, of three lights, with flowing tracery, the chancel arch Early English with shafts: the nave is separated from the aisle by an arcade of three good Early English arches, but the aisle is modern: the south doorway is good Late Norman, the west doorway Transition Norman, with an Early English stoup on the south side: the font is plain and cylindrical: the communion plate is dated 1788. The register dates from the year 1712. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1853 by the Rev. George Purdue S.C.L. of Merton College, Oxford. There formerly existed between this village and Wantage an obelisk, placed at the end of an avenue stretching to Circourt, in the parish of Denchworth; some of the stones, it is said, may be seen in a paved pathway east of the church. At Woodhill is an old house, occupied by Mr. Thorpe, containing an ancient fireplace, over which are the initials of Richard and Mary Bray, and the date 1676.

Here are the extensive works of Messrs. Nalder and Nalder Limited, for the manufacture of agricultural implements. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. W. B. Reynolds, W. Barker and W. B. Wastrough esqrs. are the principal landowners. The area is 1,276 acres; rateable value £3,818; the population in 1881 was 397. WEST CHALLOW is 2 miles north-west from Wantage. The church of St. Laurence is a plain unpretending structure, consisting of a chancel, nave, Perpendicular wooden porch and a double Decorated bell-turret containing 2 bells; the chancel, with its screen, is Perpendicular, the north doorway Transition Norman. The communion plate includes pre-Reformation paten and a chalice of the seventeenth century. In the vicarage garden is the head of an ancient stone cross with traces of a crucifix. Nearly opposite, is an old stone house, called "the College," originally perhaps the abode of a priest. The register dates from 1653. Charles Cotton Ferrard esq. is the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, blue clay. The crops are wheat, beans, oats and turnips. The area is 697 acres; rateable value, £1,772; the population in 1881 was 172.

CHIEVELEY is a parish and village with the chapelries of Leckhampstead, Oare and Winterbourne and the tithings of Curridge and Snelsmore, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Newbury and diocese of Oxford. Chieveley is 5 miles north from Newbury, 4½ south from Ilsley and 22 from Oxford, on the road from Newbury to Abingdon. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a plain building partly in the Early English style, with some traces of Norman: the whole of the nave was rebuilt by the late incumbent in the Early English style, from the plans of Mr. J. W. Hugall, architect; it was re-opened by the Bishop of Oxford in 1873. The register dates from the year 1560. The consolidated living is a vicarage, of the yearly value of £1,460 with residence, in the alternate gift of J. Dand and the Rev. John S. Wasey and held by the Rev. James John Dand M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. There are chapels for Baptists, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans; and several bequests and endowments left for the poor amounting to £40 yearly, besides £35 for educational purposes and a church charity producing £75 yearly. Prior's Court House is the seat of the Rev. John Spearman Wasey, but occupied by the Rev. Charles Richard Powys M.A. The principal landowners are W. G. Mount esq. William Fisher esq. Mrs. Jeune (Chieveley) and the Rev. J. S. Wasey (Compton). The soil is sandy loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The entire area is 7,397 acres; rateable value, £8,057; the population in 1881 was 1,164.

Leckhampstead is a chapelry and tithing of Chieveley parish, 7 miles north from Newbury and three north-west from Chieveley. The church, built by the late incumbent in 1860, in the centre of the village, is in the Pointed style, of brick and flint in alternate courses: it consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and will seat 250 persons: the mullions of the windows are of Bath stone; the walls are unplastered: the east window is stained, subject, The Ascension: there is a bell-turret with 1 bell: the east end of the nave and the south porch are mainly composed of the oak of the ancient screen in the former church, which stood a mile from the village: the ancient font has been retained: the architect was Mr. Teulon, of London, and the cost of erection was £1,745: there is a burial-ground attached to the church. The principal landowner is C. H. Noble esq. The soil is sandy loam; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. Rateable value, £2,452; the population in 1881 was 311.

THICKET, 1¾ miles north-west, and HILL GREEN, 1 north, are places within this chapelry.

Oare (or OURE) is a chapelry of Chieveley, 6 miles east and 5 miles north from Newbury. The chapel of St. Bartholomew is in the Perpendicular style and was thoroughly restored and reseated by the late incumbent in 1852 and has a bell-turret of stone. There is a small burial-ground, long since disused, belonging to the Society of Friends. The principal landowner is W. G. Mount esq.

Winterbourne is a chapelry in the parish of Chieveley 4 miles south-west and 4 north-west from Newbury. The church of St. James is seated on an eminence and was completely restored and reseated and north and south aisles added by the late incumbent in 1854: it is in the Early English style. The principal landowners are Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie and Richard Fisher esq. Rateable value, £3,410; the population in 1881 was 340.

Infants' School, Miss Clements, mistress

Curridge is a hamlet and tithing 2½ south-east from Chieveley. A school-room, which is licensed for Divine service, was erected here in the Pointed style with a residence for the master and mistress, by Miss Wasey and her sister, Mrs. Stackpoole, both since deceased. The principal landowner is the Rev. John Spearman Wasey.

SNELSMORE is a hamlet and tithing 1½ mile south.

DOWNEND and SNELSMORE EAST are other places in Chieveley.

CHILDREY is a parish in the hundred, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford, about 2½ miles west from Wantage and 2½ south-west from the Challow station on the Great Western railway. The Berks and Wilts canal separates it from West Challow: the name is derived from its situation at the source of the brook Cillarethe, but there seems to be no mention of it, as a village, in the old Chronicles. The church of St. Mary is an ancient and highly interesting cruciform structure of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and a Perpendicular embattled western tower containing 6 bells and a small sanctus bell called "Ting-Tang": the chancel, nave, and north transept were probably built by the Frethornes and the tower and south transept added by the Fetyplaces, whose arms appear over the west window: the chancel has a fine Perpendicular east window, double piscina, Decorated sedilia and a canopied Easter sepulchre; the chancel is as wide as the nave, and without chancel arch; part of the rood-loft remains, and there are hagioscopes for each transept; the north transept, or St. Mary's Chapel, belonging to the manor of Frethornes, had a chantry founded in the fourteenth century; in the interior are a number of brasses, in the east wall is a piscina; in the north-east angle a curious stone bracket, opposite a priests' door, and here also is a door formerly leading to the rood loft; the south transept, or St. Catherine's Chapel, belonged formerly to the Fettyplaces, and contains a piscina, some good fragments of stained glass, and curious corbels; there is a priests' door, and traces of another doorway leading to a curious small stone pulpit projecting from the wall by the side of the transept; the font is cylindrical, and consists of a leaden basin 10 inches deep, surrounded on the exterior by 12 small figures of bishops, mitred, and carrying a crosier in one hand and a book in the other, upon a massive stone base; in the windows are considerable remains of stained glass, representing The Salutation, The Adoration of the Magi, The Crucifixion and The Ascension, with armorial devices: the Church contains some very old and interesting monuments of the Walrond, Fynderne, Kyngeston, Fettyplace, Englefield and other families; these include a very fine canopied brass, with effigies, to William Fynderne esq. 1444, and his wife Elizabeth with a curious inscription round the edge, of 20 Latin verses: near this, the brass of a priest c. 1480; a brass, with effigies, and partial inscription to William Walrond gent. and his wife Elizabeth c. 1480; a priest c. 1490, with chalice; a curious brass to Joan (Walrond), wife of Robert Stroughbon, 1507, in a shroud, with 7 English verses; and brasses to John Kyngeston esq. 1514, and Susan his wife; Thomas Walrond gent. 1480, and his wife Alice (Englefield) 1477; Bryan Roos LL.D. [rector], 1529, in academic dress; Agnes, wife of John Fynderne, 1441; William Fetiplace and his wife Elizabeth, 1516, founders of the chantry, with shields; a matrix of a civilian and his wife c. 1380; and in the south transept, a marble canopy, with brass effigies of a man and his wife rising from their graves, and a mutilated shield of Fetiplace; in the north transept is a fine tomb, with the effigy of a cross-legged knight, under a richly ornamented ogee arch, and supposed to commemorate Sir Edmund de Chelrey, 1372; the chancel, as well as the nave, has some fine old tiles: the chancel and nave were thoroughly restored in 1877; the north transept has been restored by Sir John Gibbons and the south transept by Queen's College, Oxford. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £600, with residence, in the gift of the President and scholars of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Charles John Cornish M.A. formerly exhibitioner of that college. Here are almshouses for a cantarist and three almsmen, maintained by Queen's College, Oxford; these almshouses were originally attached to land given by William Fettyplace to this College, for the support of his chantry, as above mentioned. Here are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The charities for distribution in money and kind amount to £65 yearly. The old manor house, lately well repaired, has a good fifteenth century porch, with stone-mullioned windows and arched doorways, traces only of the old hall are now visible, and the buttery hatch is blocked up: from the time of Henry VI. to Charles II. it was inhabited by the family of Fettyplace; in a room of this building Charles I. is said to have slept on the night of April 10, 1644, during his memorable march from Oxford to Marlborough: portions of the bedstead used by him were sold some time since and are now at Bisham Abbey, near Maidenhead: in the grounds is one of the largest holly trees in England; in the village are several other ancient houses, and not far off is the Punchbowl, a curious hollow in the hills, similar to the Manger at Woolstone; of the manor house of Frethorne, traces only can now be seen in a field close to the church: it is said to have been pulled down and re-erected on the hills above at Greendown. There have always been three manors in this parish. Sir John Gibbons bart. who is lord of the manor of Frethorne and William Schoolcroft Burton esq. who is lord of the manors of Rampanes, formerly held by the Fettyplace family, and also of that of Maltravers, are the principal landowners. The soil is chiefly clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, turnips &c. The parish comprises about 2,850 acres of good soil; rateable value £3,195; the population in 1881 was 516.

CHILTON is a parish in the hundred of Compton, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford, situate about 3¼ miles north from East Ilsley and 7 south-east from Wantage. The church of All Saints is a small structure in the Early English style, having chancel, nave, south aisle and square embattled tower containing 5 bells. The register dates from the year 1584. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late George Bowes Morland esq. and held since 1877 by the Rev. Anthony Thomas Morland B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Thomas' charity is £330 £3 per Cent. Consols, the interest to be distributed in bread. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel. Race horses are trained here. Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is chiefly chalk and light gravel; subsoil, chiefly chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 1,500 acres; rateable value, £1,985; and the population in 1881 was 276.

CHILTON FOLIATT is a parish partly in Berks but principally in Wiltshire: full particulars are given in the Directory of the latter county.

CHOLSEY (in Domesday, Celsea), is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, 2½ miles south-west from Wallingford, and one mile from Moulsford station on the Great Western railway, which intersects the parish, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford, and is separated from Oxfordshire by the river Thames. King Ethelred is said to have founded a monastery here in 986 as an atonement for the murder of his brother, Edward the Martyr, of which the Early Norman tower of the present church is almost the only fragment remaining, the rest having been destroyed by the Danes in 1006, when they burnt Reading and committed other ravages in the county. Henry I. granted the manor to Reading Abbey, and the abbots had a seat here. The church once belonged to the Abbey of Mont St. Michael, in Normandy. The church of St. Mary is a cruciform building, without aisles, and consists of chancel, nave, north and south transepts and an embattled central tower containing 6 bells: the chancel is very fine Early English, with three lancets on each side, and a good east window of three lights; the massive piers supporting the tower are Early Norman, but the upper part of the tower is Decorated, and has an octagonal stair-turret of the same date with a pyramidal roof; the south doorway of the nave is good Norman, with the zig-zag and billet mouldings, and sculptured caps, and the iron work is original; the nave has no windows on the north side, but two long and narrow Norman windows on the south side; in the nave and south transept are several brass inscriptions of very remote date, the most ancient of these, in Norman-French, is to "John Barfoot de Chelseye," who died 8th October, 1361; another and later brass commemorates Sir John Gate, one of the earliest vicars, who died 21st July, 1394; in the chancel an interesting brass, though somewhat mutilated, to John Mere, also a former vicar of this church, in eucharistic vestments and holding a chalice; he died 13th June, 1471; the church was partly repaired in 1849, and the chancel and transepts were restored in 1877; in the churchyard is a yew tree, the trunk of which is about six yards in circumference. The register dates from the year 1679. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £459 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1878 by the Rev. Richard William Perry Circuitt, T.A.K.C.L. Here is a Baptist chapel. The charities are £3 annually given in money to the poor. The County Lunatic Asylum, called the Moulsford Asylum, opened in September 1870, occupies a prominent position on the Wallingford road, three-quarters of a mile from Moulsford station and 2 miles from the town of Wallingford; it is built of red brick relieved with stone and coloured brick dressings, in a modified style of Early English; the asylum stands on an estate of 80 acres, extending from the Wallingford road to the banks of the river Thames, forming nearly a square, and is cheerful in aspect and convenient and suitable in arrangements; it was designed to hold 285 patients, at a cost of £68,600, but has been enlarged for an additional 250 patients at a further cost of about £55,500. The number of patients is now 463, of whom 194 are males and 269 females. The Comtesse de Broc is impropriator of the great tithes. Charles Morrison esq. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil and subsoil vary. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 4,447 acres; rateable value, £13,616; the population in 1881 was 1,735, which included 475 in the Lunatic Asylum, of whom 427 were patients.

WINTERBROOK 2 miles north-east is a part of this parish.

Parish Clerk, Job George Finch.

CLEWER, anciently CLEWORTH, is a village and scattered parish 1 mile west from Windsor, 6 miles south-east from Maidenhead and 23 from London, in the hundred of Ripplesmere, union and county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situate on the banks of the Thames. The parish consists of two divisions, one of which constitutes part of the town of Windsor, but is a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes only, and the other a country district; the latter is the portion given below, while the former is included with Windsor. The parish church of St. Andrew is a building chiefly in the Early Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, and a western tower with broach shingled spire, containing 5 bells: the nave and tower are Norman, but have Decorated and Perpendicular windows: in the church is a tablet to Field-Marshal Earl Harcourt, a brass with six verses to Martin Expence, who "shott with 100 men him selfe alone, at ould feild at Bray," and memorials to the family of Hayes, of Holyport; all the windows are stained: the font is of lead: the church was restored in 1858: the churchyard is remarkable for its quiet and secluded beauty, and the care with which it is tended; within it rests the remains of not a few soldiers, and many of the immediate retainers of the Royal Household, amongst whom may be named the late Sir Thomas M. Biddulph, K.C.B. keeper of Her Majesty's Privy Purse, who died in 1878; in the summer the whole ground is radiant with flowers, and is the resort of many passing pilgrims. The register dates from the year 1650. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £400, with 24¼ acres of glebe land and residence, in the gift of Eton College and held since 1880 by the Rev. Roland Errington M.A. Exeter College, Oxford. St. Agnes' church, a chapel of ease, situated at Clewer Green, is a building of brick, consisting of chancel and nave and will seat 150 persons. The Congregationalists have also a chapel here. DEDWORTH is a hamlet of New Windsor: All Saints' chapel of ease is a building of red brick, erected in memory of Mrs. Tudor, at the sole cost of the family; it has one stained window. The area is 347 acres, and the population is included with Clewer. There are charities of £53 yearly for distribution in money and kind, and £16 for apprenticing. A Church penitentiary, called the House of Mercy, in connection with the London Church Penitentiary Association, was founded in this parish in 1849 and was subsequently enlarged; about 80 penitents are continually maintained: the Bishop of the diocese is visitor; the spiritual superintendence is entrusted to clergymen of the Church of England, viz.:—the warden, Rev. T. T. Carter M.A. and the sub-warden, the Rev. W. H. Hutchings M.A.; the internal work of the house is carried on by Sisters of Mercy, ladies devoting themselves to it of free service and dwelling in the same house with the penitents who are under their care: the institution is endowed with an estate of 26 acres, but is dependent for its support on the contributions of the sisters and voluntary benefactions of friends; the management of the funds is under the control of a council composed of clergymen and laymen: in 1875 a new wing was opened to the south of the main building for the accommodation of 33 penitents, who are called Magdalens, in addition to the 80 abovementioned; the Rev. Baldwin Browne M.A. and Rev. J. E. Swallow are chaplain-priests in connection with the sisterhood and its works. Under the care and management of the Clewer Sisters there are also the following institutions, viz.:—A Convalescent Hospital, containing 64 beds, called St. Andrew's Convalescent Hospital, for invalids of both sexes, admitting besides a few incurable cases; in 1876 a children's ward was opened as an enlargement of St. Andrew's Hospital, capable of holding 30 beds: an Orphanage and Industrial Training School for 40 children, called St. John's Home, and St. Andrew's Cottage, a temporary home and house of rest for ladies of small means not invalids. Almshouses for 12 poor persons have lately been added and a chapel named St. John the Baptist was opened in October, 1881; it is in the Early Engligh style and consists of chancel, nave, and aisles; the chancel is separated from the nave by a carved oak screen, with brass gates: the whole of the windows are stained. The principal seats are:—St. Leonard's Hill, formerly called Gloucester Lodge, the seat of the Baron de Barry (of Portugal), a noble stone mansion in the French Gothic style, a great portion of which was rebuilt in 1876 on the site of the former building, erected by the Dowager Countess Waldegrave, afterwards Duchess of Gloucester, and for many years the residence of the Harcourt family; C. H. Howell, esq. was the architect; the house stands on an eminence in a well-timbered park of 200 acres and commands some of the finest scenery in the county, overlooking Windsor Park and Castle; from the top of the Water Tower several counties can be seen; it is said to stand on the site of a Roman encampment and a Roman lamp found here, and presented by Sir Hans Sloane to the Society of Antiquaries, has been adopted by that learned body as a crest: St. Leonard's, the seat of Sir Theodore Henry Brinckman bart. D.L.; Clewer Manor, the seat of Edmund B. Foster esq. J.P.; Clewer Park, the seat of Sir Daniel Gooch bart. M.P., D.L., J.P.; Clewer Lodge, the seat of Colonel Charles Richard Bulkeley; St. Leonard's House, the seat of Mrs. Fitzmaurice Scott; and Forest Hill Park, the seat of John Skelton esq. Surley Hall, an hotel on the Berks bank of the Thames, about a mile above Boveney lock, is a great resort for aquatic pleasure parties; in the meadow opposite, the boats' crews from Eton College assemble and sup at their annual aquatic festival on the 4th of June, the birthday of George III.; it has been rebuilt by Mr. Thomas Pennicott, the proprietor. The lordship of the manor is vested in the trustees of the late Arthur Vansittart esq. and Arthur Stovell, esq. who with the Baron de Barry, Edmund Benson Foster, esq. and Sir Daniel Gooch bart. M.P. are the chief land owners. The Windsor races are held in this parish on a meadow adjoining the river Thames. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, barley and peas. The area is 1,666 acres: rateable value, £37,315; the population in 1871 was 8,078, and in 1881 9,292.

Parish Clerk, James Payne.

COLESHILL is a parish partly in Wilts, in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 3¾ miles west-south-west from Faringdon, situated on the river Cole, which separates the Wilts and Berks portions. The church of All Saints is a fine old structure of Early English work, with Perpendicular inserted windows, and consists of chancel, nave with north aisle and south transept and western embattled and pinnacled tower, containing 5 bells, dated 1708 : the south transept was originally a chapel built in the latter part of the 15th century by Thomas Pleydell esq. an ancestor of the present patron ; the eastern window of the chancel, which represents The Nativity, was presented by the Earl of Radnor in 1787 ; there are four other stained windows ; here is a small but elegant mural monument by Rysbrach, to the Hon. Harriot Bouverie, dated 1751, also a marble monument with recumbent effigies to Sir Henry Pratt and his lady, 1647. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Radnor and held since 1874 by the Rev. Edward Banks B.A. of New Inn Hall, Oxford. The Pinsent charity, for apprenticing poor children of Coleshill and Great Coxwell whose parents never received parochial relief, by a decree of the Court of Chancery gives a premium of about £25 with each boy or girl ; the income of the charity is about £150 yearly. Coleshill House, the seat of the Earl of Radnor, a beautiful mansion, designed and built by Inigo Jones about the year 1660, is considered a perfect specimen of the style of that great architect ; its situation is on an eminence, commanding views of a fertile, undulating country, through which the Cole meanders and forms the western boundary of the county ; it stands in a park of 250 acres. Several cottages built of stone and of ornamental design, with gardens sloping and neatly laid out, are scattered over the village. The Earl of Radnor is lord of the manor and sole owner of the land. The soil is clay and loamy. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley, oats, turnips &c. The area is 2,301 acres ; rateable value, £3,361 ; the population in 1881 was 313, of which 10 were in Wilts.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Theobalds.

COMPTON (or COMPTON PARVA) is a pretty village and parish, with a station on the Didcot and Newbury branch of the Great Western railway, 9 miles north-east from Newbury, 2 east from East Ilsley, and 62 from London, in the hundred of Compton, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church assigned by various modern authorities, both to St. Mary and St. Nicholas, is situated about a quarter of a mile from the village ; it is a small building of flint of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, vestry, south porch and a western battlemented stone tower, containing 6 bells : the chancel has Early English lancet windows and similar windows light the nave on the north side ; the lower part of the tower is Transition Norman, but has a Perpendicular west window ; on the north side of the church are four Transition Norman arches, now blocked up, and the aisle destroyed : there is a plain Norman font : a brass is recorded here to Richard Pygott and Alice his wife, c. 1520. The register dates from the year 1553. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £310 with 5 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Col. Sir Robert J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. and held since 1853 by the Rev. John Spearman Wasey, of Trinity College, Oxford. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. South of the village is an encampment at the foot of the Down, known as "Perborough Castle," from which, eastwards, a good view is obtained of "Lowbury," another ancient military station and the highest hill in the county, being 830 feet above the sea level ; Perborough has been identified by Mr. Luke Lowsley, of Hampstead Norris, a well-known local antiquarian, with the ancient "Nachededorne." The vale on the north, towards Blewbury, is called "the Slad." Racehorses are trained here on the downs. Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. is lord of the manor of East Compton, and Capt. McRea and Capt. Borland are lords of the manor of West Compton. The principal landowners are the lords of the manor and John Brown esq. The soil is chalk and flint ; subsoil, chiefly chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 3,725 acres, of which 74 are downs ; rateable value, £3,827 ; and the population in 1881 was 632.

COOKHAM, formerly a market town, is a beautiful village and parish with a station on the branch of the Great Western railway from Maidenhead to High Wycombe, Thame and Oxford, 3 miles north from Maidenhead, 16 from Reading, 9 north-east from Henley and 28 from London, in the hundred and union of its own name, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the west bank of the river Thames, on the Bucks side of which are the highly picturesque and richly cultivated domains of Cliveden, Hedsor and Taplow. The portion of the river from Maidenhead up to Cookham Lock is considered the most beautiful in the whole course from Oxford to London. A portion of the town of Maidenhead is in this parish. The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient building of Early English architecture, with some portions Norman, comprising chancel, nave, aisles, tower with 6 bells: there are eleven stained windows. The register dates from the year 1662, 14th year of Charles II. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £430 with residence in the gift of J. T. Rogers esq. and held since 1864 by the Rev. Reginald Wellford Rogers M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge; the living was in the patronage of the Queen in 1297, about which period it was appropriated to the abbey of St Mary, Cirencester, which religious house presented to the vicarage in 1317. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The workhouse is a building of brick, built in 1837, to hold 250 inmates; particulars of union are given under Maidenhead. The charities are of the value of £70 yearly for distribution, Here are an extensive paper mill and boot and shoe manufactory, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The principal landowners are Henry Duncan Skrine esq. who is lord of the manor, John Thornton Rogers esq., Ernest Gardener esq., Edmund Mortimer Leycester esq. and the Vaughan trustees. The soil is various, but generally good corn land; subsoil, gravel, chalk and loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is £6,509 acres; rateable value, £36,685; the population in 1881, including part of the borough of Maidenhead and the district of Cookham Dean, was 6,841, of which 2,239 were in the rural and 4,620 in the urban district (Maidenhead town). Holy Trinity district has a population of 851.

Sexton, William Lane.

Ray Mill (RAYMEAD) is a hamlet in the parish of Cookham, one mile from the Taplow and Maidenhead station of the Great Western railway. Here is an extensive corn mill, worked by the river Thames at the Ray Mill Lock. For names of residents within the borough see Maidenhead.

Pinkneys Green is an irregular but picturesque hamlet in the parish of Cookham and partly in Cookham Dean ecclesiastical parish, 3 miles from Great Marlow and 4 from the Great Western railway station, Maidenhead.

GREAT COXWELL is a village and parish 2 miles south-west from Faringdon, 4 north-east from Highworth, 14 south-west from Abingdon, in the hundred, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Giles is an ancient structure comprising chancel, nave, north porch, and a battlemented western tower, with crocketed pinnacles at the angles, containing 5 bells, dated 1738: the chancel, restored by Lord Radnor in 1879, is good plain Early English work: the east window of 3 lancet lights, is flanked on each side by a plain lancet niche; there is also a niche over the communion table, with a locker at each side: in the south wall is a piscina, with shelf and a low-side window: the nave, restored in (1882) at a cost of £400, has Perpendicular lights inserted on the south side; there is a western gallery and remains of a turret leading to the rood loft: at the junction of the chancel and nave is a sanctus bell gable: the tower, 15 feet square, is Early Perpendicular: there are good brass effigies, with inscription, to William Morys, farmer, and Joan his wife, 2 sons and a daughter, c. 1500; and inscriptions to Robert Russell, gent. citizen and draper of London, 1630; Ann, wife of Thomas Mores, 1632; Margaret, wife of Francis Mores, 1675; Robert Spindler, 1743; Francis, wife of Bond Spindler M.A. rector of St. Martin's, Oxford, 1743; Walter Mathew, 1698. In the churchyard is a memorial to the Rev. David Collyer B.A. for nearly 50 years vicar here, and a benefactor to the parish, and to Maria, his daughter, wife of Henry Stevens; he died 21 Oct. 1724, and was the author of the "Sacred Interpreter" The register dates from the year 1654. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly value £250 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1877 by the Rev. Richard Hope Hooper, M.A. Lincoln College, Oxford. A Congregational chapel was erected in 1875. Pinsent's charity, in which the parish of Coleshill participates, is for apprenticing poor children. On the top of Badbury Hill, a short distance from the village, on the north side of the turnpike road from Faringdon to Highworth, are the remains of a Roman camp of a circular form, 200 yards in diameter and surrounded by a ditch 10 yards wide. Contiguous to the village is a farm-house, being the remains of a religious establishment of Cistercians, founded by the abbots of Beaulieu, New Forest, to whom King John granted the manor in 1205: the barn is 148 feet in length and 40 feet in width, with a spacious porch on one side and a smaller one on the other; the roof, high-pitched and internally presenting, from its peculiar construction, a very singular perspective, is supported by two ranges of wooden pillars resting on pedestals of stone. The Earl of Radnor is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is various; subsoil, clay and oolite rock. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and turnips. The area is 1,407 acres: rateable value, £2,149; and the population in 1881 was 289.

LITTLE COXWELL is a township and chapelry in the parish, hundred, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, distant one mile and a half south from Faringdon, and 18½ miles from Oxford. The church of St. Mary consists of a chancel, nave, south porch, and a small centre bell gable containing 2 bells: it is principally of the Norman and Early English Transition period; the east window is flanked on each side by dissimilar cinquefoil headed niches, but its tracery is of the Decorated style; in the south wall of the chancel is a piscina: the nave has a Norman south door and Early English and Perpendicular windows; over the western gallery is a small circular stained window; the pulpit is of oak, richly carved. The register dates from 1582. The living is annexed to the vicarage of Faringdon, joint yearly value £260, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. Charles Simeon and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Edward Chapman, who resides at Faringdon. There are charities of £27 yearly value. The Coles pits, situated a short distance from the village and extending over an area of 14 acres, are objects of considerable interest, as they are supposed to have been habitations of the ancient Britons; they number about 60, are circular, and vary in depth from 7 to 22 feet. The principal landowners are the Earl of Radnor, who is lord of the manor, and the trustees of the late Mr. Charles Belcher. The soil is a light loam; subsoil gravel of a bright yellow hue, which is much used for walks and avenues. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 938 acres; rateable value £1,514; the population in 1881 was 250.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE.

Wellington College was founded and erected by national subscription in honour of the Great Duke; Her Majesty laid the foundation stone in June, 1856, and it was opened by her in January 1859. The number of boys at present in the school is 400, 80 of whom, being the orphan sons of officers, are maintained and educated upon the foundation, and stand in all respects upon an equal footing with the other scholars; the property of the college is vested in a board of governors, who make regulations in conformity with their charter and elect foundationers; the governors appoint the master of the college and by him the tutors and assistant masters are appointed: there are two departments in the school, one classical and general on the usual public school system, preparing for the universities; the other modern and mathematical, preparing for Woolwich and other examinations in which mathematics occupy a primary place; there are exhibitions to the universities and scholarships tenable at the school, open to all the scholars: the building, which is in the style of Louis Quinze, consists of two quadrangles, surrounded by cloisters and divided from each other by the great school, a spacious and lofty room: in the cloister are placed upwards of 50 bronze busts (mostly by Theed) of the generals and private and political friends of the Great Duke, and eight fine statues adorn the principal fronts: the smaller schools, the masters' common room and the offices form the sides of the quadrangles, and over these are the rooms of the assistant masters and the dormitories of the boys, which are so arranged as to give to each a separate room; the south side of the building is occupied by the dining-hall, which corresponds in size to the great school; two dwelling-houses for senior assistant masters form the northern side of the college; the lodge of the head master is detached on the south front and in the grounds are several houses of masters who receive boarders: two lofty towers give access to the dormitories and in their highest stories contain water-tanks and the furnaces and other apparatus connected with the ventilation and warming of the whole building, and it has been necessary to add two more dormitories.

The chapel, an exquisite building, erected from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. stands at the south-east corner of the college, with which it is connected by a cloister: the style is Gothic, with some characteristics of the Gothic of North Italy, and it is remarkable for the beauty of its proportions and the delicate finish of its details: from the roof an elegant and richly decorated flèche of oak and zinc rises to the height of 120 feet: the east end of the chapel terminates in an apse, round which, both within and without, runs an arcade, which outside is continued along the south side of the chapel: the carving throughout the building is very elaborate, and chiefly represents groups of natural flowers, especially those growing in the neighbourhood: a finely-carved oak screen and stalls were erected in memory of the Prince Consort, one of whose last public acts was to lay the foundation stone of the chapel.

The boys' library, a commodious room, finished in 1863, stands between the chapel and the college and is in the same style as the college; the books are arranged in classes, in the manner of college libraries in the Universities: it contains also some remarkable memorials both of the Duke and the Prince Consort. A museum of interesting objects of natural history and antiquities has been formed.

The college grounds consist of an estate of 430 acres, 20 of which are sown and turfed to form a playground; the plantations are very extensive and flourishing; a double avenue of Wellingtonias, the gift of the Prince Consort, will be a noble feature of the place in future years: the Prince's well-known interest in the college and its constitution and system extended even to the details of the laying-out of its grounds and the arranging of its statues: an admirable system of irrigation utilises all the sewage and fertilises a farm of "Bagshot sand": in the front of the college, at a little distance, are three small artificial lakes for skating and bathing; near the railway station and not far from the entrance to the college grounds is a commodious hotel, "The Wellington," erected by John Walter esq. M.P. principally for the use of the friends of the youths at the college; there is also a complete range of stabling for the convenience of gentlemen living at a distance and hunting in the neighbourhood.

CULHAM is a parish partly in this county, but principally in that of Oxford, and full particulars will be found in the directory of Oxfordshire.

CUMNOR is a large parish in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, county court district of Oxford, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated 5 miles north from Abingdon, 4 west from Oxford, and is on the road from Abingdon to Witney, and bounded on the west by the river Isis, which separates it from Oxfordshire. The name is derived by some from Cymen, a prince of the South Saxons, and A. S. ora, the shore of a river or sea. The church of St. Michael is a building of mixed styles, and consists of a chancel, nave, north aisle, a chapel at the east end of the south aisle, and a battlemented western tower containing 6 bells and a clock: the walls are Transition Norman, with various insertions of later date: the tower is almost Early English, but has a round-headed west doorway, the tower arch being a fine example of late Transition work: against the north wall of the chancel is the rich altar-tomb of Sir Anthony Forster, whose epitaph, of 32 verses, speaks highly of him as being amiable and accomplished: the tomb has brasses of himself in armour, and his wife Ann, with several children, c. 1570: there are other brasses to Catherine, wife of Henry Staverton, gent. 1577: and to — Staverton and his wife Edith, c. 1580: there is also a memorial to Dr. Benjamin Buckler, formerly vicar, and editor of the "Stemmata Chicheleiana," and in the churchyard is the tomb of Richard Brown, a shepherd, aged 109. The register, including Seacourt, dates from the year 1559 for baptisms; marriages and burials, 1504. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £400, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Abingdon, and held since 1877, by the Rev. Samuel Young Neyler Griffith M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The Rev. Dr. Buckler left an annuity, value £5 3s. 2d., to be expended in the purchase of Bibles and Prayer Books for the poor; the Rev. John Slatter, £1 10s. yearly for the purchase of blankets for the poor; Mr. William Sellwood, £4 11s. annually, for the parishes of Besselsleigh and Cumnor alternately, and to be laid out in the purchase of foul-weather jackets; Mr. G. Noble left two £5 notes to be lent to poor persons, one at a time, and to be repaid at the rate of 10 groats per quarter; Mr. Carey Godfrey, the interest of £100, to be laid out in rewards for the Sunday School: Mr. H. Hall, the yearly interest of £100, to be divided amongst four industrious persons not receiving parish relief; Mrs. M. Peacock, the interest of £500, £3 of which towards the school and £12 to be divided amongst three poor widows who are not on the parish; Mr. W. Slatter, the interest of £100, to be divided between the school of this parish and the Blue Coat School at Oxford. The poor's land of 7 acres and 3 cottages produce £22 yearly. The manor at a very early period belonged to the abbots and convent of Abingdon, by whom the manor house was used as a kind of Sanitarium. In 1560 it was purchased by Anthony Forster, during whose occupancy occurred the tragic event so vividly told in the pages of "Kenilworth." Amy, the young and beautiful daughter of Sir John Robsart of Sheen Court, Surrey, was married to Lord Robert Dudley, June 4th, 1550, in the presence of Edward VI., being then only 18 years of age; on the 8th September, 1560, while staying at Forster's house at Cumnor, she met with her death at the murderous hands of her host and his accomplice Sir Richard Varney; the latter died a miserable death in London: Forster, offering to divulge the particulars of the deed, was strangled in prison by Dudley's order, and the Earl himself was accidentally poisoned in 1588 at Cornbury manor house. The remains of the hapless lady were brought from Cumnor to Gloucester (now Worcester) College, Oxford, and thence taken, with great solemnity, to St. Mary's Church and there interred, the funeral being attended by the University and City authorities, the officers of the Heralds' College, and many others, as described in the Dugdale MS., British Museum. In 1874, the Rev. J. W. Benyon, then vicar of St. Mary's, caused the following inscription to be placed on the altar steps: "In a vault of brick, at the upper end of this quire, was buried Amy Robsart, wife of Lord Robert Dudley K.G. Sunday, 22 September, A.D. 1560." Hardly anything now remains of the old Hall, which was pulled down in 1881. It was a quadrangular building, with some good Decorated windows and doors; the windows, with their stained glass, were removed to Witham Abbey, and one of the doors, with the inscription "IANVA VITÆ VERGUM DOMINI" above it, is in the wall surrounding Wytham churchyard; two coffin slabs, with crosses, were also removed to Wytham. Forster's initials, with the date 1571, appeared over another door, but the building was of earlier date. The village inn, a picturesque old-fashioned hostelry, is still "The Bear and Ragged Staff." The soil is various, consisting of stone brash, sand and loam; the subsoil is various, principally limestone. The crops are a succession of grain. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil: St. John's College and Merton College, Oxford, are also landowners. The area is 5,703 acres: rateable value, £6,739: the population in 1881 was 1011, CHAWLEY, three-quarters of a mile north-east; DEANCOURT, 1½ miles south-east; SWINFORD, 2 miles north-west; HENWOOD, 1 mile south-east; FITCHAMPSTED, 1 mile north, and ROCKLEY, 1¾ miles south, are hamlets.

DENCHWORTH is a parish partly in the hundred of Ock and partly in that of Wantage, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford, about 3 miles west from Wantage Road station, 2½ north-by-west from Wantage, on a feeder of the river Ock. The church of St. James, which was thoroughly repaired in 1852, under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A., is an ancient cruciform edifice of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south chapels, and an embattled tower on the north side, containing 4 bells, dated 1624, 1733, 1868 and 1869: the chancel is Perpendicular, and has sedilia formed in the sill of the south-east window: the nave has Perpendicular windows and a late roof: the south doorway is a good example of Norman work: the tower is apparently Early English at the base, the upper part being rather poor Perpendicular: in the south chapel are some memorials to the Geering family and in the chancel are brasses to Oliver Hyde esq. 1516, and Agnes, his wife, with effigies; William Hyde esq. 1557, and Margery, his wife, 1562, 12 sons and 8 daughters, with effigies and a punning inscription; and William Hyde esq. 1567, and his wife Alice, also with effigies; the male figures are all in armour; the Hyde brass of 1562 is a rescript or palimpsest; it originally belonged to Bisham Abbey, and has on its proper obverse side an inscription commemorating the foundation of that abbey by Sir William de Montagu in 1338, and stating that the foundation stone was laid, at his request, by King Edward III., after the battle of Halidon Hill, near Berwick, 1333; there is another brass to William Say, 1493, robbed of its shields and effigy, and the church also contains various monuments to the families of Geering and Frogley; in the chancel is a monument erected by Richard L. Cotton D.D., late provost of Worcester College, Oxford, to his two brothers; there is also a hagioscope in the north chapel, and faint traces of a rood-loft, as well as a library of 150 ancient books, formed in 1693 by the Rev. Ralph Kedden, vicar, Mr. Geering, churchwarden, and Mr. Edward Brewster, stationer, of London, some of which are chained; this library, formerly in a room over the church porch, was transferred to the vicarage at the restoration of the church; it included an edition of the "Golden Legend," printed by Caxton in 1483, and now in the Bodleian, and it still has a Cranmer's Bible, four volumes of Aquinas, one of Homilies, a copy of Burnet on the Articles, given by the Bishop himself, and a Life of Christ by Ludolphus Saxe. The church will seat 160 persons, eight pews only being appropriated; an altar cloth, worked at St. Mary's Home, Wantage, and flower vases, have been presented by Miss Pye and friends; service books by H. B. Hyde esq.; brass standards, for lights, by Mrs. Walker, of the manor house, besides other gifts; the stained east window was inserted by the exertions of Mr. and Mrs. Walker, and the ancient shields in the windows of the south transept or chapel, were restored by members of the Hyde family. The earliest date in the old registers, which are much mutilated, is 1538; there is also a register of briefs from 1707 to 1740. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value of £130 with residence and 54 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Provost and fellows of Worcester College, Oxford, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Charles Henry Tomlinson M.A. formerly fellow, tutor and chaplain of that college. The Baptists have a place of worship here. There is a coal and clothing club for poor widows and aged and infirm persons, and for poor married couples having children in the schools; and two sets of allotments as field gardens, one called "Poors-piece" and the other belonging to the vicar. Worcester College are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Worcester and Magdalen Colleges, Oxford. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is about 1,060 acres; rateable value £2,297; the population in 1881 was 249.

DIDCOT (or DUDCOTE) is a village and parish and a station and junction of the Oxford and Birmingham branch with the main line of the Great Western, 9 miles west from Wallingford, 6½ south from Abingdon, 53 from London by rail and 10 from Oxford, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a small but interesting edifice, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, picturesquely situated on high ground north of the village, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a low tower with short octagonal broach spire, both covered with shingles, and containing 4 bells: the nave is of 3 bays, and has arcades of wide pointed Early English arches, on low clustered piers, the central pier, against which the font is placed, being octagonal, and the other two cylindrical, with caps formed by a succession of projecting flat fillets: the south aisle is Decorated, and has segmented-headed windows, with reticulated tracery: at its western end, slightly raised above the floor, is the recumbent effigy, in stone, of a bishop or mitred abbot of the 13th century, and conjectured to be the first of the mitred abbots of Abingdon, c. 1268: at the south-east corner of the nave is a piscina, and a little bracket for the figure of a saint: the chancel has four pointed Decorated windows, and the east window is of three lights; below it is a simple arcaded reredos of stone, and on the north side a square piscina; the pulpit is also of stone, with traceried panels; the stairs to the rood-loft remain, as also the upper door, over which is a curious two-light window; the east window and others in the chancel are stained, and the west window which is Perpendicular, retains some scraps of old glass; the north aisle, in which stands the organ, is modern; there are mural monuments to the families of Deacon, Emerton, and Taylor, 1820-60, and floor stones to Francis Dandridge, gent. 1759: Robert Lydell de Dydcott, generosus, 1677; Richard Blake of Dudcott, 1709; Benjamin Banner A.M. fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford, and 24 years rector here, and rector also of Whittington, Lanc. 1817; Thomas Collins, and Mary his wife, 1800; in the churchyard, west of the parish, is a fine old yew, and on the east side a restored cross, on two steps; west of the tower, are three coped stones to Ruth Ashworth, 1853; Catherine Ashworth, 1878, and Philip Sidney Ashworth, rector of Bredicot-cum-Tibberton, Worc., 1864; on the exterior walls are memorials to the family of Sayer, 1721-36, with arms and mantling; Hayward, 1759-82; Muriel, wife of Edward Sawyer, of Didcot, 1641, and her husband, with the arms of Sawyer and Backerton; to the family of Taylor, 1719-63, and on a stone to Catherine Loder, widow, 1698. The register dates from the year 1613. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £399 with residence, in the gift of the Principal and fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, and held, since 1851, by the Rev. John Ashworth Ashworth M.A. formerly fellow of that college. There is a Corn Exchange, and a market is held on Tuesday. On the rising ground, south of the road leading to Wallingford and Harwell, and south of the station, a large number of houses have been built, forming a new village, which being within the parish of Hagbourne, is known as North Hagbourne, or Hagbourne New Town, which see. Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chiefly clay; subsoil clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 1,094 acres of good arable and meadow land; rateable value £5,574; the population in 1881 was 373.

DRAYTON is a parish in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford, 2½ miles south-west-by-south from Abingdon, 2½ miles north from Steventon station on the Great Western railway, on the borders of Oxfordshire and near the road from Abingdon to Newbury. The Wilts and Berks canal passes through this parish. The church of St. Peter is a Gothic structure, with chancel, nave and square embattled tower with 8 bells; a handsome chancel was erected in 1872, chiefly at the cost of the vicar; it contains a stained window representing The Crucifixion: a stone porch has been recently added, covered with lead and having carved stone parapets, while the floor has letters of lead run in the stone as follows: "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God." This church has for many years past been superintended by Mr. E. Dolby, architect, and further works are contemplated: the font is plain round Norman; in the north wall of the "ladye chapel" there is an old aumbry, and in the south wall a credence and piscina; there are two other piscinæ in the church; in digging a vault in the church in the year 1814 the workmen came upon some elaborate and beautiful old carvings in alabaster, representing The Betrayal, The Scourging, The Crucifixion (now missing) and The Entombment of Our Saviour, also The Adoration and The Annunciation. The churchyard cross was restored in 1871. The earliest existing register dates from 1754, the earlier ones having been destroyed at the great fire of Drayton in the year 1780. The living is a vicarage, separated from St. Helen, Abingdon, by Order in Council, November 4th, 1867; the value is about £150 yearly, with residence, in the gift of Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. and held since 1878, by the Rev. Francis Edward Robinson M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, J.P. for Berks. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. The charities amount to about £22 yearly, and there are five cottages for the poor at a very small rent. In a part of the Manor House, which is of great antiquity, was formerly a Catholic chapel, now used as a lumber room. Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. who is lord of the manor, and Messrs. Caudwell and Dewe are principal landowners. The soil is loamy and clay; subsoil gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 1,950 acres; rateable value, £355; the population in 1881 was 622.

Parish Clerk, William Welch.

EASTHAMPSTEAD is a village and parish and head of a union, in the hundred of Ripplesmere, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles east from Wokingham, 9 south-west from Windsor and 29 from London; the Bracknell station of the Staines and Wokingham branch of the South Western railway is situated in this parish. The church of St. Mary was built on the site of the old one and opened in May 1867; it is a handsome and substantial building, consisting of a chancel, nave, with south porch and baptistery, north aisle and south transept for the Downshire family, and south aisle set apart as a vestry and organ chambers; the style of architecture adopted by the architect, Mr. Hugall, is an early type, embracing Byzantine and First-Pointed details; the various mouldings are bold and massive; the windows are large and filled with stained glass; there is a considerable quantity of Devon marble introduced and the carving of the capitals and corbels is rich in design and exquisite in workmanship; the chancel fittings are of oak and a sedile for the bishop is formed by the elongation of the north window sill; double sedilia occupy the south window; the communion table is of oak; the pulpit, on a stone base, is composed of portions of that fixed in the old church in 1631; in 1876 a stained east window was inserted in memory of the late Marquis of Downshire; an ancient yew tree of very remarkable growth which stands by the church measures 63 feet in circumference. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £588, with residence, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford, and held since 1861 by the Rev. Osborne Gordon B.D. late student (fellow) of Christ Church. The fuel allotment has been sold, and the amount invested produces £60 yearly for coals; there are various charities, together £80 yearly, for distribution. There are the remains of a Roman camp. Easthampstead Park is the seat of the Marquess of Downshire; the mansion is a spacious brick and stone building in the Elizabethan style, standing in a park of upwards of 350 acres in extent. South Hill Park, the seat of Lady Hayter, is a compact residence of brick faced with cement, standing in a park of 800 acres, in which there are four lakes; the private gardens are very beautiful, being laid out in terraces. The principal landowners are the Crown, the Marquess of Downshire, who is lord of the manor, and Lady Hayter. The soil is gravel and sand; subsoil clay. The chief crops are wheat and oats. The area is 5,186 acres, of which 1,000 acres or more is heath, the property of the Crown; rateable value, £6,405; and the population in 1871 was 884, and in 1881, 1,172.

EATON HASTINGS is a scattered parish, 3½ miles north-west from Faringdon, in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; the river Isis separates the parish from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Michael and All Angels is a very old structure in the Norman and Early English style, date unknown; it is a small building, consisting of chancel, nave and turret, with 1 bell: the chancel was restored in 1872 and the nave in 1874, at a total cost of £700: there are five stained windows. The register dates from the year 1500. The living is a rectory, yearly commuted rent-charge £378 5s. with residence, in the gift of and held since 1869 by the Rev. Frederick John Walker M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Robert Campbell esq. who is lord of the manor and Mr. William Thomas Kinch are chief landowners. The soil is a strong clay; subsoil, clay; the chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and oats; the area is 1,511 acres; rateable value, £1,923; the population in 1881 was 133.

ENBORNE is a parish 3 miles west-south-west from Newbury and 8 east from Hungerford, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is very ancient, and especially interesting as a specimen of very Early Christian architecture, and is situated on a slight elevation by the side of the road leading from Newbury to Hamstead Marshall, at the head of a charming valley; it consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and a bell-cot, on Early wooden framework, at the west end: that there was at one time a north aisle is evident from the piers and arches of an arcading being now built into the existing north wall; these have good Norman caps and bases: the chancel is Early English, with lancet windows at the sides, and a debased Perpendicular east window: there is a double Early English piscina, with a locker at the back: the chancel arch is Norman, but has undergone some alteration: the nave and south aisle are separated by an arcade of three Early Norman arches, with circular pillars and sculptured capitals: in the aisle are some very early oak benches; and the walls disclose some traces of fresco painting: the font is cylindrical and arcaded: there are no monuments of special interest. The register dates from the year 1726. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £437 with residence and 80 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Craven and held since 1850 by the Rev. Charles Augustus Johnson M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected 1844 and rebuilt 1871, with sittings for 50 persons. There is a poor's allotment of 20A. 1R. 22P. and a charity producing £11 a year for church purposes. The Earl of Craven, who is lord of the manor and Robert Harris Valpy esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel, clay and loam; subsoil, clay and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, roots and pasture. The area is 2,485 acres; rateable value, £3,811; the population in 1881 was 413.

ENGLEFIELD is a village and parish 4½ miles from London, one mile north-west from Theale railway station, 6 miles west from Reading and 4 from Pangbourne station, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. This parish is said to take its name from being the site of a battle fought here between the Danes and Saxons, A.D. 871. The church of St. Mark, restored in 1857, and the chancel rebuilt, at the sole expense of Richard Benyon esq. is a building of stone, consisting of chancel, with north aisle, nave, south aisle and a tower with broach spire, containing 6 bells, erected in 1868, also by the liberality of Mr. Benyon: the north aisle was added to the chancel in 1514, and is known as the Englefield chapel, having been for a series of years the burial place of that family, which became extinct on the death of Sir H. C. Englefield bart. in 1822: Sir Thomas Englefield, Speaker of the House of Commons, the founder of the chapel, is here buried; his monument, an elegant altar-tomb, surmounted by a canopy and once bearing brasses, stands on the north side of the communion table; and there are other tombs and monuments of the Englefield family, formerly residents here, in the chapel itself: there is also a monument to Charles Benyon, lieutenant in H.M.S. "Ajax," killed while attempting to board a French vessel off the Isle of Elba: on the north wall is a mural tablet of black marble to John Powlet, fifth marquess of Winchester, who held Basing House for four years for King Charles I. and died March 6th, 1674; the epitaph is by Dryden and below is a dedicatory inscription; the monument is surmounted by the arms of the Marquess in white marble and the motto "Donec pax redit terris"; a portion of this monument, hitherto missing, together with three other sepulchral stones, were discovered in the pavement of the church in September, 1878, during some alterations then proceeding, and the four slabs are now fixed upon the surface; that belonging to the monument of the Marquess bears a long inscription, detailing his public services, marriages and issue; the others are inscribed to Honora de Burgh, Marchioness of Winchester, 1661; John Powlet, eldest son of the foregoing and the Marquess, 1660; and to Honora Powlett, their youngest daughter, 1660: in the south aisle is a beautifully sculptured mural monument, said to be the work of Roubiliac, to Mary, wife of Richard Benyon esq. 1777, and another to Powlet Wright esq. 1779: over the pulpit is a mural brass inscribed to Richard de Beauvoir Benyon esq. 1854: in the south aisle, under two obtuse arches in the wall, are two recumbent effigies; one of these is the stone figure of a knight in full armour, with a surcoat and his shield upon his arm, and has been supposed to represent one Alwyne, a Crusader, A.D. 1217, although Capt. Richard Symonds, in his "Diary of the Marches &c." 1644, says that the arms of Inglefield had been painted on the breast: the other figure is that of a lady in the costume of the fourteenth century and is carved out of a solid piece of oak: the arcade between the nave and south aisle has Early English arches with very bold mouldings, on plain round massive pillars, with Transition Norman caps: in the chancel is a piscina, discovered in removing part of the wall for the introduction of a window and sedilia: in 1878 a massive signet ring, of pure gold, of sixteenth century date and unusually large size, was found in the churchyard; it bears a sard, engraved with a helmeted head in profile, enclosed by a cable moulding, and is in possession of the rector. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1567; burials 1569. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £330 with residence and 26 acres of glebe, let for £35, in the gift of Richard Benyon esq. and held since 1881 by the Rev. Charles Henry Travers M.A. Queen's College, Oxford, and rural dean of Bradfield. There is a charity of £27 yearly, left by a donor unknown, for apprenticing poor children; also a gift of £2 for bread on St. Thomas' day. Richard Benyon esq. D.L., J.P. and High Steward of Reading, is lord of the manor and principal landowner; his residence, Englefield House, is a fine Tudor mansion, charmingly situated on a gently rising slope of the fine deer-park, facing south and overlooks the valley of the Kennet, its many turreted pinnacles giving it a noble appearance; it was built by one of the Paulets, but reduced and modernized by one of their descendants, Paulet Wright esq. and has also been renovated and refaced by the present owner, who has added a new entrance hall and converted the old hall into a magnificent library: on Sir Francis Englefield being attainted of high treason in 1564, the manor became the property of Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary to Queen Elizabeth: on the occasion of her visiting this house, in order to save Her Majesty the trouble of ascending the staircase, Sir F. Walsingham built a gallery 120 feet long, so as to reach the level of the hill outside at the back of the house; this gallery, reduced to 90 feet by modern alterations within the house, is now used, with Mr. Benyon's permission, for parochial meetings, school fêtes and similar useful purposes; from the second storey of the building, along its passage, an exit is gained to the park outside: a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, presented by herself in commemoration of this visit, still hangs on a wall in the library: in the hall and corridor are some exquisite sculptures by Munro, Foley, Power and others: the drawing room is a very fine apartment, with a ceiling of the four seasons; in one of the upper rooms is a bedstead brought from Gidea Hall, Essex, and said to have been used by Charles I.: from these apartments and from the tower magnificent views are afforded of the beautiful woodland scenery, which is here the greatest charm of the far stretching landscape: the gardens are very attractive, and many visitors from the neighbourhood avail themselves of the opportunity of inspecting them, kindly given during the months of August and September by the proprietor. Elias Ashmole, the well-known herald and antiquary, retired to this village in 1647 and amused his leisure with botany and chemistry; in 1650 he published, under the assumed name of James Hasalle, his "Fasciculus Chemicus," and in 1652 "Theatrum Chemicum Britannicum;" "The History of the Order of the Garter," published in 1672, is a laborious and accurate work, but the subsequent "Antiquities of Berkshire" can scarcely be regarded as anything more than a collection of very incomplete notes on churches, with other scattered memoranda: during his lifetime he founded, by the bequest of the younger Tradescant, the museum at Oxford, which now bears his name, and died May 18th, 1692, aged 76. The Rev. Benjamin Woodbridge M.A. rector of Newbury, and ejected in 1662, died here in 1684. The soil is gravel; subsoil, clay and chalk. The land is chiefly in grass and woods. The area is 1,427 acres; rateable value, £2,842; the population in 1871 was 356.

Parish Clerk, George Swadling.

FARINGDON (or GREAT FARINGDON, formerly CHIPPING FARINGDON) is a well-built market and union town, head of a county court district, parish, station (a branch of the Great Western railway from Uffington, having been opened in 1864), and polling-place for the county, 14 miles west from Abingdon, 70 from London, 25 north-west from Newbury, 17 south-west from Oxford, 35 from Reading and 9 south-west from Wantage, partly in the hundred of Faringdon and partly in that of Shrivenham, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The town, which is situated on an eminence, dates as far back as the ninth century. Edward the Elder died here in 925 and the dynasty had a palace here. In the eleventh century the Earl of Gloucester erected a castle, which was demolished by King Stephen. During the civil wars Faringdon House was twice attacked, but unsuccessfully, by the Parliamentary forces and considerable damage done to the town and church. The church of All Saints is an ancient and interesting edifice, containing examples of the architecture of each age from the Norman of William I. to the Perpendicular of Henry VIII. and even later; it is cruciform, with square tower at intersection, and having chancel, nave, with north and south aisles and double transepts; the Pye chapel of the chancel was added about the end of the sixteenth century: the only remains of pure Norman, dating about 1070, is the north door of the nave, now disused: a large portion of the church is of the semi-Norman or Transition style, of about 1180, notably the nave, with its piers and aisle arches and the south door; this latter exhibits a remarkably good specimen of Early English ironwork; the nave arches are semi-circular, supported by massive cylindrical piers with richly foliated capitals: the tower is Early English work, sustained by four great piers, lined with clusters of semi-cylindrical shafts, each furnished with a capital of elegant and varied form; this portion was probably erected about 1200: the chancel is also Early English, of about the same period; it is remarkable for its great length and extreme simplicity: the canopy of the sedilia is rich Decorated work of about 1300; the Unton chapel of the north transept also belongs to this style, about 1370; the window is remarkable as having a foliated canopy in its splay: the windows of the north aisle of the nave are Perpendicular, probably inserted about 1400: the west window of the nave is about a century later: the Pye chapel of the chancel was probably added soon after the Reformation, about 1600: the tower contains an excellent peal of 8 bells: the interior of the edifice was thoroughly restored in 1854; the east window and five others of the chancel, two in the south transept and two in the south aisle of the nave, are stained: in the Unton chapel is an alabaster tomb, with recumbent effigies of Sir Thomas Unton and Elizabeth his wife, of Wadley: adjoining, on the east wall, is a marble monument to Sir Edward Unton, who married Annie, countess of Warwick, daughter of Protector Somerset: on the west wall is a tablet to Sir Henry Unton, ob. 1596, ambassador to France for Queen Elizabeth; this monument was erected by his widow, Dorothy, in 1606; the kneeling effigy of this lady formerly stood on a pedestal at the foot, but is now in the Pye chapel: in this chapel, on a buttress of the tower, is a mural monument to Lionell Rich, ob. 1742: against the north wall is a noble monument of white marble, with blue columns, supporting cherubs of alabaster, to Jane Pye, ob. 1706: another monument of variegated marble, supported by columns of the Tuscan order, is in memory of Annie Pye: there are many other monuments and brasses to the Parker, Purefoy, Pleydell and other families, but these have been mostly mutilated or removed from their original positions. The register dates from the year 1582. The living is a vicarage, present income is £260, the neighbouring parish and church of Little Coxwell being attached to the living, which is in the gift of Simeon's trustees and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Edward Chapman, surrogate. There are Wesleyan, Congregational, Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels, and a meeting house for the Society of Friends. There is a cemetery on the western side of the town, opened for burials in 1865; it is about 1½ acres in extent, without mortuary chapels and is under the management of trustees. The town hall, an old building now disused, is situated in the centre of the town, from which the streets diverge. A Corn Exchange was built in 1863, with rooms for the savings bank and reading rooms attached; it is a Gothic stone building situated in the Corn Market. Sir H. Unton left in 1591 £38 yearly, derived from land for apprentice fees and blankets for the benefit of the poor of the Port of Faringdon, and there is £15 from Eleanor Goff's charity, 1756, for apprentice fees; Johanna Alford, 1721, £20 to ten poor families annually: there are several others for bread, coals and clothing, amounting to about £50 yearly; they are distributed by trustees. A market is held here every Tuesday and the great cattle market on the first Tuesday in every month, which is well supplied with cattle of every kind; there are statute fairs on the Tuesday before and Tuesday after Old Michaelmas day. The town is governed by the Rural Sanitary Authority. There is a brewery; the trade is chiefly local. Faringdon Hill, on the east, is of considerable altitude, crowned with a plantation of lofty firs; a circular and transverse walk round and through the plantation is a favourite promenade, commanding beautiful and extensive views of the surrounding country. There is a weekly newspaper, the "Faringdon Advertiser and Vale of White Horse Gazette," published every Saturday. Radcot Bridge, over the Isis, which separates this county from Oxon, once the scene of a battle between Robert de Vere, favourite of Richard II. and the discontented barons, is about 2½ miles north; in the south-eastern distance, about 6½ miles, is the celebrated White Horse (from which the vale is named), rudely cut by our Saxon forefathers on the side of the hill in celebration of the great victories gained by Alfred and his brother over the Danes. Faringdon House, re-erected, 1780, by Pye, the Poet-Laureate, is the seat of Daniel Bennett esq. J.P. it is a handsome building in the Italian style, situated on an eminence in an avenue of fine elm trees, extending nearly two miles, having fine views of the counties of Oxford and Gloucester. Daniel Bennett esq. is lord of the manor. A court leet is held annually at the Crown inn. The principal landowners are Oriel College, Oxford; Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P.; Daniel Bennett esq. J.P.; Robert Campbell esq. J.P. and Thomas Hayward Southby esq. The area is 6,550 acres; rateable value (including Littleworth) £14,668; the population in 1881 was 3,139.

FARINGDON (LITTLE). See OXFORDSHIRE DIRECTORY.

FARNBOROUGH is a village and parish 11 miles north from Newbury and 5 south-by-south-east from Wantage, in the hundred of Compton, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on the Downs. The church of All Saints is an ancient fabric and has a chancel, nave and fine stone tower: it contains several monuments of the family of Price, formerly residents here. The register dates from the year 1735. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. John Whitehurst M.A. and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Wood M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford, who resides at Newbury street, Wantage. The rectory house is an ancient mansion, commanding fine views over the Downs. A Free school for boys and girls is supported by P. Wroughton esq. M.P. of Woolley Park, the rector and parishioners. Philip Wroughton esq. M.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, chalk. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 1,844 acres, of which 100 acres are down; rateable value, £1,791; the population in 1881 was 187.

Parish Clerk, John Gregory.

GREAT and LITTLE FAWLEY with Whatcombe form a parish in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, Wantage union & county court district, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford.

GREAT FAWLEY is 5½ miles south from Wantage. The church of St. Mary, erected in 1866, on a new site, by Philip Wroughton esq. and Mrs. Wroughton, on the dismantling of the old church, is a handsome structure, from designs by the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. with an apsidal chancel and a groined roof, supported by pillars of Devonshire marble; the reredos, of Caen stone, represents "The Crucifixion," with a back-ground of mosaic, by Salviati: the pulpit, screen and pillars of the nave arcades are also of Devonshire marble. The old church was the burial place of the ancient family of Moore, who held both manors here from some time after the Reformation until 1765; to this family belonged Sir Francis Moore, a distinguished lawyer, who represented Reading in the parliaments of 1597, 1601 and 1613; he died 20th Nov. 1621 and was buried in Old Fawley church, on the removal of which the vault of the Moores was opened and their remains, bound round with bands of leather, were found to have been embalmed and in perfect preservation, even to the features. The register dates from the year 1540 and contains entries relating to Whatcombe from 1596. The living is a donative, yearly value £100 with residence erected by the ate Philip Wroughton, in the gift of Philip Wroughton esq. M.P. and held by the Rev. Charles Coryndon Luxmoore M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. Philip Wroughton esq. M.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is principally chalk; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and clover. The area is 2,870 acres; rateable value, £1,612; and the population in 1881 was 228.

LITTLE FAWLEY 1 mile south and Whatcombe, 2 miles south, are hamlets; at Whatcombe, was formerly a mansion, now converted into a farm house, with a garden containing beautiful yew tree walks; in the adjacent meadow may be traced the site of a church, the date of the foundation of which is uncertain, but it appears from the records of inductions in the episcopal registers that the patronage was in lay hands as early as A.D. 1313; on 6th July, 1507, the church or chapel of Whatcombe was appropriated to the chantry of the Holy and Undivided Trinity in the parish church of Lamborne. A small portion only of the old manor house now remains, attached to the modern farm house, with which much of the stone and other material of an earlier building has been incorporated: some blocks of stone inserted in the wall of the farm servants' refectory bear three curiously carved figures, rudely executed in low relief, apparently Early Norman work, and which may be considered as representative of the church in its earliest state; the principal figures are supposed to represent the Virgin and Child, the second an ecclesiastic and the third is a grotesque head: lying about in different parts of the premises are several pieces of worked masonry, which manifestly formed part of an ecclesiastical building: a portion of a quoin, in particular exhibiting some well-executed thirteenth century tracery: the bells from Whatcombe church are said to have been removed to East Garston, re-cast and hung in the tower of the church there.

Parish Clerk, William Pauffley.

FERNHAM is a small straggling township in the parish and hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon and diocese of Oxford, forming part of the ecclesiastical district of Longcot, bordering on the Vale of White Horse, situated 2¾ miles south-south-east from Faringdon, one mile and a half north from the Uffington junction on the Great Western railway. Here is a chapel of ease to Longcot, a small modern stone building in the Early English style, of good design, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and western bell-gable with one bell: the chancel parclose and reading desk are of freestone with coloured marble panels: the font is octagonal with emblematically carved panels, supported by marble shafts. There is an eastern memorial stained window to John Hughes, ob. 1857; a small stained window on the south side of the chancel and another in the nave. Here is a Congregational chapel. G. Martin-Atkins esq. who is lord of the manor, Thomas Duffield esq. Mr. W. Curtis and Mr. John Skurray are the principal landowners. The soil is clay and stone brash; subsoil, clay and gravel, which is much used for walks, it being of a bright yellow colour. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 1,000 acres; rateable value, £1,831; the population in 1881 was 205.

FINCHAMPSTEAD is a pretty village and parish on the borders of Hampshire, from which it is separated by the Blackwater river, 4 miles south-west from Wokingham, 2 from the Wellington College station of the South Eastern railway and 9 south-east from Reading, in the hundred of Charlton, union of Wokingham, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is an ancient fabric, partly Norman, consisting of semi-circular chancel, nave, north aisle and square tower containing 5 bells: it contains several monuments and some curious old brasses: it was thoroughly repaired and re-seated in 1856. The register dates from the year 1530. The living is a rectory, yearly value £578 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1842 by the Rev. Edward St. John M.A. of Downing College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel here. There is a sum of £22 yearly for fuel, derived from the investment of funds received by sale of the allotment. Finchamstead Ridges, a range of hills extending from here to Sandhurst, afford some splendid views of the surrounding country. John Walter esq. M.P. and the Rev. Edward St. John, who are lords of the manor, and the trustees of the late John St. John esq. are the chief landowners; the soil is sand and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The area is 3,926 acres; rateable value, £4,791; the population in 1881 was 664.

Parish Clerk, Walter Goddard.

FRILSHAM is a village and parish 13 miles west from Reading and 6 north-east from Newbury, pleasantly situated on a small stream, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Bradfield, county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Winifred is an ancient structure in the Normal style and consists of chancel and nave and square tower. The register dates from the year 1754. The living is a rectory, yearly value £230, in the gift of Robert Hayward Floyd esq. and held since 1869 by the Rev. George Floyd M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge; the charities are £8 16s. yearly. Robert Hayward Floyd esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 989 acres; rateable value, £1,760; and the population in 1871 was 183.

FYFIELD is a parish 5 miles west-by-north from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford, on the road from Abingdon to Faringdon. The church of St. Nicholas is of mixed styles, chiefly Middle and Third Pointed, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle with a modern tower: in the chancel is the tomb of Lady C. Gordon, the "White Rose" of Scotland, widow of Perkin Warbeck, and in the north aisle is the tomb of Sir John Golafre, lord of the manor, who died in 1442; his effigy in armour lies upon an open altar tomb, having beneath the figure of a shrouded skeleton. The register dates from the year 1587. The living is a vicarage, yearly value, £125, in the gift of the President and scholars of St. John's College, Oxford, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Edward Albert Henry Aston M.A. of that college; the charities are of £25 yearly value. The President and scholars of St. John's, Oxford, are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is a sandy loam; subsoil, calcareous grit. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and beans. The area is 1,620 acres; rateable value, £2,233; and the population in 1881, 337.

NETHERTON, ¼ of a mile north, and FYFIELD WICK, 1½ miles south are portions of this parish.

EAST GARSTON is a parish about 3 miles east-south-east from Lambourne, 7 north-east from Hungerford and 9 south-west from Wantage, in the hundred of Lambourn, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The river Lambourne runs through the village and is remarkable for generally ceasing to flow in the months of November, December and January. The church of All Saints is a handsome and spacious structure, with a chapel in the north-east chancel, nave, north and south transepts and a square tower: the chancel was rebuilt in 1875 by the lay rectors, the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church and their lessee, Sir Robert Burdett bart. and the chapel (which is called the Seymour chapel) by the vicar and his friends: all the windows of the chancel are stained: the church was re-opened in October, 1882, after restoration; during which many interesting specimens of Norman work were discovered, and a new massive font of Norman design was added. The register dates from 1554. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £370 with residence, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford, and held since 1870 by the Rev. William Osborn Jenkyn M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship here. Sir Francis Burdett bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is principally chalk; sub-soil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 4,342 acres; rateable value, £4,126; and the population in 1881 was 459.

GOOSEY is a village and chapelry in the civil parish of Stanford-in-the-Vale, 4 miles north-west from Wantage, 5 south-east from Faringdon and a mile north from Challow station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a small Early English building, consisting of chancel and nave, with a bell-turret on the western gable containing 2 bells. The chancel has a curious Early English piscina, and eastward a square locker; the wall plate is ornamented with a row of trefoil-headed panels: there is no chancel arch: in the nave are some good corbel heads and a plain Early English stoup; outside is one good buttress of like date, and in the churchyard the bass of a cross; in the porch is a shield with the arms of Hyde; the church door-key is Early English, and the oldest in the district. The register dates from the year 1850, previous to which the registers were kept at the mother church, Stanford. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £156 with residence, annexed to the vicarage of Stanford-in-the-Vale, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster and held since 1869 by the Rev. Edward Penwarne-Wellings, M.A. of University College, Durham, who resides at Stanford-in-the-Vale. The history of this place may be traced to an earlier date than that of any other in the district; it was given by Offa, king of Mercia, about 785, to the abbey of Abingdon, in exchange for their beautiful isle of Andersey, lying south-west of the abbey, and a cell was established here by the monks, the site of which is now occupied by a house next to the school; the manor here supplied the abbey with cheese. John Oliver esq. who is lord of the manor, S. E. Bouverie Pusey esq. and J. H. Pocock esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is Kimmeridge clay, with a thin superstratum of gravel and loam; subsoil, clay. The land is chiefly in pasture. The area is 958 acres; rateable value £1,787; and the population in 1881 was 141.

GRAZELEY is a tithing and an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1854 out of the parishes of Sulhampstead Abbots, Sulhampstead Bannister and includes the liberty of HARTLEY DUMMER, in Shinfield civil parish, in the hundred and county court district of Reading, unions of Wokingham and Bradfield, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Grazeley is 4 miles south from Reading. The church of the Holy Trinity is a small flint structure, erected in 1850, and has a chancel, nave, porch and stained east window; there is 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1856. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £130 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Rev. John Doyle Kennedy. Richard Benyon, esq. who is lord of the manor, Frederick William Allfrey, esq. and Mrs. Merry are the principal landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The entire area is 3,267 acres; the population in 1871 was 648.

DIDNAM, a tithing of this parish, formerly belonged to Wiltshire, but by the Acts 2 & 3 Wm. IV. cap. 64 and 7 & 8 Vict. cap. 61 it was annexed to Berkshire, and is ecclesiastically attached to Grazeley.

HARTLEY DUMMER, liberty, half-a-mile north, had a population of 382. Hartley Court is a fine mansion, built of stone, standing in its own park-like grounds, commanding a fine view of the county looking north-west; it is the residence of Major Gen. Walton.

GREENHAM is an ecclesiastical parish adjoining the town of Newbury on the south-east and lying south of the river Kennet, which separates it from Thatcham, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Greenham was originally a tithing of Thatcham; in 1857 a portion of this tithing was formed into the ecclesiastical parish of Greenham, the remainder was in 1859 included in the ecclesiastical parish of St. John the Evangelist, Newbury, and in 1878, at the extension of the borough of Newbury, a great portion of Greenham was added to it: the addresses of those residing within the borough are given under that head. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, situated about half-a-mile from the boundaries of the borough of Newbury, is a modern stone building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave and has a very handsome reredos and several stained memorial windows; the foundation stone was laid by the vicar, July 31st, 1875, and the church was consecrated on October 24th, 1876, by the Bishop of the diocese; a catalogue of the plate, vestments, &c. belonging to the old church at the time of the Reformation and dated 4 Aug. 6 Edw. VI. (1552) is preserved at the Record office. The register dates from the year 1706. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1871 by the Rev. Oliver Edmund Slocock, M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. A vicarage house (there having been none before) was built in the year 1874. In the reign of Henry II. Maud, countess of Clare, gave the manor to the Knights-Hospitallers, who then founded a preceptory here, assumed to have been situated near the present wharf. In 1876, during the progress of excavations on the estate of the late Lloyd Baxendale, horn cores and skulls of bos primigenus and bos longifrons, and portions of antlers of the red deer were met with, at a depth of about 5 feet below the surface, in a stratum of clayish alluvium; one of the gigantic ox skulls measured more than three feet between the horns: some horse shoes, with plates 3 inches wide, covering the whole foot except the frog, were also exhumed near the same spot. Roman coins of Diocletian and Probus were found in 1846 near Fielder's farm, and a number of skeletons (probably a hundred), together with many specimens of fictile ware, were discovered in excavating the gravel near the Newbury goods station; this spot appears to have been a Romano-British cemetery. Here are chapels for Baptists and Primitive Methodists. Fellmongering is largely practiced and there is an extensive trade in flour. The trustees of the late Lloyd Baxendale esq. who are lords of the manor, and Capt. John Ward R.N. of Round Oak, are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 2,354 acres, part of which is heath; rateable value £6,756; and the population in 1881 was 1,586.

STROUD GREEN, forming a part of the borough of Newbury, is in this parish.

GROVE is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1835 out of the civil parish of Wantage; it is situated half-a-mile from the Wantage Road station and about 2 north from Wantage, and a branch of the river Ock passes through; it is in the county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James the Great is a small plain structure and consists of nave only, with a small bell-turret. There was in ancient times a chapel here, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, which existed up to the beginning of the 18th century; the present church was built in 1830 by the exertions of the late Dr. Cotton, provost of Worcester College, Oxford, and the old dedication was changed. The register dates from the year 1832. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £83 with residence, in the gift of the vicar of Wantage and held since 1836 by the Rev. William Simcox Bricknell, M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, who is also vicar of and resides at Eynsham, Oxfordshire. Here is a Baptist chapel. The manor of Grove was given, in 1142, by King Stephen to the Convent of Bermondsey; after the Dissolution, it came into the possession of the family of Grove, whose monuments appear in the south aisle of Wantage church. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. B. Castle esq. E. Ormond esq. Mrs. and Miss Jones and R. Floyd esq. The soil is deep loam; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and clover. The area is 1,630 acres; rateable value £5,606; the population in 1881 was 557.

HAGBOURNE EAST and WEST is a parish consisting of the township of East Hagbourne and liberty of West Hagbourne, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. East Hagbourne is 16 miles south-west from Wallingford, 2 south-east from Didcot Junction station on the Great Western railway, and is situated on a stream called in Saxon times, "Hacca's-Brook," from a person of that name; there is a charter of King Alfred, which mentions both Haccan Burn and Hacca-Broc, as may be seen in Kemble's "Codex Diplomaticus Ævi Saxonici;" this stream rises from a spring called Shovel Spring, never known to be dry. In Domesday the place is called Hachcborne, and was held at the time of the Great Survey by Walter, son of Otherius; Rainbald de Circestre (Cirencester) also held land here of the king. The manor is said to have been given by Henry I. to the monastery of Cirencester, which he had founded. Here the Parliamentary army under the Earl of Essex was quartered on the 24th of May, 1644. The church of St. Andrew, in East Hagbourne, is a building of mixed styles, consisting of chancel and nave, both clerestoried aisles, and a western battlemented Perpendicular tower, with a stair turret and a sanctus bell-cot, with canopy and pinnacles, erected on the top, and containing one small bell, while the tower has a fine peal of 8 bells: the chancel is Early English and has good open timbered roof, a locker, trefoiled piscina and a large Perpendicular east window: the north aisle or chapel was built by John York, as appears from inscribed brasses still remaining in it; the earliest is that of "Claricia Wyndsore, formerly lady of Westhakborn, and wife of John York, who caused this chapel to be made;" she died March, 1403: the second commemorates John York himself, "founder of this aisle," who died 15th July, 1413: there is a third inscription to John York (probably a son of the foregoing) and Johannah his wife, both of whom died 5th September, 1445: this aisle also has a handsome marble monument to John Phillips, esq. carpenter at Windsor Castle to George I. and II.; he accumulated considerable property in the neighbourhood, most of which, by purchase from his representatives, has now passed into the hands of Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. of Lockinge Park: this aisle has some stained glass, with a Decorated piscina; the south aisle is Perpendicular, and retains a piscina and a hagioscope; the chancel arch, and the arcades on the south side, are Transition Norman; the north arcade of the nave has three Early English arches, but the aisle itself is Decorated, and has a door of the same date; the nave has a flat open-timbered roof, which, with the clerestory, is late Perpendicular; the lower part of the rood screen remains, with the staircase, and the original door; the pulpit and octagonal font are both Perpendicular: in the chancel there is a fine Jacobean brass to "Christian Keate, wife and widow of Hugh Keate, of Hodcott, in the county of Barkes, gent.;" it has kneeling figures of both, with four sons and four daughters; he died 23rd March, 1613," and was buried in the parish chancell of Westildsley;"

she died 14th August, 1627; "Wm.Keate their youngest sone erected this memoriall." The church was some years ago substantially repaired and well restored, under the superintendence of W. J. Hopkins, esq. architect, at the cost of about £1,200, including £210 laid out by the Earl of Craven (former lord of the manor) in the repairs and restoration of the chancel. The register dates from the year 1662. The living is a vicarage, the tithes of which have been commuted at £220, gross income about £260, in the gift of Henry Baker esq. The Firs, Buckland, Faringdon, and held since 1878 by the Rev. William Robert Baker B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. A short distance north-east of the church, in the village, is a fine cross on lofty steps; the tall shaft has on one side, at the foot, a wide deep niche, and above it a smaller one, with traces of a canopy; it is now surmounted by a cubical sun-dial; on the east side of the village are the remains of another cross, placed on a high mound; and the base of a third is in the hedgeside in a road north of the village. There are some extremely picturesque and good examples here of timber and plaster or tiled houses, several of which, the property of Sir R. Loyd-Lindsay, have been very carefully restored. The total amount of charities, from several legacies, is about £80 annually. Colonel Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. who is lord of the manor of East Hagbourne, Charles Morrison esq. Mr. Stephen Dixon and Mr. John Holliday are the principal landowners. The soil is strong, black and loamy; subsoil, rubble chalk. The crops are wheat, barley and beans. The parish is noted for its cherry orchards, and watercresses are largely grown here. The entire area is 2,755 acres; rateable value of East Hagbourne £5,931, and of West Hagbourne £1,933; the population in 1881 was, township 1,108; liberty 162; total of the parish 1,270.

West Hagborne is a liberty 1 mile south-west. There was formerly a church here; a field is still called Church Croft. Philip Aldworth esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

North Hagbourne is the name given to a large number of houses, which have gradually increased in number during some years past, on the northern border of the parish, forming a sort of suburb to Didcot station and village, three-quarters-of-a-mile north-east, about a quarter-of-a-mile from Didcot Junction station on the Great Western railway. Here is a school chapel, in which services are held every Sunday evening, but it is intended to build a permanent church to seat 300. There is also a Primitive Methodist chapel, with schoolroom attached. The population is included in East Hagbourne.

HAMPSTEAD MARSHALL is a parish 3 miles miles north-west from Kintbury station on the Great Western railway, 4 west-south-west from Newbury, 7 south-east from Hungerford, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; the Avon and Kennet canal, the river Kennet and the Great Western railway pass through the parish. The place received its surname, according to Ashmole, because it "formerly belonged to the Earl Marshall of England and was held by the tenure of the Rod of the Marshalsea." The church of St. Mary is a plain brick building, re-erected in the time of James I. and consists of chancel, nave, north aisles, porch and a tower containing 2 bells. The register dates from the year 1675. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £276 with 17¾ acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Craven and held since 1850 by the Rev. Charles Augustus Johnson M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, who resides at Enborne. There is a small Congregational chapel. The poor's allotment is 3A. 2R. 36P. and one acre of land, £1 in value, is held by the parish clerk rent free: Smith's charity of 8s. is distributed in money. Hampstead Marshall appertained to the hereditary office of Marshal of England. The manor, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, belonged to the Parrys; Sir Thomas Parry, treasurer to the household of that queen, built a house here; about 1620 this manor passed by purchase to the Cravens, and became one of the chief seats of that family; in the year 1626 Sir William Craven, son of Sir W. Craven, Lord Mayor of London, was created Baron Craven of Hampstead-Marshall and in 1662 Earl, for services which he had rendered to his exiled master during the protectorate of Cromwell and the losses which he had sustained by confiscation. In the same year, the house built by Sir T. Parry having been pulled down, Sir Balthazer Gerbier began a stately pile of building after the model of the Castle of Heidelberg, which was finished in 1665, but this house was almost wholly destroyed by fire in 1718: Sir B. Gerbier, the architect, died in the parish and was buried in the church: the present mansion was erected by the first Earl of Craven and has been from time to time enlarged: the deer park extends over more than 400 acres, with a series of small lakes across it; it belongs to the Earl of Craven, but is at present in the occupation of the Marquess of Donegall K.P. G.C.H., P.C. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light and gravelly and some portion stiff clay; subsoil, clay and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 1,839 acres; rateable value, £2,514; the population in 1881 was 247.

HAMPSTEAD NORRIS is a village and extensive parish 7 miles north-east from Newbury in the hundred of Faircross, union of Wantage, county court district of Newbury rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford and is a station on the Didcot and Newbury branch of the Great Western railway, opened in April, 1882: this manor was held by the family of Norris, or Norreys, in the reign of Henry VII.; the place had been previously known as Hampstead Cifrewart, from a family of the latter name, who possessed it in the time of Henry III., and then as Hampstead Ferrars, for a like reason. The church of St. Mary exhibits a mixture of Norman and Early English architecture and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a low and battlemented western tower: there is a trefoiled piscina, supported on a shaft and sedilia formed in the sill of a window; the stair to the rood loft remains and in the porch is a stoup; the nave roof is dated 1635: the walls of the church and tower have been carefully repaired and the interior enlarged by the removal of a timber and plaster partition which stood between the nave and the chancel and a stone arch with detached pillars having richly carved capitals, has been erected in its place: the two lancet windows at the west end of the nave have been restored and new windows inserted where necessary in harmony with the ancient work: the whole of the church has been fitted with open seats of pitch pine and white deal: the font is of Purbeck stone and ornamented with carved crosses, the entire cost of restoration being £1,600. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, gross value £430 with 135 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Luke Lowsley esq. and held since 1876 by the Rev. Henry David Grantham. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. The charities amount to £21 yearly, which is distributed in clothing. About three miles to the south of Hampstead Norris and near the hamlet of WELL HOUSE is a hill fortress called Grimsbury Castle, remarkable for its strength, the extreme beauty of its situation and the skill displayed in its construction; the rampart is of a circular form having two entrances, one on the north and the other on the south side, the former being reached by a narrow sunken road; the fortifications on this side consisting of a deep ditch and lofty bank, are of a formidable character and opposite the entrance is a mound, perhaps used for reconnaissance; the fortress is nearly inaccessible on the northern and western sides, being defended by morasses, and before the country was drained the whole of the valley must have been under water, as is evident from the peat deposit: within the ramparts on the right side by the south-east corner, is a beautiful spring of excellent water which is never known to be dry; the adjoining hamlet derives its name from this spring. About the year 1833, in a field on Well House Farm and about half a mile from this spot were discovered the remains of a Roman villa; in several other parts of the parish remains of skeletons and spear-heads have been found which seem to indicate that it was a place of considerable importance in the time of the ancient Britons and the Romans. In a part of Grimsbury Forest, locally termed "Fenie Wood," at the foot of the hill, a few hundred yards on the north or Hermitage side of the fortress, a pile-dwelling was discovered some years ago; this was met with some four or five feet below the surface while digging for peat and consisted of rough oaken timber, about 18 feet in length, supported by vertical posts at their extremities and by a stouter one in the centre, 18 feet long; altogether, more than two waggon loads of oak timber were taken out and the solid earth or clay was found to be at a depth of about 7 feet; it is inferred that this structure may have been the platform of an ancient dwelling. Col. Sir Robert Jas. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. and Luke Lowsley esq. are lords of the manor, they with William Dewe, William Dewe, jun. and George Palmer M.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is stony, clay and gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The parish contains the hamlets of HERMITAGE 3 miles south-west, LITTLE HUNGERFORD 2½ south-west, BOTTOMSTEAD 1¼ west, ELING, LANGLEY HALL 2½ west, WORLD'S END 3 west and WELL HOUSE 1 south-by-west. The population of Hampstead Norris and the hamlets in 1881 was 1,378; the area is 5,769 acres; rateable value, £5,296.

HANNEY is a parish consisting of the townships of EAST and WEST HANNEY, in the hundred, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford.

West Hanney is about 2 miles north from the Wantage Road station of the Great Western railway, 4 north-north-east from Wantage and 7½ south-west from Abingdon. The church of St. James the Great is a fine cruciform structure consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle and an embattled tower on the north side containing 7 bells: the chancel is poor and late Perpendicular; the chancel arch Early English, very acute, with good corble shafts; a blocked hagioscope, and rood-loft stairs remain: the south transept is Early English, with a trefoiled piscina; the north transept is under the tower and has a Transition Norman arch opening to the nave, its east window and piscina are Decorated and there is a curious old staircase to the belfry; the nave has four Decorated arches on the south side; one of the pillars is Norman, cylindrical and massive; the others have been at one time similar: the south aisle is Decorated and has a richly panelled parapet: the lower part of the tower is Transition Norman, the upper portion Perpendicular and the bell frame is dated 1605; the north doorway is Norman and has an Early English porch, the south doorway Decorated: in the chancel is a brass, with effigy, to John Seys, rector, c. 1370; others to Humphrey Cheynie, 1537; Sir Christopher Lylcot, 1559, with effigy; John Ayshcombe, 1592, with figures of two wives, ten sons and four daughters; and Oliver Ayshcombe, 1611, wife, four sons and two daughters; there are also marble monuments to John Ayshcombe, 1655, with arms; E. Scroggs, 1784; and H. Popham, 1752; in the south transept are brasses to Thomas Wellisborne, 1602, two wives and three daughters; in the nave is a tablet to Edw. Bowles, 1685 and his wife, Elizabeth Bowles, 1718, aged 124 years; the pulpit dates from 1649: in the vicarage garden are several stone coffins, pinnacles and gurgoyles. The register dates from the year 1582. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £256 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury and held since 1849 by the Rev. James Macdougal M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There are charities of £30 yearly for educational purposes, £10 for distribution in bread and 12 guineas in money. The principal landowners are F. J. Jackson esq. New College, Oxford, and the Messrs. Aldworth. The land is freehold. The soil is loam; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The township comprises 1,390 acres; rateable value, £2,578; and the population in 1881 was 369.

HATFORD is a village and parish 3½ miles south-east-by-east from Faringdon, 3½ south-east from the Challow station on the Great Western railway, 6 south from Bampton and 7 north-west from Wantage, in the union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Ganfield, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Holy Trinity, consecrated May 7th, 1874, is a handsome stone edifice in the Early English style, consisting of apsidal chancel, nave and square embattled tower at the south-west corner, with 4 bells and was erected at a cost of about £4,000, defrayed by the patron, the Rev. Samuel Paynter. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £375, with residence in the gift of the Rev. Samuel Paynter and held since 1877 by the Rev. Stephen Hastings Atkins M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Sidney Bouverie Pusey esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is principally a coral rag; subsoil, clay, sand, gravel and stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 999 acres; rateable value, £1,225; the population in 1881 was 132.

EAST HENDRED is a parish 2 miles north from Steventon station on the Great Western railway, 4 east from Wantage, on the road to Reading and Wallingford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Augustine of Canterbury is a stone structure, with chancel, nave and square tower at the west end, containing 6 very fine bells: it was enlarged and restored in the year 1861: it contains a lectern of the thirteenth century and several ancient brasses and is remarkable as having an arcade, dividing the two southern aisles, of slender piers without arches, of which the most eastern pier is original. The register dates from the year 1539 and is in a remarkable state of preservation. The living is a rectory, yearly value £600 with residence in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1875 by the Rev. Thomas Bowles M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford. St. Mary's Catholic church is a commodious stone building in the Decorated style, erected in 1865: it has a school annexed. Here is also a Primitive Methodist chapel. By an entry in the churchwardens' book, dated 22nd April, 1682, it is stated that Catherine Spiser had delivered into the hands of one of the churchwardens for that year £6, to be received to the world's end, for preachment of a sermon; and £6 she has given to the poor of this parish, to be given in bread by the churchwardens to the poor present after the sermon is ended, upon Holy Thursday, to remain to the world's end; there are other charities amounting to nearly £100. Hendred House, the seat of Mrs. Eyston, is pleasantly situated near the centre of the village: attached is an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Amand which can be traced back to 1291 and probably existed at an earlier date; it is a private chapel of the family, and previous to the building of the Catholic church was used for public services. Hendred Down House, the seat of John Allin esq. is a very large mansion enclosed in a well-timbered park of 90 acres. The village stands near the Vale of White Horse and was once a populous and thriving market town and one of the seats of the cloth manufacture; several privileges were conferred upon it by a charter of Henry VI. The stewardship of the King's Manor in this parish is a nominal office, in the gift of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and is one of the places which may be accepted for the purpose of vacating a seat in the House of Commons. Here are the remains of an ancient chapel, now converted into a granary. There are five manors and three lords of manors, John Allin esq., trustees of the late Charles John Eyston esq. and New College, Oxford; trustees of the late C. J. Eyston esq. and John Allin esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is chalk and loam; subsoil, principally chalk. The chief crops are the usual cereals and roots. The area is 3,099 acres; rateable value, £4,496; the population in 1881 was 815.

WEST HENDRED is a parish in the hundred, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, about 3½ miles east from Wantage and intersected by a stream which falls into the Thames near Monkey Island. The church of Holy Trinity is a very ancient building with several remains of Norman architecture; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and square tower at the west end containing 5 bells. The registers date from the year 1578; in them are recorded several instances of collections made for the Protestants in Poland and elsewhere, for the redemption of captives taken by the Turks, and for the sufferers by fire in 1666. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £751 with residence, in the gift of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and held since 1873 by the Rev. Charles Frederick Hayden M.A. late fellow of that college. Hayward's charity of £2 14s. is for fuel The President and fellows of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, who are owners of the manor, and John Allin esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay, chalk and loam; subsoil clay and chalk. The chief crops are the usual cereals and roots The area is 1,973 acres; rateable value, £3,486; the population in 1881 was 351.

NORTH or FERRY HINKSEY (anciently "Hengestesige," from the mythical chieftain Hengist) with the hamlet of Botley, form a parish on the western bank of the Thames, in the hundred of Hormer, county court district of Oxford, rural deanery of Oxford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, union of Abingdon. North Hinksey is one mile west from Oxford and 5¾ miles north from Abingdon. The church of St. Lawrence, situated on an eminence at the north end of the village and formerly a chapel of ease to Cumnor, is a plain building of mixed styles and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a western tower of Early English date, with a pyramidal roof; it has but one doorway, a fine specimen of Early Norman character and on the south side of the chancel is a low side window of the same date: on the north side of the chancel is an arched recess, with zig-zag moulding, probably a blocked hagioscope: in the church is a memorial to Thomas Willis (father of the celebrated Dr. Willis and ancestor of Browne Willis, the antiquary), who died in the Royal cause at the siege of Oxford, Aug. 4, 1643; an inscription on the monument of William Finmore, fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, who died in 1647, begins thus: "Reader, look to thy feet; honest and loyal men are sleeping under them;" there are other memorials to the same family: in the churchyard near the porch is a fine old yew and at the east end the steps and shaft of a cross; this old church, with its rustic surroundings, is one of the most picturesque bits in the neighbourhood of Oxford and has been repeatedly sketched by Mr. Ruskin and other artists. The register dates from the year 1703. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £120 with residence and 64 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Abingdon and Edward W. Harcourt esq. alternately and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Floyer Cornish M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The ground at the back of the church, at first a farm-yard, rises rapidly into a park-like eminence, thickly wooded with fine elms, on emerging from which and gaining the open ground on the top of the hill, an exceedingly good view is obtained of Oxford and its south-western suburbs; the village is connected with South Hinksey by a pleasant path across the fields, and a ferry across a small feeder of the Isis unites it to a causeway leading through the meadows into the Botley road. E. W. Harcourt esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are E. W. Harcourt esq. and Brasenose College, Oxford. The soil is chiefly stone brash, clay, gravel, peat and loam; subsoil on the hills is limestone, in the valley peat and clay. The crops are the usual cereals; the low lands are chiefly meadow. The parish comprises 900 acres; rateable value, £2,332; the population in 1881 was 527, including the hamlet of Botley, and in 1881 was 526.

Parish Clerk, Charles Annetts.

SOUTH HINKSEY is a parish mostly within the parliamentary limits of the city of Oxford, in the hundred of Hormer, county court district of Oxford, union of Abingdon, rural deanery of Oxford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, one mile south from Oxford, from which it is separated by the Isis, over which is a bridge of three arches, and 5½ miles north from Abingdon. The Great Western railway passes through the parish. The church of St. Lawrence is a structure of Late Perpendicular date, consisting of chancel, nave and a western tower, with plain parapet containing 3 bells: it has a good plain open timbered roof, but no features of special interest: the chancel was rebuilt in the last century: all the seats are free. The register dates from the year 1750. The living is a vicarage, with that of Wootton annexed, joint net yearly value £225, with residence and 32 acres of glebe, let for £142, in the gift of the Earl of Abingdon, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Halsall Segar M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, who resides at New Hinksey. Fawkner's charity, shared by this parish with St. Aldate and St. Michael, in Oxford, provides for three poor orphans. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is clay, gravel and loam; subsoil, stone brash. The crops are the ordinary cereals. The area is 550 acres; rateable value, £4,010; and the population in 1881 was 956.

NEW HINKSEY is a hamlet adjoining Oxford and has lately been included in the Oxford Local Board district. The names of inhabitants will be found under Oxford. The church of St. John the Evangelist is a small brick building, erected in 1870, containing 300 sittings: a National school was built at the same time.

Parish Clerk, Charles Keen.

HINTON WALDRIST is a village and parish about 6 miles east from Faringdon, 9 west from Abingdon and 11 south west from Oxford, in the union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Ganfield, rural deanery of Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, and was formerly a market town. The river Isis separates it from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Margaret is a cruciform building; its architecture is of a mixed character, some details being Early English, others Late Decorated work: it comprises chancel, nave, transepts and western tower: the whole of the windows, except three, contain stained glass; the east window is a good example of flowing tracery work: in the south porch is a water stoup: the reredos is of marble, with an etching of "The Lord's Supper": the modern stone pulpit and font are very good. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £300, with residence, in the gift of Capt. Fredk. Cleave Loder-Symonds J.P. and held, since 1880, by the Rev. Frederick Harper M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford. Hinton Manor is the seat of Capt. Fredk. Cleave Loder-Symonds J.P. who is lord of the manor: the house is near the church and has a view of the Cotswold hills and Oxfordshire downs on the north and of the White Horse range on the south: the house is of considerable antiquity and occupies the site of a Norman "domus defensabilis," which commanded the ford over the Isis, at "Duxford," a hamlet of Hinton: the only ancient remains are, however, the moat, the "keep" and a very large barn, which is said to date from the time of Edward III.: in Norman times the manor belonged to a family named de Walriss, whence Hinton Waldrist: Henry III. granted a charter to Baron Hugh de Walriss, permitting him to establish a weekly market and to pass all produce into Oxford toll free: the manor afterwards lapsed to the Crown and was granted by King Charles I. in the third year of his reign, to Sir Henry Marten, judge of the Prerogative court, of the High Court of Arches and of the Admiralty, by patent under the Great Seal: Colonel Henry Marten, son of Sir Henry, joined the Parliamentary army and testified his gratitude to his father's benefactor by signing his death warrant; he died a prisoner in Chepstow Castle: the manor passed in 1658 to John Loder esq. of Balston park, Berks. The Loder family were, in the reign of Elizabeth, lords of the manor of Princes Harwell. Remains of a small Roman camp, known as Hadchester, exist upon the estate; this was probably an out-post of the neighbouring camp at Cherbury and guarded the road to the ford. The soil is various, but principally sand, loam and clay; subsoil, the same, with portions of rock; and there is a quarry of excellent stone. The chief crops are a succession of grain. The area is 2,180 acres; rateable value, £2,339; the population in 1881 was 287.

DUXFORD is a hamlet, 1 mile north, in this parish; here is a ferry over the Isis.

Parish Clerk, Henry Neale.

HUNGERFORD.

HUNGERFORD is a market and union town, head of a county court district, a polling place for the county, and station on the Great Western railway, 23 miles west-by-south from Reading and 64 from London (by rail 61), 27 from Salisbury, 26 south-west from Oxford, 24 from Devizes, 16 south from Wantage, 8½ west from Newbury, 18 south-east from Swindon, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Hungerford is situated on the western border of the county and a part of the town (Charnham street) is in Wilts. A branch of the Great Western railway from Reading has a station here and is continued through the town to Devizes by the Berks and Hants Extension railway; from Reading there is railway communication with every part of England; the Kennet and Avon canal gives water communication. The river Kennet and the small streams Avon and Dun, which pass through the town, are celebrated for the fineness of their trout; the fishery extends for some miles, and is strictly preserved and leased to a fishing club by the town authorities. The town has had very important rights conferred upon it at various periods; the inhabitants have the right of depasturing cattle on some valuable marsh and down land, and they are also by charter exempt from toll in the different fairs and markets throughout the kingdom. The government is vested in a constable, who is elected annually, and feoffees who (with rare exceptions) have borne the office of constable; the constable for the time being is coroner by charter for the liberty of Hungerford. The town is lighted with gas.

The parish church of St. Lawrence is a modern stone erection, standing on the site of an old one: it comprises chancel, nave, aisles, with square western tower, embattled with pinnacles, containing 6 bells and a south embattled porch: it contains several memorials and affixed to the wall is a small tablet of yellow marble, formerly a portion of the tomb of Sir Robert de Hungerford, who died in the reign of King Edward III. and was buried in a chapel on the south side of the old church; his effigy, cross-legged, carved in stone, is now placed on the floor of the chancel. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £522, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held, since 1866, by the Rev. Joseph Ball Anstice M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who is surrogate and rural dean.

A church (St. Saviour's) has been built at Eddington, as a chapel of ease, for the convenience of the northern part of the parish; it is Gothic, of red and white brick, with stone dressings, and comprises chancel, nave, north aisle, porch and open timbered roof and has sittings for 250 persons: it was built from the designs of A. W. Blomfield esq. at a cost of about £2,000: the land was given by William Honeywood esq. Chilton Lodge: the east window is stained, subject, "The Ascension," in memory of the Rev. T. P. Mitchell: the stained windows in the chancel, representing the Four Evangelists, were gifts: the pulpit, given by Jesse Hillier esq. is much admired.

There is also a school church at Newtown in connection with the parish church.

The Wesleyan chapel, in Charnham street, is a Gothic building of grey local bricks, with red bands and arches and Bath stone dressings; it is divided into six bays, each with a two-light window; a handsome four-light window in the front surmounts three small stained windows representing The Adoration of the Shepherds: the chancel, which is apsidal, contains three two-light tracery stained windows, in which five subjects are treated, viz. The Last Supper; The Agony in the Garden; Angels in the Sepulchre; The Journey to Emmaus; and the Incredulity of St. Thomas: shallow transepts intersect the chapel, in one of which is an organ, with illuminated Gothic front; the other forms a vestry: the ground plan provides room for about 300 persons, and there is a shallow gallery at the west end for 80 more: the windows are filled with cathedral glass in three tints: the spirelet, besides forming an ornamental feature, assists in the ventilation: the total cost, including the site, amounted to upwards of £3,000. There are also Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels.

A Savings Bank has been established some years; the trustees meet every Wednesday.

A Literary and Scientific Institution was established in 1865: the Vicar is president, and there are six vice-presidents and a committee, with secretary and treasurer: the reading-room is supplied with the daily London and provincial newspapers, magazines and periodicals.

A Town Hall and Corn Exchange was erected in the High street in 1870 at a cost of about £4,000; it is of red and grey bricks, with Bath stone dressings, and comprises a magistrates' room, an upper hall and a large and convenient corn exchange, which is also available for concerts; a corridor in front, supported by stone pillars, and the square tower, has a four-dial illuminated clock.

The market day is Wednesday and a pitched market is established in the Corn Exchange.

The Police Station for the Hungerford division is in Park street, near the railway station; the division comprises Hungerford, Shefford, Inkpen and Shalbourn.

Two statute or hiring fairs are annually held in the Market place, one on the Wednesday before and the other on the Wednesday after old Michaelmas day; there are also fairs held the last Wednesday in April for cattle, the last Wednesday in June for wool and August 17th for sheep.

The charities are John Hamblin's charity, the rent of a close of land called Chantry Mead, now £15, applied as follows—£4 to the master of the Free school for teaching four boys, and £4 to buy clothing for the four boys the week before Easter, the surplus to be spent in clothing and education: the rent of a close of ground of about 3 acres in East Field, producing £3 3s. applied as follows—vicar 10s., singers 6s. each, clerk 2s. and sexton 2s.; Lawrence's bequest, being a rent-charge payable from a copyhold estate at Medstead, Hants, given by the will of Ezekiel Lawrence, producing a net rental of £4 4s. for apprenticing one poor boy: Hobbe's gift (1625), a moiety of a rent-charge of £5 4s. payable from land at Enborne, distributed in clothing: Sir Vincent Smith's charity (1626), £2 annually, for apprenticing two boys: Field's gift (1626), £1 annually, for apprenticing one boy: Mrs. Cummin's charity: the dividends arising from the sum of £699 14s. 6d: Three per Cent. Annuities (formerly Old South Sea Annuities), net amount, after deducting expenses of receiving, £17 19s. 6d. two-thirds of the amount for educating an equal number of boys and girls and the other third in bread or clothes.

The Royal Berks Yeomanry Cavalry have their headquarters here: the regiment consists of four troops, stationed respectively at Newbury, Reading, Hungerford and Wantage.

The scenery around is very picturesque and the town exceedingly healthy. The hunting in the neighbourhood is good and well supported; the kennels of the Craven hounds are at Walcot, and under the managment of Sir R. F. Sutton bart.

Hungerford Park, at the eastern extremity of the town, was formerly the residence of the Barons of Hungerford, who took their name and title from this place; the mansion is in the Italian style and occupies the site of the old house, which was built by Queen Elizabeth and given to the Earl of Essex; it is the seat of George Shippen Willes esq. J.P.

The manor of Hungerford, with the appurtenances of common and fishery, was formerly held under the Crown and is supposed to have been granted by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and is vested in certain of the inhabitants of the town, who are called feoffees: these feoffees, as lords of the manor, hold a court at Hocktide; the court is summoned by blowing a horn, supposed to have been given by John of Gaunt; some curious old charters are preserved in the town chest.

The principal landowners are the Rev. Thos. S. H. Mitchell, M.A. J. T. Coxe esq. Mrs. Genl. Dunn, H. W. L. Popham esq. G. S. Willes esq. W. Honywood esq. and Major Gaisford. The land around is famous for the growth of barley and the water meadows are highly productive and valuable.

The parish is divided into four tithings, viz. HUNGERFORD, SANDEN FEE and EDINGTON; HIDDEN and NEWTOWN in Berks; CHARNHAM STREET, is a tithing in Wilts. The total population in 1881 was 2,965; the area is 5,290 acres; rateable value £13,507. The area of Charnham Street tithing, forming part of the town of Hungerford, is 2,026 acres; rateable value £3,903; and the population in 1871 was 365.

HURLEY is a beautiful village and parish situated in a valley on the bank of the river Thames, surrounded by an amphitheatre of richly-cultivated woodland hills, 4 miles north-east from Henley, 5 north-west from Maidenhead and 12 north-east from Reading, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Henley-on-Thames, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is in the Norman style; it was built in the year 1086 by Osmund the Good, Count of Seez, in Normandy, afterwards Earl of Dorset, Lord High Chancellor of England, and consists of a chancel and nave; it was restored in 1852 at a cost of £1,493; the original windows on the north side, formerly closed, were re-opened and those on the south side restored, one Decorated window of remarkable beauty being allowed to remain and break the uniformity of design; a vestry room was added to the east end of the church, separated from the chancel by a fine Norman screen; 139 additional sittings were made; the pulpit, reading-desk and communion table are in admirable taste; there are several monuments in the church and chancel, one of which, to Lord Lovelace and family, is of great antiquity; two of the Norman lights on the north side of the nave (one over the pulpit and the other opposite the font) were filled with stained glass in December 1876; that over the pulpit is in memory of the Rev. Florence James Wethered, six years curate and twenty-nine years vicar of Hurley; the other—subject, The Annunciation—is in memory of Mrs. Wharton, late of the Malt House, Hurley. The churchyard is neatly kept and has several handsome marble and granite crosses. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, yearly value of about £263, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1868 by the Rev. Florence Thomas Wethered M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, surrogate. The vicarage was enlarged in 1850 and converted into a building of the Elizabethan style. Sir R. Lovelace left the value of 10 quarters of rye in bread for the poor; Kempenfelt and Benwell's charities, value £19 13s. 8d. yearly, are for clothing. Here was a cell of Benedictine monks which was given to Westminster Abbey by Jeffrey de Magnâ Villâ or Mandeville in the reign of William the Conqueror; the foundations of the original monastery still remain, forming a vault, where, in the year 1838, three bodies of monks in their Benedictine habits were found. The principal landowners are Sir Gilbert Augustus Clayton-East bart. who is lord of the manor, Major-General Williams (of Temple House, Bisham) and Henry Micklem esq. The soil is light gravel and chalk; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 4,097 acres; rateable value, £7,221; and the population in 1881 was 1,132.

Birchetts Green, a hamlet partly in this perish, will be found under a separate head.

Parish Clerk, Dennis Hignell Wargent.

HURST is a parish about 7 miles long and consists of the hamlet of TWYFORD, the liberties of BROAD HINTON, WHISTLEY-IN-HURST, WINNERSH and NEWLAND; the latter liberty, with a great part of Winnersh, has been formed into the ecclesiastical district of St. Catherine Bearwood. Whistley-in-Hurst is 6 miles east from Reading, 2 from the Great Western railway station at Twyford, 7¼ south from Henley, 4 north from Wokingham and 10 from Maidenhead, in the union of Wokingham, hundred of Charlton, county court district of Reading and rural deanery of Sonning, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; in 1876 the hamlet of Twyford with an adjacent district was formed into a separate ecclesiastical parish. The church of St. Nicholas has an embattled tower with 6 bells, which was rebuilt in 1612, also nave with north chapel of the same size, chancel and a south aisle added in 1876, the chancel being separated from the nave and aisle by a screen of ornamental and elaborately carved work in oak, surmounted by the Royal arms and Prince of Wales's plume, richly gilt; five large pillars with arches, of various dates, from the twelfth century downwards, form the arcade to the north aisle, and three arches in the Middle-Pointed style separate the south aisle from the nave; the pulpit is of carved oak, of the style of James I.'s reign; there is a splendid marble monument, of the seventeenth century, to Lady Margaret Saville, widow of Sir Henry Saville, founder of the Savillian professorship at Oxford; it has six marble figures in the attitude of prayer under a canopy with drapery, supported an each side by an angel, the whole of exquisite workmanship; there are also others of some interest, including two brasses of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries: in 1876 the whole church was restored at the expense of Miss Palmer of Sonning, a memorial window of subjects connected with baptism at the same time placed in the window of the new south aisle by the family of the late T. R. Harman esq. of Sindlesham; there is an east window in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. Archibald Allen Cameron, erected by public subscription. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Rev. Edmund Broome M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. There are almshouses for eight poor people, with a donation to them and their successors for ever of 5s. weekly, besides a new garment every second year; also several other donations; among the most prominent of the donors are—Mr. Richard Bigg, who left three houses and warehouse, now producing £150 yearly, Lady Dorothy Harrison, Lady Frances Winchcomb and William Harman esq. who by his will left the interest of £500 to be annually distributed in coal among the poor of the liberty of Winnersh, and Mrs. Glasspool, who left £200, the interest of which is expended in flannels and blankets for the poor of Whistley. The fuel allotments of the liberty of Newland have been sold and the purchase money, £390, invested; the interest is yearly distributed in fuel. Lord Braybrooke is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Rev. Henry Golding-Palmer, John Leveson-Gower esq. and Thomas Colleton Garth esq. J.P. The soil is mostly sand and gravel; subsoil gravelly. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area of the entire parish is 6,845 acres; rateable value, £19,774; the population in 1881 was 2,868.

BROAD HINTON is a liberty, formerly in Wiltshire, but by the Acts 2 & 3 William IV. cap. 64 and 7 & 8 Vic. cap. 61 it was annexed to Berkshire. The population in 1871 was 643; rateable value, £5,419. A small portion of a farm called "Old Warren House," in the parish of Wokingham, is in the county of Wilts, the remainder being in Broad Hinton to which liberty it is rated. Stanlake Park is the seat of Mrs. Barker; the mansion stands in an extensive park through which flows a streamlet, a tributary of the river Loddon. Haines Hill, a large and commodious mansion, standing in a park of considerable extent, is the seat of Thomas Colleton Garth esq. D.L., J.P. who is the master of a pack of foxhounds.

WHISTLEY-IN-HURST is a liberty; rateable value, £7,840; the population, including Broad Hinton, was 1,906 in 1881. Hurst Lodge, a commodious red brick building, standing in considerable grounds, is now unoccupied. Hurst Grove, a pleasant residence standing within its own grounds, is the seat of Mrs. Finch.

WINNERSH is a liberty and comprises Sindlesham. The population in 1871 was 689 and in 1881, 685; rateable value, £3,890.

NEWLAND is a liberty. The population in 1871 was 382 and in 1881, 277; rateable value £2,625. The names will be found under Arborfield.

The names belonging to TWYFORD will be found under that heading, and those of the BEARWOOD district under that heading or that of ARBORFIELD.

EAST ILSLEY (or MARKET ILSLEY, anciently HILDESLEY) is a small market town and parish, a polling place for the county, 9 miles north from Newbury, 11 from Wantage, 11 south from Abingdon, 2 miles east from Compton station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Compton, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by a ridge of downs, which extend for some miles, a part of which is cultivated and the remainder used as sheep walks. The church of St. Mary is a small church of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and low embattled tower, of the Decorated period, containing 5 bells: the south arcade of the nave has Transition Norman arches, but the south aisle is Early English, the north, modern; the doorway from the nave is Decorated and has the ball flower ornament; the church was enlarged and re-pewed in 1845 and in 1881-2 the south aisle was restored and the fine old roof disclosed; the entrance to the rood loft and a piscina were also discovered; the gallery in front of the west window was removed, an old Norman font, which was found under the pulpit, restored and placed in the centre of the basement of the tower, the chancel re-decorated and a stained window inserted at the east end. The register dates from November, 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £722 with 64 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Magdalen College, Oxford and held since 1865 by the Rev. Edward Halifax Hansell B.D. late fellow and tutor of that college. The poor of this parish have the right of gathering furze upon several downs. Ilsley has long been noted for its sheep-markets and fairs, a grant for the holding of which was obtained by Sir Francis Moore, from James I. in 1620; previous to this time fairs were held at Cuckhamsley Hill (Cwichelmes hlæwe) but on the issue of the grant were traditionally removed to a square enclosure now planted and called "The Warren;" the markets commence on the Wednesday fortnight before Easter and sometimes earlier and continue every alternate Wednesday till July; the sheep and lamb fairs are held from Easter till November; the fairs are on Wednesday in Easter week for sheep, Wednesday in Whitsun week for sheep, the 1st Wednesday in July for wool, the 1st of August for lambs, 26th August for sheep and lambs (this is the largest fair in the year and as many as 50,000 sheep and lambs have been brought for sale on this day), Wednesday after the 19th September for sheep and lambs, October 13th for hiring servants and pleasure, known as "Runaway fair," Wednesday after October 17th for sheep and Wednesday after 12th November (Hallow-tide fair) for sheep; dealers and graziers come from all parts of the country to these fairs to purchase stock to be sent into the grazing districts. There are several establishments here for training race-horses, the downs being well adapted for that purpose; the turf being light and springy. Sir Francis Moore kt. M.A., M.P. of Fawley and a serjeant-at-law, educated at Reading and afterwards of St. John's College, Oxford and the "Middle Temple," was born here in 1558; he represented Reading in the parliaments of 1597, 1601 and 1613 and died 20th November, 1621, aged 63; he was buried in Fawley old church. Mrs. Woodley is lady of the manor and Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. is chief landowner. The soil is chalk and gravel; subsoil, chalk and flint. The crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and seed hay. The area is 2,979 acres; rateable value, £3,956; the population in 1881 was 578.

INKPEN is a parish on the borders of Wiltshire, 4 miles south-east-by-south from Hungerford, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is a small ancient structure of flint and stone, with chancel, nave and low square tower containing 3 bells; it contains tablets to the family of Brickenden, who held estates here for nearly 150 years before the Butler family, to whom there are also memorials. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a rectory, yearly value £250 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1850 by the Rev. John Butler M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. There is a Sunday school for boys and girls, supported by the rector The Primitive Methodists have a chapel and the Wesleyans have a chapel and a Sunday school. Baster's charity is £200, the interest to be distributed, and there is a poor's allotment of 40 acres, which produces £2 10s. yearly for fuel. In this parish rises the river Auborn, running in an eastward direction till it reaches Hide End, in Brimpton parish, then, bending northward, runs in an oblique line between Brimpton and Wasing and falls into the Kennet, a little below Wasing, and forms the boundary between this county and Hampshire, through its course of about 17 miles. Kirby House, the property of the Butler family, is now unoccupied. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Inkpen beacon is the highest point of the chalk in the south of England, being 1,011 feet high. The soil is mixed, light and heavy; subsoil, clay and loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips and peas. The area is 2,854 acres; rateable value £3,462; and the population in 1881 was 692.

KENNINGTON is a small village, township and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1866 out of the parishes of Radley and Sunningwell, in the hundred of Hormer, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is situated on the high road from Oxford to Abingdon, 2 miles south from Oxford and 4 north from Abingdon, separated from Oxfordshire by the Isis; the Great Western railway passes through and the branch from Thame here crosses the river. The church of St. Swithin is a small Norman stone structure, built and consecrated in 1828, and consists of chancel, nave and bell-cot. The register dates from the year 1829. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £160, in the gift of All Souls College and held since 1876 by the Rev. George Charles Bliss M.A. of University College, Oxford, who resides at 2 Museum villas, Oxford. Sir George Bowyer bart. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is principally stone brash, resting on the limestone. The crops are grain in succession. The area is 480 acres; rateable value, £2,519; the population in 1881 was 129.

KINGSTON BAGPUZE is a parish 6 miles west from Abingdon, on the road from Abingdon to Farringdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, and derives its name from the land having been bestowed by William the Norman on Sir Richard Bagpuze, one of his followers; the parish extends northwards to the Isis, which separates it from Oxfordshire. The church of St. John the Baptist, a small structure rebuilt in 1799 in the Italian style, consists of chancel and nave, with a small bell turret; the interior has lately been entirely remodelled, the galleries and high pews have been removed, oak benches put in, new floors laid, and a proper chancel formed, furnished with a communion table and oak choir stalls; the church is now being decorated in colour; all the work has been executed from designs by Mr. Edwin Dolby, architect, of Abingdon. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £420 with residence, in the gift of the President and fellows of St. John's College, Oxford, and held since 1877 by the Rev. Thomas Nolan M.A. formerly scholar of that college. The poor's land of 8 acres produces about £8 10s. yearly, distributed in blankets. At NEW BRIDGE, in this parish (which derives its name from the bridge there over the Isis), the Parliamentary army was repulsed by the King's forces whilst attempting to cross, on the 27th May 1644. The manor was held from 1542 to about 1670 by the Lattons, previously of Upton and Chilton: they subsequently removed to Esher, in Surrey, and appear afterwards to have gone to Ireland and become extinct; the tombs of some of the earlier members, with brasses, are in the Church of St. Michael, Blewbury, Berks; the heraldic glass, formerly in the manor house, is said to have been removed to Strawberry Hill. Kingston House, the seat of John Blandy Jenkins esq. J.P. lord of the manor and chief landowner, is a mansion of red brick, with an avenue of trees leading to the principal entrance. The soil is stone brash, black loam, sandy and clay; subsoil, sand and limestone. The chief crops are clover and a succession of grain. The area is 1,097 acres; rateable value, £1,734; and the population in 1881 was 250.

KINGSTON LISLE is a township and chapelry with the hamlet of FAWLER, in the parish of Sparsholt, 2½ miles south-east from Uffington Junction station on the Great Western railway, 6 south from Faringdon and 6 west from Wantage, union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The Wilts and Berks canal passes on the north. The chapel of St. James it a small rough-cast structure, consisting of chancel, nave and a small square bell-turret on the western gable, with Decorated pinnacles at the angles and containing 2 bells; the walls are Norman with later insertions, the east window and others in the chancel being Decorated, with two on the north side of Norman date; the chancel has a flat segmental arch of Norman work, and there is a good door of the same period in the nave: The register dates from the year 1559. The living is attached to the vicarage of Sparsholt, and under the impropriation of Queen's College, Oxford, joint yearly value £358 with residence, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Oswald Joseph Reichel M.A. B.C.L. of that college, who resides at Sparsholt. Here is a Baptist chapel, with an endowment of about £40 a year, left by the late Abraham Atkins esq. Half a mile from the village, in a hollow of the Downs, and beside an old oak tree, is the famous "Blowing Stone," a large Sarsden or Sarsen of quartzose sandstone, brought from the adjoining hills: it is about a yard square and half a yard in thickness, and is perforated with several holes, one of which, if lustily blown into, emits a sound audible at a distance of 5 or 6 miles. The manor was at one time the seat of the ancient and noble family of De Insulâ, or De Lisle, and Alice de Lisle had licence from Richard II. in 1366 to enclose a park here. The eldest son of Thomas, lord Berkeley, who married the heiress of the Lisles, was, in 1444, created Baron Lisle, and in 1452 Viscount Lisle, a title which became finally extinct in 1743. Kingston House, the seat of Lt.-Col. Victor William Bates Van de Weyer J.P. is a magnificent mansion standing in a well-wooded park, extending over an area of 120 acres. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chalk and green sand; subsoil, clay and green sand. The chief crops are wheat, beans, oats and grass. The area is 2,060 acres; rateable value £3,049; and the population in 1881 was of Kingston Lisle with Fawler 338.

KINTBURY is a large parish and station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Kennet and intersected by the Kennet and Avon canal, about 3 miles east-by-south from Hungerford. The church of St. Mary is an ancient Gothic structure, with chancel, nave, aisles and square western tower, containing a peal of 6 bells and clock; it contains several ancient monuments to the families of the present and former lords of the manor: near the chancel is a curious monument to John Gunter and Alice his wife, A.D. 1624, and likewise one of Alderman Gemmett, 1678; there is also a handsome monument to the Hon. Charles Dundas, Baron of Amesbury, who was a member of the House of Commons for more than half a century and represented this county during ten successive Parliaments. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, yearly value, £800 with residence, in the gift of Lionel Oliver esq. of Heacham, Norfolk, and held since 1872 by the Rev. William Fraser Campbell M.A., B.C.L. of Christ Church, Oxford. Christ Church, a chapel of Ease to St. Mary's, a handsome church at the southern end of the parish, is built on land given by the late Earl of Craven and was consecrated June 1867: the style of architecture is of the Modified Decorated or Second Pointed period; the material is red brick, with windows, doorways and weatherings of Bath stone: the building consists of chancel, nave, vestry and tower, which last is very effective from the picturesque appearance of the spire, which is of tile, in two stages, with perforated woodwork; the nave has sittings for 250 persons: the chancel has four rows of carved benches and is paved with Minton's tiles: the east window, of three-lights, represents the Crucifixion, and under it is an excellent carving of The Last Supper; the western window is also stained, the Baptism of Our Saviour; there are six stained windows in the chancel: the font bowl is supported by marble columns, and on the sides are brass plates recording the baptism and death of two children of Mrs. Dunell, who presented it to the church: the pulpit is of Caen stone, with carved panels, separated by marble shafts, and was given by H. J. Dunell esq. of Barton Court: the cost of the church was £3,650, the Rev. J. W. D. Dundas M.A. contributing a great portion; and the stained windows were also given by him, with the exception of two side ones, presented by Talbot Bury esq. of London, the architect.

DENFORD is a hamlet of this parish and in 1833 was formed into an ecclesiastical parish. A small stone church, the Holy Trinity, was erected and endowed by the late G. C. Cherry esq. in 1832, contiguous to Denford House. The register dates from the year 1833. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of G. C. Cherry esq. and held since 1868 by the Rev. Joseph Ball Anstice M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who is also vicar of and resides at Hungerford. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Spacious public baths and washhouses have been built for the use of the parishioners by Mrs. Dunn, of Inglewood, at a cost of nearly £4,000. Denford House, in the Grecian style, is the seat of George Charles Cherry esq. J.P.; Elcott Park, the seat of William Hew Dunn esq. D.L., J.P.; Barton Court, the property of Sir Richard Sutton bart. is at present the residence of Harry Adolphus Simmonds esq.; Inglewood House is the seat of Mrs. Genl. Dunn. The manor of Kintbury Amesbury belonged to the nuns of Amesbury, having been given to them at the first foundation of their monastery by Queen Elfrida; in 1542 it was granted to John Cheyne; not long afterwards it came to the Darrells, from whom it passed in marriage in 1617, (with the daughter and heiress of Sir John Darrell), to Sir John Elwes, who sold it to P. Jemmet esq. alderman of London; his daughter brought it in marriage to Sir J. Raymond; it afterwards became the property of Charles Dundas esq. one of the knights of the shire, who resided on this estate at Barton Court: Mrs. Dundas's grandfather, Thomas Whitley esq. of Aston Hall, Flintshire, married Anne, daughter of T. Loder esq. of Balsdon Park, in this parish, by his wife Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir J. Raymond, above mentioned; Mr. Dundas was created, 1832, Baron Amesbury, of Kintbury Amesbury and Barton Court in Berks, and of Aston Hall, county of Flint; his lordship died June 30th, 1832, aged 80. Sir Richard Sutton bart. is the present lord of the manor of Kintbury Amesbury. The manor of Kintbury Holt was given to the nuns of Eaton, in Warwickshire, by their founder, Robert Bossu, Earl of Leicester; it is now the property of the Earl of Craven. The manors of Denford were formerly the property of the Longéspées, Earls of Salisbury; they are now the property of G. C. Cherry esq. J.P. W. H. Dunn esq. is lord of the manor of Inglewood. Kintbury, anciently called Kennetbury, gives name to the hundred in which it is situated, and was formerly a market town and had two fairs. Holt tithing belongs to the Earl of Craven and that of Barton to Sir Richard Sutton bart. The principal landowners are the Earl of Craven, Sir Richard Sutton bart. G. C. Cherry esq. J.P. W. H. Dunn esq. J.P., D.L. Mrs. Genl. Dunn, Geo. Nelson Tanner esq. Edward John Alderman esq. and Mrs. McKinnon. The soil is chalk and clay; subsoil, clay. Whiting is made from the soft upper chalk, which is ground into a pulp with water and allowed to settle in tanks; bricks are also made here. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 7,645 acres; rateable value, £12,722; the population in 1881 was 1,690.

ELCOTT, 2 miles north; WORMSTALL, 3 north; DENFORD, 3 north-west; HOLT, 1 south-east; and BARTON, 1½ north-west, are places in this parish.

Parish Clerk, George Heath.

KNOWL HILL is a scattered village prettily situated on the Bath road, 8 miles north-east from Reading, 4½ west from Maidenhead, 5 south-east from Henley and 3½ from the Great Western railway station at Twyford: it is a parish for ecclesiastical purposes, formed in 1842 out of the parishes of Hurley and Wargrave, in the unions of Wokingham and Cookham, Reading county court district, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Peter,built in 1840, is a very plain edifice, with nave, tower, steeple and 2 bells: a simple but good Early English chancel was added in 1871 and a very fine organ in 1875, as a memorial to the Rev. J. E. Austen Leigh, a former vicar; also a clock in the tower in memory of Major Court. The register dates from the year 1840. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £133, with residence, in the gift of trnstees and held since 1879 by the Rev. Henry Cox M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The principal landowner is Sir Gilbert A. Clayton-East bart. The soil is various; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, turnips &c. The population in 1871 was 763.

LAMBORNE (or CHIPPING LAMBORNE) is a parish 8 miles north-north-west from Hungerford and 9 south-west from Wantage, in the hundred of Lamborne, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; the Lamborne river takes its rise near here and flows through the town to the Kennet, near Newbury. The church of St. Michael and All Angels is an ancient and spacious cruciform, structure in the Norman, Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south transepts, three chapels and a central embattled tower, surmounted by four octagonal turrets and containing 8 bells: the chancel is of Early English date, and has a fine Perpendicular stained east window of five-lights and a small Decorated piscina: on the south side an arch of the same period opens into an aisle called St. Mary's chapel and eastward of it is a window, the sill of which forms a sedilia; on the north side two Perpendicular arches open to an aisle of that date: on the north side of the communion table is a monument of late Elizabethan or Jacobean date to Thomas Garrard and Agnes his wife; and in the south wall a slab of black marble, with effigies in brass of his son, Thomas Garrard, gent. 1619, and Anne his wife, 1610, and Thomas, their son: the tower arches are good Norman, almost Early English: the transepts have chiefly Decorated and Perpendicular windows, but one lancet survives in the north transept, which has a Transition Norman arch on the west side: the chapel of St. Mary, east of the south transept, belongs to the Decorated period, and was built by John de Estbury abont 1360; he died Oct. 25, 1375, and his tomb, with brasses, is in the chapel, with that of his son: the sumptuous marble monument, raised upon four pillars, to the Garrard family, also formerly in this chapel, now remains only in fragments, which record the names of Roger Garrard and Elizabeth his wife: south of St. Mary's chapel, and opening into it, is the chapel of the Holy Trinity, a late Perpendicular structure, in the centre of which is an altar tomb, with an effigy in copper of John Estbury, 1485, in a surcoat of his arms; his son, also John Estbury, was the founder of an almshouse or hospital, situated near the churchyard, for ten poor men, who, during divine service, are wont to kneel around the tomb of the founder's father, about which rude stalls have been fitted for that purpose: the Essex chapel, north of the church, occupies the site of an older chantry, founded by the De Bathes or the Bohuns, but extended eastward nearly two centuries later to its present dimensions, and most probably by Sir Thomas Essex, whose very fine alabaster monument is placed in the north transept; this tomb bears life-sized recumbent figures of Sir Thomas Essex, who died 29 Aug. 1558, and of dame Margaret, his wife, with a marginal inscription: around are many memorials of the Seymours,who for nearly three centuries resided at Inholmes,in this parish, on one of which, that of Edward Seymour esq. ob. 1798, are some verses by Mr. Pye, a former Poet Laureate: here also rests Charles Fettiplace, a benefactor to the local charities: this chapel was for a long time used as a house for the parish fire engine, but was rebuilt from the foundations about 1850: the nave is the oldest part of the church, and dates from the early part of the twelfth century; it has four bays, with late Norman arches and massive pillars, and a clerestory: at the west end are traces of its original Norman windows, with an existing circular window in the gable: the staircase to the rood-loft, diverted from its original course, is now connected with the tower, but the entrance is from the exterior: on the wall, formerly crossed by the rood-loft, is a piscina: the aisles were originally much lower and lighted by small Norman windows; but the existing south aisle seems to be Decorated and that on the north side Perpendicular: the only remains of the old roofing are to be found in the south aisle, elsewhere it was entirely renewed, with the exception of the tie beams, in 1849-50: the tower, erected some 60 or 70 years later than the nave, is a perfect square of about 20 feet, and an excellent example, as far as the top of the clock, of Transition Norman; the upper portion is Perpendicular; about 1770 it was bound round on the exterior with ironwork, and an independent bell-frame erected within; the south porch is Decorated, with Perpendicular additions; above it is a priest's room, which used to be reached by a stone staircase from the outside, but now by a spiral iron stair within the porch; a corresponding porch on the north side was removed in 1850: the ancient Norman font, after having stood in the church for 750 years, has been removed and sold, and is said to be at the present time at Milton, near Pewsey, Wilts: the stained windows in the Trinity chapel are memorials inserted by H. Hippisley esq. of Lamborne Place; the east window, representing The Last Judgment, was erected in 1876 in memory of Bishop Milman, of Calcutta, formerly vicar of Lamborne: there is also a stained window in the chancel in memory of the Rev. John Murray, a former vicar. The register dates from the year 1560 and is in excellent preservation. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £240, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1878 by the Rev. John Edgell B.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. Joshua Sylvester, the poet, called by Southey the "silver-tongued Sylvester," and born in 1563, was a retainer of the Essex family at Lambourn, where he was patronized by Mistress Essex, wife of William Essex esq. Here are places of worship for Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. On the north side of the church is the Hospital, consisting of houses for ten brethren, and founded by John, the son of John Isbury, in 1502, and endowed with 475 acres, producing above £400 yearly; each inmate has 10s. weekly; the almsmen attend daily morning prayers in the Estbury (Trinity) Chapel, kneeling around the above-mentioned tomb, and also attend the daily morning service of the church: Henry Hippisley esq. D.L., J.P. of Lamborne Place and the Warden of New College, Oxford, are the hereditary supervisors of the charity; the management of which is now in the hands of trustees appointed by the Charity Commissioners: on an ancient brass plate inserted in the brickwork near the entrance, are some Latin verses, referring to the foundation of the hospital. Near the church are also five small almshouses, called Hardrett's or Place's Almshouses, for five aged labourers, who have 1s. weekly and a house rent-free; this charity is under the sole management of H. Hippisley esq. D.L., J.P. The charities for the general poor amount to about £30 yearly, for distribution in money and £16 in s. for clothing; there are also charities of £40 a year for Wesleyan educational purposes. A fair was granted by King Henry III. in 1227, to be held in February, on the festival of St. Matthew, but has for many years been discontinued: the Charter for a market was renewed in the reign of Henry VI. but it was discontinued in the last century; two fairs were also granted to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, which are still held (though the days appear to have been changed) on October 2nd and December 4th, for sheep, horses, and cattle. Large coursing meetings are held at Ashdown, near Lamborne, every February and October. In the market place is a fine Perpendicular cross, consisting of a tall plain shaft, with a canopied head, raised on octagonal steps; the canopy once contained figures, but has been so much defaced that these can no longer be identified: the steps are comparatively modern, and appear to have been patched: it is said that there was formerly another cross here, on the spot now occupied by the weighing machine, and known as St. Antholin's cross. Lamborne Place, the seat of Henry Hippisley esq. D.L., J.P. in this town, is a fine Elizabethan mansion, erected in 1843, on the site of the ancient residence of that family, and is said to occupy the site of a Saxon palace belonging to King Alfred the Great; the hall contains a collection of armour, said to be the largest of a private character in the country; one of the suits formerly belonged to Sir William Temple and subsequently to Lord Palmerston: there are portraits of incidental value of Charles I. Wiclif, and Sir Thomas Horde, a Parliamentarian, pictures by Gainsborough and Sir Joshua Reynolds, and an old wassail bowl, formerly belonging to the Earls of Huntingdon, and reputed to be of the time of Robin Hood, beside many other rare curiosities. There are numerous antiquities on the downs near Lamborne, such as the White Horse, Weyland Smith's Cave, Uffington Camp and Alfred's Camp, described under names of other places. Near here are also the Seven Barrows, so called, a group of tumuli on the downs about two miles north of Lamborne, some 20 in number, and have been proved, by excavations made by Dr. Wilson and Mr. E. Martin Atkins, in 1850, to be the sepulchres of ancient Britons; one of these, standing apart from the rest, with a height of 10 feet and a circumference of 360 feet, was completely filled with British urns, one of which measured 13 inches in height: the other barrows examined afforded instances both of cremation and ordinary burial, bodies in the latter case being interred with the knees drawn up to the chin. Membury Fort is situated on the borders of Wilts and Berks, being partly in Lamborne and partly in Ramsbury parish, and has been thought by Dr. Guest and others to indicate the site of an ancient town. Letcombe Camp, also called Sagbury or Sackborough, is on the brow of the chalk escarpment overlooking the vale to the north, about two miles south-east of Wantage; skeletons have recently been found on Stancombe Down, near Lamborne, and in a ploughed field at Maddle Farm, about 2 miles distant from the town. The Earl of Craven, who is lord of the manor, Sir Francis Burdett bart. and H. Hippisley esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The parish comprises the town of CHIPPING LAMBORNE and the tithings of UPPER LAMBORNE, EASTBURY and BOCKHAMPTON, BLAGRAVE and HADLEY. The entire area is 14,830 acres, a large portion of which are downs on which race-horses are trained; rateable value, £13,990; the population of the parish, including the Woodlands and Eastbury, in 1881 was 2,163.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Martin.

UPPER LAMBORNE is a tithing 1 mile north-west. A small church, called St. Luke's, was built and consecrated here, with a burial ground, in November, 1868, by the late Bishop Wilberforce.

BOCKHAMPTON is a tithing 1 mile east. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Herbert Barnard esq. and James Thring Coxe esq.

BLAGRAVE is a tithing 2½ miles south. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor, anciently held by the families of De Bathe, Feyes, Shrewsbury, Garrard and Holland. The principal landowners are John Aldridge esq. and Sir Francis Burdett bart.

HADLEY is a tithing 2 miles south-west. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Colonel Blagrave, H. Hippisley esq. D.L., J.P. and the Rev. James Francis.

Eastbury is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1867 out of Lamborne civil parish: it is 1½ miles south-east from Lamborne and 7 north from Hungerford. The river Lamborne passes through it. The church of St. James, erected by subscription, is a small and plain structure consisting of chancel, nave, porch and small bell turret. The register dates from the year 1867. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £120 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1879 by the Rev. George Frederick Forbes M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Charities £4 10s. The manor has successively belonged to the Fitzwarrens, a Duchess of Exeter, the Bourchiers, the Clarkes of Ardington, the Jones family, of Ramsbury and thence to their descendant, Sir Francis Burdett bart. the principal landowner. The soil is thin clay; subsoil, flint and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 2,300 acres; the population in 1871 was 324.

LETCOMBE BASSET is a parish about 2½ miles south-west-by-south from Wantage, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Wantage archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is a Norman structure, originally built about 1100: it was lengthened and a tower containing 3 bells added at the west end about 1260, and was thoroughly repaired and a south aisle added in 1862; a Norman font, probably coeval with the original building, is still in use. The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and held by the Rev. William Blackmore M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. There is a fuel allotment of 8 acres for the poor to cut furze. The land is freehold. The principal landowners are Queen's College, Oxford, and Mr. Percy Smith. The soil is principally chalk; subsoil, chalk and rock. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and turnips. The area is 1,260 acres; rateable value, £1,306; the population in 1881 was 221.

Parish Clerk, John Glass.

LETCOMBE REGIS is a township and parish about a mile and a half south-west from Wantage, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford. The parish is intersected by a feeder of the river Ock. The church of St. Andrew is a small building consisting of chancel and nave and an embattled tower containing 6 bells: the chancel is Early English and has on the north side a blocked Norman doorway: the chancel arch is of the same date: the windows in the nave are variously Decorated and Perpendicular and the north and south doorways Early English, to which period the tower and font may also be referred: the font and east window are fair specimens of the architecture of the period in which the church was built, supposed to be the 14th century. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1697; burials, 1698. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £240 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester and held since 1868 by the Rev. Thomas Lanfear. There are charities of £8 yearly for educational purposes and about £8 for distribution in money and kind. In this parish are two objects of interest to antiquarians; one of these is Letcombe Castle, so called, its ancient and proper name being "Sagbury" (A.S. secge, a soldier), this is a large and nearly circular Roman encampment, from which the beautiful hill to the south of the village has received the name of the Castle Hill, and is situated on the right hand shortly after crossing the road from Wantage to Hungerford, near an old inn called "The Red House," it is stated to have been defended by a double rampart or ditch, with one entrance only on the east, enclosing an area of 26 acres, and the entrenchments and ditch about 8½ acres more; the other is the curious moat which surrounds the residence of John Rowles esq. a modern structure now occupying the site of what is supposed by some to have been a royal hunting box in the days of King John. The land is freehold: the great tithes belong to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The principal landowners are Stephen William Silver and John Rowles esqrs. The soil is chalk and clay; subsoil, chalk and rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The entire area is 3,720 acres, inclusive of East and West Challow; the acreage of Letcombe Regis is 2,387 acres; rateable value, £2,678; the entire population in 1881 was 1,022 (viz. Letcombe Regis, 453; East and West Challow, 569).

EAST AND WEST CHALLOW townships, in this civil parish, have been formed into an ecclesiastical parish and will be found under a separate head.

Parish Clerk, William Stanley.

LITTLEWORTH is a small village, with the hamlets of THRUPP and WADLEY, formed into an ecclesiastical parish in 1843, in the hundred, union, civil parish and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Littleworth is to the north of the road from Faringdon to Abingdon, 2 miles north-east from Faringdon, 12½ west from Abingdon and 15½ from Oxford. The Church of the Ascension is a small plain modern building in the Early English style; consisting of chancel (added in 1876), nave and a bell-turret on the western gable containing one bell: the east window is stained. The register dates from 1839. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £120, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1876 by the Rev. Edward Thorp B.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, who resides at Buckland. Kitemore, a handsome modern French Gothic building, situated between Faringdon and Shillingford, commands a fine view of White Horse hill and scenery in the vicinity, it is the property of T. L. Goodlake esq. J.P. but is at present (1882) unoccupied. Oriel College, Oxford, are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is a rich loam; subsoil, clay, sand and gravel. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 2,547 acres; the population in 1881 was 391.

WADLEY is a hamlet, one mile south on the south of the road from Faringdon to Abingdon. Wadley House, which is the seat of Thomas Leinster Goodlake esq. J.P. is an ancient stone building, situated in the centre of a fine domain, once the property of the Abbey of Stanley Imperatricis, Wiltshire, it passed in the reign of Henry VI. into the hands of Oriel College, Oxford: it was the residence of Sir Thomas Unton at the Reformation, whose descendants resided here till the commencement of the 17th century; Queen Elizabeth visited it in 1574 and King James in 1603.

THRUPP hamlet is 2 miles north-west on the banks of the Isis, which here divides the county from Oxfordshire.

EAST LOCKINGE is a parish about 2 miles east-south-east from Wantage, in the hundred, union and county court district of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wantage and diocese of Oxford. The Great Western railway passes near this parish, the nearest station is at Wantage road. The church of All Saints is a small structure, with chancel, nave, south aisle and square embattled tower containing 4 bells. The register dates from the year 1540. The living is a rectory, yearly value £480 with residence, in the gift of Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. and held by the Rev. William Alston Cole M.A. of Christ Church, Oxon. Sneyd's charity of £15 yearly is for the school, and Aldworth's (£6) to deserving poor, and £2 to parish clerk; and there is poor's land of 7 acres. Lockinge House, the seat of Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, is a very handsome mansion; the grounds are extensive and tastefully laid out. The soil is clay, chalk and loam; subsoil, blue sand and chalk. The crops are the usual cereals. The parish, which includes the tithing of BETTERTON and WEST GINGE, comprises about 2,822 acres; rateable value, £3,471; the population in 1881 was 330.

LONGCOT is a township of Shrivenham and was with Fernham township formed into an ecclesiastical parish in 1846, in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated in the Vale of White Horse, is 4 miles south from Faringdon, 9 north-west from Wantage, 9 from Swindon and 2½ miles west-by-north from Uffington station on the Great Western railway. The Wilts and Berks canal and a small brook, which runs into the Ock, pass through portions of the parish. There is a branch of the canal to a wharf near the village. The church of St. Mary is a curious example of the Jacobean style, prevailing during the seventeenth and last century; it consists of a chancel, nave with north porch and a massive western tower; the latter, erected in 1722, contains 6 bells: a south aisle with western porch was added by the late Venerable Edward Berens M.A. vicar of Shrivenham: three semi-circular arches,with massive columns,having Classic bases and Gothic capitals, separate nave and aisle; most of the windows are Gothic of various styles: the tower is almost entirely Classical. The register dates from the year 1670. The living is a vicarage, united with Fernham, joint yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1853,by the Rev.John Hughes M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. Viscount Barrington is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is strong clay and stone brash; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is returned with Shrivenham; rateable value, £2,648; the population in 1881 was 393.

LONGWORTH is an extensive village and parish 7 miles east from Faringdon, 8 west from Abingdon and 10 from Oxford, in the hundred of Ganfield, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The Isis separates this county from Oxfordshire and forms the northern boundary to the parish. The church of St. Mary is partly Early Norman and partly of the succeeding Transition Norman and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, separated from the aisles by arcades of Transition Norman and Early English arches, three on either side: a small chapel north of the chancel, used as a vestry, south porch and a western embattled tower containing 5 bells: some of the windows are Decorated, others Perpendicular; the tower appears to have been added early in the latter style, the east, north and south piers being inside the church: the sanctuary rails and reredos exhibit good oak carving of the same period; both aisles are Decorated; the font is Early English and circular; on the south Early English porch is a sun dial, dated 1621: in the chancel are brasses to John Hinde, a former rector, ob. 1422, with half-length effigy; Richard Yate, ob. 1498 and Johanna his wife ob. 1500, with effigies; and Eleanor Godolphin, ob. 1565, also with effigy: in the chapel or Marten's aisle is a mural monument to Sir Henry Marten knt. LL.D. judge of high court of Admiralty and of Prerogative Court of Canterbury and Dean of Arches, ob. 1641. The register dates from the year 1558 and contains the following entry of the baptism of John Fell, dean of Christ Church and Bishop of Oxford, 1676-86: "John, son of the right worshipful Samuel Fell, rector of Longworth, baptized July 16, 1625." The living is a rectory, with the chapelry of Charney Basset annexed, gross yearly value £870 with residence, in the gift of the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College, Oxford, and held since 1841 by the Rev. Owen Jenkins B.D. late fellow of that college. Here are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. There are several charities, among which is the interest of £630 in the £3 per Cent. Consols, bequeathed by H. Fludyer esq. and annually divided among twenty poor people; a sum of £200 in the new £3 per Cents. producing £6 yearly, left by Mr. John Carter, farmer, for the education of poor children; and a bequest by J. Dewe, of £108 Consols, in support of a Sunday school; Davis' charity is a field of 8 acres, producing about £15 distributed in bread & clothing. Sidney E. Bouverie-Pusey esq. is lord of the manor of Longworth. The principal landowners are S. E. Bouverie-Pusey esq. and St. John's College, Oxford. The soil throughout the parish is mixed and ranks among the best land in Berkshire; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The entire area is 4,415 acres; the entire population in 1881 was 1,022; rateable value of Longworth, £3,361; population, 596.

CHARNEY BASSET is a chapelry annexed to this parish, about 3½ miles south from Longworth village, on the river Ock. The chapel of St. Peter, an ancient edifice of Norman date, consists of chancel, nave, north aisle and a Jacobean double bellcot of stone: the east window is Perpendicular: both doorways are Norman, that on the north side having a richly-carved tympanum, representing a robed figure between two grotesque animals, apparently griffins, within a border of addorsed scroll work; the south doorway has a kind of cusped border, supporting rudely carved heads, all within a cable moulding; the chancel arch is also Norman: the nave has a Perpendicular roof of low pitch and Transition Decorated windows: the font is plain Early English and there is a Perpendicular wooden pulpit. The registers of this chapel have entries of baptisms and burials from 1700 to 1812; and of marriages from 1754 to 1811, previous to which entries were made in the Longworth registers. The Manor House is a very ancient building, at present in the occupation of Mr. James Beesley. The rateable value is £1,833. The population in 1881 was 222.

DRAYCOTT MOOR is a township in this parish,on the north-east, but in the union of Abingdon and hundred of Ock. St. John's College, Oxford, are lords of the manor, and principal landowners. The area is 1,041 acres; rateable value, £1,295; the population in 1881 was 225.

LYFORD is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1845 out of the parish of Hanney, 5 miles north from Wantage, 3 north from the Wantage Road station of the Great Western railway and 8 west from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints', a chapelry of Hanney, is a small structure of the Early English period, consisting of chancel and nave and a wooden bell-cot at the west end, on a good Early frame work of four chamfered posts, with braces, forming alternate ogee and pointed arches: there are low side windows on both sides of the chancel, which has an Early English piscina and stone shelf: in the north wall is a locker: the chancel arch is destroyed, but part of the rood screen remains: the font, plain Early English, is octagonal. The register dates from the year 1843. The living is a vicarage, yearly value (including the chaplaincy of the almshouses) £110, in the gift of Worcester College, Oxford and held since 1863 by the Rev. Michael Angelo Camilleri D.D. of the University of Malta. The earliest notice of this place is in 944, when King Edmund gave land here to Ælfeg, between the Ock and Childrey brook; the abbey of Abingdon had also land in this parish from 1032 till the Dissolution, when a portion thereof passed to John Yate, of Charney: in 1765 the estate was purchased of the Greenaways by the trustees of Mrs. Sarah Eaton and in 1775 was conveyed by them to Worcester College, Oxford Here are 20 almshouses, founded in 1611 by Oliver Ashcombe, a native of Lyford, for the poor of East and West Hanney and Lyford: these form a quadrangle, attractive in appearance, with a chapel on the west side: the revenue of this charity amounts to £500 a year; one shilling a day is allotted to each inmate; divine service is conducted every day by a chaplain, who receives £40 yearly. The principal landowners are Worcester College, Oxford, who are lords of the manor and Sidney E. Bonverie-Pusey esq. The soil is heavy clay and loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 743 acres; rateable value, £1,028; and the population in 1881 was 133.

MAIDENHEAD.

MAIDENHEAD (formerly MAIDEN-HYTHE), "the midway wharf," between Marlow and Windsor, is a corporate borough and market town, possessing a distinct jurisdiction; it stands in the parishes of Bray and Cookham, on the banks of the Thames, which is here crossed by a fine stone bridge of six arches, erected in 1772 at a cost of £20,000 from plans by Sir Robert Taylor, architect, and connecting this place with Taplow, in Buckinghamshire: the town stands on the old Bath road and is a polling place for the county, in the union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, distant from London (by road) 26 miles and 24 by rail, 13 from Reading, 9 from Henley and 6 from Windsor. There is a station here on the Great Western railway, which crosses the river on a brick bridge of two arches, designed by Sir Isambard Brunel, and remarkable as exhibiting the greatest span ever yet accomplished in brick.

The town (which is lighted with gas by a Company and supplied with water by the Maidenhead Waterworks Company, whose reservoirs are at Boyne Hill) has in the outskirts many good houses, particularly along the bank of the river. The view on either side, but particularly toward the town, is charming in the extreme; between the bridge and Boulter's lock, a little inland, a new suburb has sprung up, called "Ray Park." The country about Maidenhead, and more especially that of and about the woods of Cliefden and Hedsor, a short distance up the river on the Bucks side, is surpassingly delightful and its popularity not less constant than deserved.

The Corporation consists of a high steward, mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors; two aldermen are changed every three years, and four councillors every year. The Corporation act as the Urban Sanitary Authority. The Borough has a Commission of the Peace.

St. Andrew and St. Mary Magdalene is now an ecclesiastical parish, formed out of Bray and St. Luke's parishes in 1875. The church of St. Andrew and St. Mary Magdalene was originally a chantry, founded by Margaret of France, second consort of Edward I. in 1270, when the first building, of which a full account is given in Nichols' Collectionea Topographica, vol. 6, was erected in the centre of High street; it was rebuilt on the same site in 1724 and in 1825-6 was taken down and the present building erected at the east end of High street: it has been recently (1882) enlarged and much improved; a chancel has been erected and furnished with choir seats and a flooring inlaid with ornamental tiles: the organ has been rebuilt and placed in a chamber on the south side: a handsome lectern, of wrought iron, with slab and brass ornaments, has also been provided: an embattled tower, 60 feet in height, has been built with slate louvres and small windows, in this the two bells have been placed and the church clock has been restored: further improvements (and amongst these a new pulpit and the elongation of the church at the west end) are in contemplation and will be carried out speedily. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a vicarage, and was formerly in the patronage of the corporation of Maidenhead, who sold it under the Municipal Reform Act; it is of the annual value of about £400, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. Alfred Peache and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Alfred Hill M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford.

St. Luke's is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1867 entirely out of Cookham parish; the church is of freestone, in the Early English style, it has a reredos the gift of the late incumbent of Cookham Dean, the Rev. G. H. Hodson; the choir seats were carved at the expense of the Rev. W. B. Hole: it has a chancel with a large stained window, raised by subscription and a nave with arcades of six bays dividing it from the aisles; in the south aisle are four memorial windows; the church was enlarged in 1869 and is capable of seating 850 persons, half of the sittings being free. The register dates from the year 1866. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £400, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1874 by the Rev. William George Sawyer M.A. Trinity Hall, Cambridge.

St. Paul's Chapel of Ease, in Albert street, was erected in 1871; it is a brick building consisting of chancel and nave, with a small bellcot and 1 bell and will seat 160; it is used as a school during the week; the curate in charge is the Rev. Robert E. Spencer, of St. Aiden's:

At the Cookham Union, which is about a mile from the town, a handsome church (St. Mark's) was erected in 1873, for the use of the inmates, at a cost of about £2,000, by John Hibbert esq. of Braywick Lodge; it is a stone cruciform building and has chancel, nave, transepts and turret with 1 bell, with a good organ.

Spoore's charity provides £20 yearly for education and about £50 yearly for apprenticing boys, Poole's charity provides £30 per annum for the poor of Cookham and Bray, the former receiving two thirds, and the latter one third; Ring's bequest of £42 is distributed in money; Rixman's of £19 is for apprenticing and clothing two children in the parish of Bray once in three years, and Merry's of £5 is for education.

Here is a Catholic School Church dedicated to St. Mary. There are Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan Methodist chapels and a Meeting House for the Society of Friends.

An almshouse for eight poor men and their wives was founded and endowed by James Smyth esq. in 1659, and has a present income of about £257 per annum.

St. Andrew's Coffee and Mission room, North town, contains a small free library for the use of the inhabitants of that neighbourhood.

The Workingmen's Club and Institute is in Norfolk road, it is well supplied with periodicals and there is a circulating library in connection.

The Town Hall is in High street in which the Borough Magistrates hold their meetings above, and the corn market is held every Wednesday beneath; it has recently been almost entirely rebuilt from designs by Messrs. Cooper and Davy at a cost of nearly £6,000, and now contains a borough police court, large market hall, and public offices are arranged on the ground floor and above is the public hall 60ft. by 30ft.; in a separate building in the rear are police cells and accommodation for the borough police force. The style adopted for the town hall is a free treatment of Renaissance and the front is built of red brick with stone dressings. The county police station is in Broadway.

The Maidenhead, Cookham and Bray Angling Association was formed for the protection and improvement of the fishery from the Shrubbery to Monkey Island, and has already stocked the river with a large quantity of fish, chiefly trout.

A newspaper, "The Maidenhead Advertiser," is published here on Wednesdays.

The Volunteer Fire Brigade was established in 1866 and is supported entirely by voluntary contributions, there are 3 manual engines, and the usual appliances and a fire escape stationed at the Saracen's Head. The Brigade consists of a captain deputy captain, 6 lieutenants, 3 engineers, 18 pioneers, a foreman, and secretary.

The Cottage Hospital, situate in Norfolk road, was founded in 1880, it contains 12 beds and is supported by voluntary contributions.

Lady Pocock left in 1816 £50 yearly to be distributed in money among the poor on the 18th January, and also twenty six-penny loaves to be given every Saturday for ever to twenty poor persons, she also bequeathed £100 to be distributed biennially to ten female unmarried servants in sums of £10 each who should have lived in the same situation in Maidenhead or its vicinity for the term of seven years; she also founded a sunday school, known as Lady Pocock's school, for thirty girls and she also left a gift of bread, meat and coals to be distributed at Christmas in each year to 100 poor families. There are also the following charities: Shapland's, the interest of £1,099 19s. 4d. £3 per Cent. Bank Stock, distributed in clothing; Whitfield's, £6, for poor widows of Cookham and Bray; Davis's, £50 for distribution among the poor; Wyvill's, interest of £400 for coals, bread and clothing, and Seymour's, of £20 a year to educate six poor girls. The trustees are the incumbent and chapel wardens of St. Mary's.

There is a solid stone lock on the river, about half a mile above the bridge, called Boulter's or Ray Mill Lock, the weir water working a large corn mill. There are two extensive breweries, and a bicycle manufactory.

A regatta is held on alternate years at Maidenhead and Marlow.

The population of the borough in 1871 was 6,173, and in 1881 was 8,219, of which 2,805 were in the parish of Bray and 4,602 in the parish of Cookham.

The rateable value of the borough is £41,877.

MARCHAM, with the Chapelry of GARFORD and the Township of FRILFORD, is a parish in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The river Ock bounds the parish on the south. Marcham is 2¾ miles west from Abingdon. The church of All Saints is a spacious structure in the Perpendicular style; it was rebuilt in 1837 and opened on Easter day of the same year: it has chancel, nave and a square tower. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Garford annexed, joint yearly value net £455 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, and held by the Rev. Alexander Russwurm M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. The charities are of the annual value of £73 8s. 6d. —£20 of which is for the clothing the poor children of the parish. Here is a small Baptist chapel. The principal landowners are C. P. Dutfield esq. who is lord of the manor and the Rev. B. Morland. Sheepstead House, the property of the Rev. Benjamin Morland M.A. is occupied by Mrs. Davis; it is a plain modern mansion. Marcham Park, the seat of Charles Philip Dutfield esq. J.P. is a stone mansion in the Classical style, standing in a small, well-wooded park of 40 acres. The soil is sand and stone brash; subsoil, rock. The population, including the township of Frilford and chapelry of Garford, in 1881 was 1,128, viz. Marcham, 786; Garford, 164; Frilford, 178. The area of the parish is 1,940 acres, the chapelry of Garford 996, and of Frilford 1,184; rateable value of Marcham £4,098, Frilford £1,443 and Garford £1,948.

Garford is a chapelry 2 miles west-by-south. The ancient chapel of St. Luke at Garford was entirely rebuilt in the Early English style on the old lines, with the addition of a north aisle: it now has chancel, nave and north aisle: the interesting old oak screen has been restored and all the work has been executed in precisely the same manner as the original, so far as it could be ascertained: Miss Aldworth, of Fulford, worked and presented a very beautiful frontal for the communion table: many of the windows are stained as memorials: Mr. Edwin Dolby was the architect employed: the church services at Marcham at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.; at Garford at 9.30 and 3 on Sundays. Here is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The principal landowners are Charles Philip Duffield esq. who is lord of the manor, Col. Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. & St. John's College, Oxford.

Frilford is a township 1 mile north-west. Charles Philip Duffield esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Messrs. Hayward Aldworth, Philip Aldworth, Thomas Floyd and St. John's College, Oxford.

The hamlet of COTHILL has been severed from this parish and ecclesiastically annexed to Dry Sandford, under which place particulars will be found.

MIDGHAM, formerly a chapelry in the parish of Thatcham, was formed into an ecclesiastical parish in 1857, it is in the hundred of Faircross and union and county court district of Newbury, 6 miles east from Newbury and 11 south-west from Reading, on the northern bank of the river Kennet. The Great Western railway station at Woolhampton, one mile and a half distant, is called Midgham station, 47 miles from London. The old church of St. Matthew, which was situated close to Midgham House, was taken down April, 1863: the present church of St. Matthew, erected in 1869 on higher ground and more in the centre of the parish, at the expense of Benjamin Buck Greene esq. J.P. is a handsome edifice in the Decorated style consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle and a tower with lofty spire, containing 3 bells, two of which were in the old church: there is one stained window. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £147 with residence in the gift of Benjamin Buck Greene esq. J.P. and held since 1867 by the Rev. John Launcelott Errington M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. Midgham House is the seat of Benjamin Buck Greene esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is various, but mostly clay to a great depth. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,428 acres; rateable value £3,165; the population in 1881 was 298.

MILTON is a parish 4 miles south-by-west from Abingdon and 2½ north-east from Steventon station by road and 1 mile by a foot-path, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Abingdon and diocese of Oxford: the church of St. Blaise is a small structure in the Decorated style comprising chancel, nave, north aisle with square tower containing 5 bells and a clock; it was restored throughout in 1851 excepting the tower; the latter is Early Decorated: there are some interesting stained windows to the memory of members of the Bowles family and that of the late Archdeacon Clarke; also a stone pulpit in memory of the Archdeacon. The earliest date of the register is 1654. The living is a rectory, yearly net value £480 with residence, in the gift of trustees and held since 1875 by the Rev. George Marshall M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, formerly student (fellow) of that house. There are charities of £30 yearly value, left by the Rev. M. Eaton, for the poor of Milton, Dagbourn and Harwell, distributed by the rector. Milton House, the seat of John Basil Barrett esq. J.P. is a handsome Elizabethan mansion built by Inigo Jones; it has a Catholic chapel fitted up for service. At Milton Hill is the seat of John Samuel Bowles esq. D.L., J.P.; it is an irregular mansion, of no architectual pretensions, standing in a beautifully wooded park of 70 acres. John Basil Barrett esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor, and J. S. Bowles esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay and gravel; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 1,431 acres; rateable value £4,246; the population in 1881 was 418.

NORTH MORETON, is a parish and village within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, 4 miles west from Wallingford, 3 miles east from Didcot Junction station on the Great Western railway and 17 miles north-west from Abingdon, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a Late First-Pointed structure (1290) consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and western tower, 56 feet high, containing 5 bells: at the south-east corner of the church is a handsome chapel called Stapleton's Chantry, in which is an old stained window, supposed to be of the thirteenth century, and an old piscina formed in a splay of the chancel window; a deed of Edward III. giving permission to Sir Miles Stapleton to alienate 25 acres of land for use of the priest of this chantry has been discovered. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence and 35 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Archdeacon of Berks and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Henry Young M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The Rev. J. Wasey is impropriator of the great tithes, the amount of which is £390. Here are two Sunday schools and a chapel for Primitive Methodists. The only charity is that of Mrs. Ann Noyes, of £3 a year to be applied to purchase bread, coals or clothes for the poor, at the discretion of the vicar and churchwardens. M. C. Greenwood esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Morrison esq. General Crutchley and J. K. Hedges esq. The soil and subsoil are chiefly green sandstone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 1,103 acres; rateable value £2,275; the population in 1881 was 325.

SOUTH MORETON is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Wallingford, 4 miles south-west from Wallingford, 3 miles north-east from Didcot Junction station on the Great Western railway and 4 miles north from Upton station on the Didcot and Newbury railway, in the hundred of Moreton, Wallingford union and county court district, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist is in the Early English style and consists of two aisles, part of one forming the chancel: two of the Early English windows remain on the south side, the others were replaced by Decorated and Perpendicular windows in 1849: the east wall was rebuilt, the old wooden tower pulled down and two new bells were hung in a belfry erected at the west end of the south aisle, the interior was reseated and a stone pulpit and font were provided. The register dates from the year 1599. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of the University of Oxford, who are obliged to present the Principal of Hertford College or some one nominated by him, and held since 1875 by the Rev. George Henry Gwilliam M.A. fellow of Hertford College. The Baptists have a chapel here. The charities are—the interest of £10, which is given in money to the poor; and a gift of £1,000 by Edward Sherman esq. a native of the parish resident in London, the interest to be applied for the benefit of the poor at the discretion of trustees. Arthur Sadgrove esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Morrison esq. and John Kirby esq. The land is principally arable; the soil is a light gravel; and the crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area, inclusive of the hamlet of Fulscot, is 1,470 acres; rateable value, £6,935; the population in 1881 was 328.

MOULSFORD is a village and parish with a station three-quarters-of-a-mile north of the village, on the Great Western railway, 48 miles from London, 3½ miles from Wallingford, situated on the London road, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist, a small chapel of the fourteenth century, restored in 1847, is charmingly situated on the bank of the river Thames and consists of chancel and nave, with a small north aisle, added in 1847, and a low wooden belfry with short spire: in the chancel are monuments to the Giffard family; William Giffard, who died in 1694, was the first president of Fort George, in Africa: the church was restored by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. in 1847. The register dates from the year 1773. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £60 with residence, in the gift of H. B. Morrell esq. and held since 1879 by the Rev. William Yates Foot M.A. of Downing College, Cambridge. Sambourne's charity of 3 acres produces £6 yearly, which is distributed in money. Mrs. Sally Hall Bradshaw in 1880 left £1,000, the interest to be distributed amongst the deserving poor of the parish annually on Ascension day. H. B. Morrell esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. This village is the resort of very many artists, anglers and boating men to whom the "Beetle and Wedge" is a well-known and much valued hostelry of long standing; excellent perch fishing can be had between the islands near the bridge. The splendid stretch of water which the river here affords is usually chosen for the race of the Oxford Trial Eights for the Inter-University boat race. The County Lunatic Asylum, near here, is in the parish of Cholsey, under which head it will be found described. The soil is chalk and loam; subsoil, chiefly chalk. The crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The parish contains 900 acres of arable land and the downs comprise 400 acres, total 1,429; rateable value, £1,569; the population in 1881 was 170.

NEWBURY with SPEENHAMLAND.

Newbury is a municipal borough, market and union town, a polling place for the county and head of a county court district, in the hundred of Faircross, rural deanery of its name, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, on the river Kennet and intersected by the Kennet and Avon canal, over which is a stone bridge; it is near the Hampshire border, 56 miles from London, 17 south-west from Reading, 9 east from Hungerford, 19 south-west from Wallingford. The Great Western railway has a station here on the branch from Reading to Hungerford and Devizes, which is also at present the terminus of the new line from Didcot, opened in April, 1882.

The town is of very ancient origin. Antonine makes mention of the old city of Spinæ, and Newbury, as its name infers, arose and had beginning out of the ruins of it; therefore, as Camden properly has it, "Newburie must acknowledge Speen as its mother." In Saxon times there was here a town of 51 houses, belonging to a Thane named Ulward, which the Normans called "Uluritone." The town, on the accession of the Normans, fell to the Earl of Perche, whose successor, Thomas, was slain at the battle of Lincoln. The Bishop of Chalons, his heir, sold it to William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, which Earl had then possession of Hampstead Park, whose present proprietor is the Earl of Craven. Hampstead Marshall appertained to the hereditary office of Marshal of England, and as such was held by the Earls of Pembroke. Queen Elizabeth gave it with Benham Valence to John Baptiste Castillion, a Piedmontese of her Privy Chamber, "for faithful services in her dangers." By purchase, Hampstead Marshall and Benham Valence became the property of Sir William Craven, Lord Mayor of London, the ancestor of the noble family of Craven, in whose possession it remains, The Earls of Craven have frequently been High Stewards of Newbury, and the Earl who now holds the title is also High Steward.

Newbury was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth and James I.; and Charles II. granted it additional privileges. The town is now governed by the council, which consists of a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors. The Corporation act as the Urban Sanitary Authority. The borough has a Commission of the Peace and a separate court of Quarter Sessions. An Act of Parliament was obtained in the year 1825 for the improvement, lighting and paving of the town. The borough area was extended by Act of Parliament, 41 and 42 Vict. (1878), and now embraces Speenhamland, part of Greenham and other outlying portions of the town. The gas undertaking was also transferred to the corporation under the provisions of the Borough Extension Act.

The town of Newbury is rapidly developing the many natural and material advantages which it possesses, and the introduction of a new line of railway into the district has done much to stimulate its industrial and commercial resources. The Newbury section of the Didcot, Newbury and Southampton railway, which will establish communication with the chief manufacturing centres of the north, was opened for traffic between Didcot and Newbury in April 1882. The southern portion of the line between Newbury, Winchester and Southampton is being rapidly proceeded with, and is expected to be completed in 1884.

The church of St. Nicholas is a spacious edifice of stone in the Late Perpendicular style, built in the latter part of the reign of Henry VII. or the beginning of the reign of Henry VIII. chiefly by the munificence of John Smalwood, alias Winchcombe, a clothier, the famous Jack of Newbury, whose monogram J.S. occurs very frequently on the ancient bosses of the roof of the nave; he died 15th Feb. 1519, and there is a monumental brass with effigy placed on the north wall of the tower to his memory: it consists of chancel with side chapel, one of which is used as an organ chamber, and vestry, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a western tower of four stages, with a battlemented parapet and octagonal turrets at the angles; these have pyramidical summits with vanes and are surrounded by crocketed pinnacles; the tower contains 8 bells: the chancel has a fine stained east window and the clerestory windows are also stained; the chancel is lined with Derbyshire alabaster on flat panelling and opens to the ancient chapels by wide depressed arches: the reredos has seven panels with crocketed heads and a gilt background bearing the sacred monogram and figures: there are three sedilia and a piscina, all with triangular crocketed canopies: the nave, separated from the chancel by a low panelled screen with gilt iron gates, is of five bays and has arcades of four centred arches on clustered columns; it opens to the tower by a lofty arch: the clerestory is lighted by five large three-light windows on either side; the west window, seven windows in the aisles, two in the clerestory and two in the north chancel aisle, are stained, some of these being memorials to the late Bishop Wilberforce; the Rev. J. L. Randall, 20 years rector of Newbury, and his daughter, Rebe Randall; Edmund Arbuthnot, of Newtown House, Hants, 1873, and Elizabeth his wife, 1866; and to the Rev. H. W. Majendie M.A. vicar of Speen and rural dean: the church was thoroughly restored in 1867 at a cost of nearly £15,000, from the designs of Mrs. H. Woodyer: the church is fitted with oak stalls for the clergy and choir and there are open oak benches throughout the church, seating 1,100 people: since the date of the restoration of the church numerous other stained windows have been inserted, chiefly through the instrumentality of the S. Nicholas Stained Glass Window Society: the church was re-opened by the late Bishop Wilberforce, Oct. 8, 1867: the font is modern and has a lofty, elaborately carved pyramidical cover with figures of the apostles under canopies and suspended from a bracket of wrought iron-work: the pulpit, of the sixteenth century, is also richly carved in two rows of panels; it is painted a dark green relieved with gold and stands on a stone base: there is a brass eagle lectern in the tower: besides that of John Smalwood, mentioned above, are brasses to Mr. Hugh Shipley, a native of Prescott, Lancs. 1526, and rector here, ob. 1596; Francis Trenchard, of Normanton, Wilts, esq. ob. 1635; George Widley, "Mr. of Arts and minister of God's Word," ob. 23rd Sept. 1641: there is a mural monument to Elizabeth Catherine Maria Sheldon: in the south chancel aisle to John Hinton A.M. above 40 years rector, 1720, and Joan, his wife, 1712; also a monument to John Kimber, alderman, who erected almshouses and bequeathed various charities to the town, 1793: on the exterior south wall of the chancel is a monument with a double canopy supported on Ionic pillars, within which is a large kneeling figure of a man cased in half-armour and wearing a ruff; and on the other side three females, also kneeling; below these are eleven children; on the frieze is inscribed "Griffinus Curteyes, Nov. 3 1587," and above it is a shield of arms, "erm. a chevron;" on the east chancel wall is a large impaled shield with crest and mantling; dexter, erm. on a chief, 5 roundles; sinister, 7 garbs, 4, 2 and 1. The register dates from the year 1534. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £580 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1878 by the Rev. Edward Imber Gardiner M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, and surrogate.

There is a church estate which produces about £258 yearly for the repairs of the church, after which the residue is paid to inmates of certain almshouses. The remaining charities amount in gross to £3,208 yearly, of which £572 is applied to educational purposes, £113 to apprenticing, £36 to the clergy, £3,500 (including money from church estate) to the support of almshouses, while £103 is distributed in money and £79 in kind.

The ecclesiastical parish of St. John the Evangelist was formed in 1859 out of portions of the parishes of Newbury and Greenham. The church, consecrated in 1860, is a building of brick in the Decorated style, erected by Miss Hubbard in memory of her parents, from the designs of Mr. Butterfield; it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, and a bell-turret with two bells; the church is entirely free and will seat 500 persons: the east and west windows and five others are stained. The register dates from the year 1860. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £163, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1871 by the Rev. Henry Thornhill Morgan M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. The population in 1881 was 2,148.

There is also a Catholic church dedicated to St. Joseph, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist, Congregational, Baptist, and Unitarian chapels and a meeting house for the the Society of Friends.

The Cemetery is situated in Newtown road, and is about 5 acres in extent, and contains two mortuary chapels.

The Municipal buildings occupy an important position on the west side of the Market place, adjoining the Old Town Hall, and were erected during 1876 and 1877 from the designs of a local architect (Mr. James H. Money) by Mr. John Crook, builder, of Southampton and form part of a scheme for an entire re-building of the public offices and town hall. They comprise on the ground floor a well-arranged police court, a waiting-room for witnesses and a magistrates' retiring room: the police department is to the left, and consists of superintendent's office, with a staircase to the basement and a constables' room; on the first floor is the council chamber, 37 ft. by 27 ft. with a fine hammer beam roof and an effectively treated interior; the window heads are filled with the armorial bearings of eminent persons connected with the borough; adjoining are retiring and committee rooms and a residence for the hall keeper: the principal feature of the front elevation is a lofty tower, with illuminated clock, the lower stage of which forms the principal entrance, opening into a spacious vestibule, from which a broad staircase conducts to the principal floor. The Old Town Hall has been enlarged and improved to meet the immediate requirements of the town.

Newbury is one of the few places possessing the right of electing boys and girls to Christ's Hospital (the Blue Coat school), the privilege being enjoyed under the will of Mr. John West, an opulent clothier of his time, who had a cloth factory in this town; in the election preference is given to founders' kin: all householders are entitled to vote.

The town is rich in almshouses. The Hospital of St. Bartholomew, an ancient foundation, to which a charter is said to have been granted by King John, has an income of £900 a year and supports 24 almshouses and a Free school called the St. Bartholomew Grammar School, which has now 120 scholars, who pay fees varying from five to ten guineas a year; the school has been reconstituted under the Endowed Schools Commission and is now under the control of a board of governors, of which the Earl of Carnarvon is a member. Here is a chapel, called the Litten, in which prayers are said once a week for the benefit of the almspeople: at this chapel. John Smalwood, alias Winchcombe, the famous clothier, and commonly known as Jack of Newbury, is said to have been married. This worthy person is stated by Fuller "Worthies of Berks" to have been "the most considerable clothier (without fancy or fiction) England ever beheld;" he kept 100 looms at work in his own house, and in the expedition against James IV. of Scotland he is said to have equipped a contingent of 100 men for the king's service "as well armed and better clothed than any;" tradition relates that he feasted Henry VIII. and Queen Catherine of Arragon at his own house in Newbury, still existing, but now divided into various tenements and that the king offered him the honour of knighthood, which he declined: he was a munificent contributor to the repair and adornment of the parish church, in which, agreeably to his desire, he was buried, together with Alice, his wife, in 1519: Henry Winchcombe, his descendant, was created a baronet in 1661, but the title became extinct at the death of his son Sir Henry Winchcombe in 1703; Newbury is frequently described as having been a Parliamentary borough at the time of Jack of Newbury, but it does not, however, appear that Newbury was a Parliamentary borough at this period. It sent representatives to a parliament at Westminster on one occasion in the reign of Edward I. and being a place of considerable trade, it also sent representatives to a great council, on a precept in the time of Edward III. There are upwards of 60 almshouses, of various foundations, in different parts of the town.

The Corn Exchange, situated on the east side of the Market place and opened on the 4th June, 1862, is a commodious building of stone in the Classic style; the front elevation has four pilasters of the Corinthian order, supporting a pediment and cost about £6,000. A very important wool market was commenced on the 30th June, 1862, at which there was deposited 2,300 tons of wool; it is held annually on first Wednesday in July.

The Literary and Scientific Institution contains a library of over 2,000 volumes; a museum has been added containing objects of general and local interest, among which may be mentioned the barbed head of a war-arrow found in Newbury peat.

Newbury is known in history as the scene of two important battles between King Charles I. and the Parliament. The first action was fought on the Wash and Enborne Heath, to the south of the town, 20 Sept. 1643, and resulted unfavourably for the king, who commanded his army in person. Between five and six thousand men were slain on both sides, including the chivalrous and patriotic Lord Falkland. The tumuli where many of the dead were buried still exist on Wash Common. A handsome memorial has been erected to Lord Falkland on the battlefield, by public subscription, on a site given by Mr. Walter Money F.S.A. hon. sec. to the Newbury District Field Club, who has also published a full and detailed account of the two engagements. The memorial also commemorates Lord Carnarvon, Lord Sunderland and other Royalist officers: it was inaugurated by the Earl of Carnarvon with much ceremony in 1878. The second battle was fought on the north side of the town, 27 Oct. 1644, at which the King and the Prince of Wales (afterwards Charles II.) were present. Cromwell also held a command on the Parliamentary side; no decided advantage was gained by either party, but the quarrel between the Earl of Manchester and Cromwell, which resulted from this action, indirectly led to the death of the King and the advancement of Cromwell to the Protectorship.

The streets of Newbury exhibit a number of good specimens of ancient houses. The remains of the house occupied by Jack of Newbury, near the Jack hotel, bears the impress of earlier years than Henry VII. and is most probably of the middle of the fifteenth century. A gabled house, also in Northbrook street, is particularly noticable, where the pilasters and mouldings with egg ornament, are most skilfully rendered. The house in which Lord Falkland was quartered before the first battle of Newbury is yet standing, and the room in which he took his last communion is pointed out.

There are fairs on Holy Thursday, July 5th, September 4th, November 8th; the September fair is held in a small meadow on the south of the town, near which, in another field, the horse and cow fairs are held: besides these fairs there is a large hiring market held in the Market place, on the first Thursday after Old Michaelmas day.

The soil on the banks of the Kennet forms water meadows in which beds of peat occur from 5 to 15 feet thick; and when burnt, the ashes form a valuable fertiliser. In these peat beds very many natural and artificial antiquities have been discovered, a very complete account of which is given in the "Transactions of the Newbury District Field Club," vol. 1872-5.

The area is 1,722 acres; rateable value £22,773; and the population in 1871 was 6,602; and in 1881, 7,016.

Parish Clerk, John Edgar Stillman.

Speenhamland forms part of the municipal borough of Newbury on the north; it is a separate and ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1844. The church of St. Mary was erected in the year 1830 and contains sittings for 789 persons, 200 of which are free: recently the church has been enlarged by the addition of a new chancel, designed by the late G. E. Street esq. R.A.: the other part of the building has also been remodelled. The register dates from the year 1831. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1875 by the Rev. Joseph Games Gibbs M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

PADWORTH is a parish 2 miles south-east of Aldermaston station on the Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway and 8½ west from Reading, situated on the Kennet, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist is a very ancient building of Norman date, consisting of apsidal chancel, nave and a wooden tower on the western gable of the nave, containing 5 bells, dated respectively 1654, 1660, 1816 and 1597, except the third, which is simply inscribed: "SANCTA+MARIA+ORA+ PRO+NOBIS." The walls are all of Norman work, with inserted Perpendicular windows, and the chancel arch is also good Norman work, with sculptured caps: the north and south doorways are of similar character, recessed, with ornamented arches. The register dates from the year 1724. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £290 with residence and 27 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1882 by the Rev. Robert Elton Lee M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford. There are charities of £10 yearly value for clothing and fuel. Near the church is Padworth House, the seat of Christopher Darby-Griffith esq. D.L., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, a handsome mansion situated on an eminence in fine park-like grounds facing the Bath road. The soil is gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are barley, wheat and turnips. The area is 1,176 acres; rateable value, £2,400; the population in 1871 was 273.

Parish Clerk, Edward Hobbs.

PANGBOURNE is a parish, large village and station on the Great Western railway, beautifully situate on the banks of the Thames, 41½ miles by rail and 45 by road from London, 5½ west-north-west from Reading and 11 south from Wallingford, in the hundred and county court district of Reading, union of Bradfield, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James the Great has chancel, nave, north aisle, porch and embattled tower with clock & 6 bells and contains a curious monument with effigy of Sir John Davis, ob. 1625, who was knighted at the taking of Cales, in Spain: the pulpit is a beautiful specimen of carved oak in the Arabesque style. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £600 with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Breedon and held since 1857 by the Rev. Robert Finch M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Breedon's school is endowed with £25 yearly for the master and £15 for apprenticing boys. Here is a Congregational chapel. Gas works were erected here in 1863. Breedon's charity of £5 7s. and Downing's of £4 19s. for coals are for distribution yearly. Bere Court, the property of Mrs. Breedon, situated in a picturesque and retired spot, was given by Brigham, Bishop of Salisbury, to the abbot and monastery of Reading in 1230; at the dissolution of the monastery Sir John Davis acquired it by purchase and it afterwards, in 1671, came into the possession of John Breedon esq. Shooter's Hill, is the residence of Frederick Shoolbred esq.; and West End of the Misses Hopkins. Mrs. Henry Breedon, of Courtlands, is lady of the manor and principal landowner. During the summer months the place is much frequented by tourists and anglers and every accommodation may be found at the George hotel. The soil is gravel; subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,925 acres; rateable value, £7,451; the population in 1881 was 739.

PUSEY is a village and parish in the union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Ganfield, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated in the Vale of White Horse, 5 miles east from Faringdon, 9 west from Abingdon and 12 from Oxford. The church of All Saints is a cruciform stone building of a mixed Gothic and Classical character, consisting of chancel, nave and transepts, with a western bell gable containing 2 bells: it was rebuilt solely at the expense of Mr. John Allin Pusey, who died in 1753: there is a handsome stained window in the north transept to Philip Pusey, dated 1828 and 3 others; also mural and other monuments to the Pusey and Dunch families from 1679 to 1742; an old incised slab in the north trancept is to Henry Doggett and his wife, dated 1480. The register dates from the year 1661. The living is a rectory, yearly value £163 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1868 by the Rev. Thomas Vincent M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The children attend school at Charney Basset. Cherbury camp, a mile and half eastward, is an old British camp with three mounds and three moats surrounding it, still clearly marked. Pusey House, the residence of Sidney Edward Bouverie-Pusey esq. J.P. is an old plain stone mansion, having a front with two bays. Sidney Edward Bouverie-Pusey esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is loam; subsoil, various—clay, sand and gravel. The chief crops are the usual cereals and roots. The area is 1,070 acres; rateable value, £1,187. The population in 1881 was 117.

RADLEY is a parish and station on the Great Western railway and junction of the branch line to Abingdon, 58 miles from London, 2½ north-east from Abingdon, on the west bank of the Isis, which separates it from Oxfordshire, in the hundred of Hormer, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it includes the liberty of Thrupp and Wick and part of the township of Kennington. The church of St. James is a Gothic structure of the early part of the 16th century, with chancel, nave, south aisle and square embattled tower: the church was restored by subscriptions under the superintendence of a former vicar; the roofs were opened, open seats substituted for the old ones and the transept partially rebuilt; against the south wall of the chancel is a handsome monument to Sir William Stonhouse, having effigies of Sir William and his lady carved in alabaster and coloured, with smaller effigies of their children at the sides: the Latin inscription above is by Alexander Gill, Head Master of St. Paul's school, London, the friend of the poet Milton. The register dates from 1599 and contains several entries of the burials of soldiers who served in the Parliamentary army. The living is a donative vicarage, in the gift of Sir George Bowyer bart. except the next presentation, and held by the Rev. Robert James Wilson M.A. of Merton College, formerly fellow of that college and now warden of St. Peter's College, Radley. Davis' charity of £3 3s. yearly is for clothing. The manor belonged to the abbot and convent of Abingdon and after the Dissolution was purchased by George Stonehouse esq. one of the clerks of the Board of Green Cloth in the reign of Elizabeth; in 1792 it passed by will to Captain, afterwards Admiral Bowyer; he was brother of Sir William Bowyer bart. of Denham, Bucks, and was created a baronet, during the lifetime of his brother, as Sir George Bowyer, of Radley, Berks, for his gallantry with Lord Howe on 1st June, 1794; his grandson, Sir George Bowyer bart. is now lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is various and consists of gravel, clay and stiff loam; subsoil, principally gravel. The crops are a succession of grain. The area of the entire parish is 2,994 acres; rateable value, £7,617. The population in 1881, including 125 in St. Peter's College, was 550.

THRUPP, half-mile south and WICK, half south-west, form a liberty, with a population in 1881 of 41.

Parish Clerk, William Hook.

READING.

READING, an ancient and very considerable market and assize town, parliamentary and municipal borough, having separate jurisdiction, is the county town and a poor law union, inland revenue collection, county court district and is a polling place for the county, in the rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it is bounded on the north by the Thames, separating it from Caversham in Oxfordshire, and is 8 miles south-west from Henley-on-Thames, 26 south-east from Abingdon, 68 from Bath, 23 south-west from Maidenhead, 17 east from Newbury, 20 south-east from Wantage, 16 west from Windsor, 16 north from Basingstoke, 45 from Southampton, 15 south-east from Wallingford, 28 south-east from Oxford and 36 from London, situated on two small eminences whose de-clivities fall into a pleasant vale, through which two branches of the Kennet flow, and unite with the Thames at the extremity of the town; on the banks of the former river are some excellent wharves; it is navigable to Newbury and Froxfield; three bridges cross the first river and there is an iron bridge over the Thames. The Kennet and Avon canal is also of great advantage to the town, as it opens up a communication with the Severn.

The town is well-built and has several good streets, which are well paved and all lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are plentifully supplied with water from works the property of the corporation. The houses are mostly built of red brick. The Public Health Acts has been adopted by the corporation.

The borough is divided into three wards—Abbey ward, Castle ward and Church ward. The corporation consists of a high steward, a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen town councillors. The borough has a commission of the Peace and separate Court of Quarter Sessions. The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive; the borough returns two members to Parliament.

Reading is a first-class station on the Great Western railway (many of the trains running from hence to Paddington without stoppage), and is also the junction of the Berks and Hants branch to Hungerford and Basingstoke with the main line; it is also a terminus of the South Eastern (Reading, Guildford and Reigate branch) and South Western railways, which occupy a joint station adjoining that of the Great Western railway.

The ancient history of Reading, called in Domesday "Radynges," is involved in obscurity and the origin of the town is not definitely known. By some it is even supposed to have been founded by the Romans and under the Saxon kings, at least it must have been a place of considerable importance, since, according to Asser and William of Malmesbury, the Danes, A.D. 871, after their defeat at Ashdown, seized its castle and entrenched themselves therein, but were subsequently driven out by the Saxons, who thereupon burnt the town: according to the description given in Domesday book it contained 28 houses, all belonging to the King, 29 others in ruins, one held by Henry Ferrars, a church, two mills, and fisheries, not having then recovered from recent disasters: a strong castle existed here until the time of Henry II., who destroyed it because it afforded a refuge to the partizans of King Stephen in their conflict with the Empress Maude, and no trace of it now exists, except in the name of "Castle Street"; its site was formerly occupied by the old county gaol, which stood in that street, and on the removal of that building in 1798 portions of the ancient structure were discovered. Henry II. frequently visited Reading, and Richard I. held a Parliament here in 1191.

Reading Abbey was founded in A.D. 1121, by King Henry I. as a penance or in obedience to his father's dying wish: it was dedicated to the Holy Trinity, SS. Mary and John the Evangelist and St. James, and was intended for 200 monks of the Benedictine order, with an abbot (mitred), prior and sub-prior: this community was endowed with ample revenues and invested with almost regal power; their possessions were extensive and their privileges scarcely less, and they were also the guardians of a precious relic—the hand of St. James the Apostle—which, with other saintly fragments, brought to them a continuous stream of wealth; the Abbot ranked next to those of Glastonbury and St. Alban's and retained his seat in Parliament till the Dissolution, and among his numerous prerogatives were those of conferring knighthood and coining money: the buildings of the abbey were completed in 1124, but the great church was not finished till 1164, when it was consecrated by Becket in the presence of Henry II. and many of the nobility; within it, during the period of 1206-45, six bishops were consecrated, and in 1191 Longchamp, bishop of Ely and chancellor, was excommunicated; here also in 1539 John of Gaunt was married to Blanche of Lancaster; Henry I. its founder, wrapped in an oxhide, was buried here in Dec. 1135, and his second queen, Adeliza, and the Empress Maude: and here also were interred William, eldest son of Henry II. Reginald, Earl of Cornwall, his natural son, Richard, Earl of Cornwall, brother of Henry III., Constance, of York, granddaughter of Edward III. and Ann, Countess of Warwick: the abbey continued for four centuries and was at the time of its dissolution one of the noblest and wealthiest monasteries in the kingdom, its revenues being not less than £1,938 13s. 3½d. per annum, which Lysons estimates to represent a modern value of £20,000: of the abbey, with the exception of the gateway, only enormous and shapeless masses of flint and rubble, forming the core of its dismantled walls, now remain; these are entirely destitute of any architectural design, for the destroyers stripped off the whole of the ashlar masonry, some of which was used in reconstructing streets and bridges, the corporation of Reading alone, under a charter from Queen Elizabeth, carrying off 200 loads of freestone; in 1551 the timber work of the ceiling and 21 loads of other timber were used for the repair of St. Mary's church, and some portion of the materiais were transported to Windsor for the building of a hospital for poor knights: originally the abbey covered a large space of ground; not only had it a large outer court—the Forbury—and an inner court containing the principal buildings, but its domain stretched far away towards Sonning, enclosing a well-timbered park; the abbey proper was built on a slight eminence on the banks of the Kennet and commanded a beautiful view of the Thames, the precinct being surrounded with a wall pierced by four battlemented gateways and the still existing gateway lying within these; the cloisters occupied the present site of the gardens attached to the houses in Abbot's walk, surrounding a space about 145 feet square: on the south side of which was the refectory; the chapter house is now almost the only existing apartment which can be certainly identified: it is 79 by 44 feet, and was originally vaulted from wall to wall and had stone benches on either side, traces of which are still visible; a passage on the north side of the chapter house is conjectured to be the slype: the dormitory is supposed to have been over the west cloister; the garden of the monastery stretched from the present county police courts nearly to the Market Place, and the stables, which were very extensive, occupied a site adjoining Holy Brook: the conventual church, of which Speed's map of 1610 conveys but a very inadequate idea, was a Norman structure: the wainscoting of the choir is now in the hall of Magdalen College, Oxford; a stone coffin was found in 1815, conjectured to have held the remains of the founder; the catalogue of the library in the reign of Henry III. is still extant; it then comprised 100 volumes, 38 of which contained the Holy Scriptures or portions thereof. Hugh Faringdon, 31st and last Abbot of Reading, sturdily refusing to acknowledge the supremacy of Henry VIII. or to surrender his house, was, with two of his monks, Rugg and Onyon, hung, drawn and quartered within sight of his own gateway, Nov. 14th, 1539: the great gateway which originally gave access to the inner court of the abbey, was some years since very carefully restored and is a rectangular structure of two stages, constructed of flint with stone dressings; a wide pointed archway pierces the lower stage, in the upper are small trefoil-headed windows, surmounted by a plain parapet and at the angles are octagonal turrets rising above the whole.

Of other monastic establishments once existing here, the most important was that of the Franciscans or Grey Friars, who established themselves in Reading in 1233, by permission of Pope Gregory IX. and in 1285 moved to a new site, upon which, with the help of Edward I. who furnished them with timber, they erected their convent: its church, completed, as is supposed, about 1311, is one of the finest examples of this period extant and has recently been restored; this house was surrendered to Henry VIII. 13th Sept. 1539, by the warden, Peter Schefford S.T.P. and ten friars: in 1540 the domestic buildings were granted to Robert Stanshaw, a retainer of the King, and in 1543 the corporation obtained possession of the church, which they converted into a town hall; in 1560 it became a workhouse and in 1613 a prison, which purpose it continued to serve until it was purchased in 1863 by the late Ven. Archdeacon Phelps, and by him restored to its original uses.

Auchar or Aucherius, second abbot of Reading, founded here, before 1139, a hospital for lepers, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, but it was discontinued and the lands attached to it appropriated to other purposes before 1413.

Hugh, who became eighth abbot about 1180, founded another hospital for 13 resident poor and the relief of strangers and pilgrims, near St. Lawrence's church.

The hospital of St. John, near St. Lawrence's church, is also supposed to have been founded by one of the abbots, and was occupied by a sisterhood of widows: Abbot Thorne, in the reign of Edward IV. suppressed the hospital and converted it into a grammar school.

In 1212 the Pope's Legate held a council here, and in the following year King John met the legate and barons at Reading and held a parliament. Henry III. after several visits, also held parliaments here in 1241 and 1263; Edward II. was at Reading in 1314, and Edward III. passed Christmas in the town and held a grand tournament in 1346; hither also, in 1380, came Richard II. to punish such of the townfolk as had lent help to the rebel, Wat Tyler: in 1415 Henry V. and in 1440 Henry VI. who then met his parliament: the marriage of Edward IV. with Elizabeth Woodville, was first openly acknowledged at Reading in 1464, when she made her public appearance at the abbey, being conducted thither by the Duke of Gloucester and the Earl of Warwick. Parliaments were held here in 1466-67: the meetings being held in the great hall of the abbey. Henry VII. was at Reading in 1487; Henry VIII. on several occasions, and in 1552 Edward the VI. visited it and was received with much ceremony by the authorities, as afterwards in 1554 were Philip and Mary. Queen Elizabeth visited Reading in 1568, 1572, 1575, 1592, 1602 and 1603; a seat was fitted up for her in St. Lawrence's church and the body of the church strewed with flowers and rushes: the law courts were held here in Michaelmas Term 1625, on account of the plague raging in London; the judges sat in the great hall of the abbey, the town hall and council chamber. In 1643 the town sustained a very severe siege of ten days from the Parliamentarians, under the command of the Earl of Essex: the town itself was strongly fortified, and Essex having summoned the town to surrender, received an answer from Sir Arthur Aston that "he would starve or die in it:" operations were then commenced, and Essex having taken a fortification at Mapledurham and another on Caversham Hill, which gave him the command of the town, it was much battered by the shot; it however, held out, but the governor, having sustained severe injury by the falling of a brick, the command was transferred to Colonel Fielding, and the garrison having at length exhausted their ammunition, held out a flag of truce, at which juncture Prince Rupert and the King, who had marched from Oxford to their relief, engaged the Parliamentarians on Caversham Bridge, where a severe struggle took place, but the Royalists were defeated; the King retired to Caversham House, and the town surrendered upon the terms of the garrison being permitted to march out with colours, arms and baggage to join the King's troops at Oxford. Sir Samuel Luke, the "Hudibras" of Butler, was in the Parliamentary army and wrote an account of the siege. The town continued afterwards to be garrisoned at intervals by both the contending parties, until the inhabitants were nearly ruined by the heavy contributions laid upon them. In 1660, when Charles II. passed through Reading, the corporation presented the King, Queen and their servants with sums of money: in 1668 a skirmish took place in the streets between the Scots and Irish of James II. and the troops of the Prince of Orange, known as "the Reading fight," and annually celebrated by the ringing of bells on Dec. 21st. Queen Anne visited the town in 1700 and received from the municipality 40 pieces of gold.

The church of St. Giles, standing on the east side of Southampton street, is a building of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and battlemented western tower surmounted by a slender spire, and containing a clock and 6 bells: the church suffered much from the artillery of the besiegers during the Civil War, and until a few years since was in a neglected state, but has now been completely restored: in the churchyard is the following curious epitaph:

"He was —
But words are wanting to say what;
Say what is kind;
And he was that."

The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £397 with house, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1874 by the Rev. Cecil Frederick Joseph Bourke M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. There is a fund of about £250 yearly from house property for the support of this church.

St. Luke's church, on the Redlands estate, and attached to St. Giles's, is now being built of red brick; the style is Italian; it will seat about 550, estimated cost £6,000; clergyman in charge, Rev. James Dunlop Paramore M.A. Jesus Coll. Camb.

The church of St. Lawrence, situated on the north-east side of the market place, is a building of flint and stone, in the Early English and Perpendicular styles; it was originally a Norman work, but was rebuilt in 1434, and restored in 1868; and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, with chantry chapel, porch, and a fine western tower of flint and stone 89ft. high, and containing a clock and 10 bells, the largest weighing 4,109 lbs.: the tower is Perpendicular, and has octagonal turrets at the angles, rising into spirelets above the parapet, which is battlemented; the nave exhibits a very good framed tie-beam of oak, and the north aisle, called also St. John's chapel from its having been used by the sisters of the hospital of that name, retains its original roof; this aisle and the chancel were restored in 1848, and most of their windows filled with stained glass; the remainder of the church was restored in 1867, when the church walk or cloisters, erected on the south side in 1619, under a bequest by John Blagrave esq. were removed, the interior re-seated, and two stained windows inserted, at a total cost of £4,000; in the south aisle lies buried John Blagrave, author of "the Mathematical Jewell," who died 9 August, 1611, and on the wall above is a curious painted monument, with his demi-effigy, in cloak and ruff, holding a skull in one hand and a quadrant in the other, with the inscription:

"Johannes Blagravus,
Totus mathematicus,
Cum matre sepultus:"

a figure in ruff and hat, kneeling at a desk, commemorates Martha, wife of Charles Hamley, ob. 1636; there are a few memorials for the Hungerfords, of Wilts; a mural monument to Richard Fynnemore, ob. 1664; and brasses to Edward Butter and his wife, 1585; John Kent and his wife, with effigies; and Walter Barton, gent. 1538, churchwarden in 1509; some rhyming lines appear to John Andrews, vicar 1420-8, but the effigy has been removed during the present century; opposite the pulpit, on the floor, is a brass to William Hunt, and there are several deposited stones; on the south side of the chancel are memorial windows to Charles Lamb, and to Henry and Rachel, the children of the Hon. Mr. Justice Talfourd, dated 1848; on the south side of the tower arch, placed in a niche, is a statue of Dr. Valpy, many years master of the Grammar school. The register dates from the year 1605. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £200 with house, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1874 by the Rev. John Melville Guilding, of King's College, London, and surrogate. The church estate produces £200 yearly.

St. Mary's church, a structure of flint and ashlar, in alternate squares, stands at the end of Minster street, on a spot once occupied by a nunnery, founded by Elfrida, mother-in-law of Edward the Martyr, in atonement for his murder, and called "The Minster;" it was rebuilt in 1551 from materials obtained from the ruins of the abbey, including, it is said, the pillars on the south side of the nave; and in 1594 the tower was rebuilt, after having been destroyed, with its spire, in a gale: the church now consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, north transept, porch and battlemented western tower 90 feet high, with pinnacles at the angles, and containing 8 bells and a clock; the chancel has a Perpendicular open timber roof; the nave has also a good roof of Early character; the Perpendicular font has a pyramidal crocketed cover; the arcade dividing the nave and south aisle has semicircular arches, springing from circular columns; on the north side is an Easter sepulchre of Early work, and a monument in black and gold, with effigies, to William Kendrick and his wife, 1635, executed by John and Matthias Christmas, two brothers, who were artists of some repute in the reign of Charles I.; the triplet window at the east end, and some others are stained; in the chancel hang the old colours of the 66th (Berks) regiment, and a window is about to be erected to those of the officers and men who fell at the battle of Maiwand, in Afghanistan: the vestry contains some brasses of the fifteenth century, the choir room an altar piece attributed to one of the Caracci, and there is an alms-box, dated 1627; over the western entrance is an ancient carved screen; it has been restored since and the chancel enlarged and nearly rebuilt. The register dates from the year 1540. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £661, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1875 by the Rev. Nicholas Thomas Garry M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford, rural dean.

St. Saviour's church, Coley street, an iron structure, is a chapel of ease to St. Mary's.

All Saints' church, in Downshire square, is a building in the Decorated style, consisting of apsidal chancel, nave, aisles, transept, north porch, and a tower on the south side, 70 feet high, hereafter to be surmounted by a spire 85 feet high; the nave, 77 feet 6 inches in length, is divided from the aisles by arcades of five arches; the exterior is of blue Bristol stone with Bath stone dressings, and the cost was about £9,000. The church is under the vicar of St. Mary.

Christ church is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1863; the church is a structure of stone in the Early English style, standing at the top of the Kendrick road, in the hamlet of Whitley; and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, north transept, and tower on the north-west with angle buttresses rising into pinnacles, from which short flying buttresses support a graceful octagonal spire; the west end is pierced by two windows of three lights each, and a trefoil window in the head of the gable; there is a stained window in the north aisle, given by the teachers and scholars of St. Giles's National school, as well as several other stained windows; the church will seat 740. The register dates from the year 1863. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £225, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1881 by the Rev. George Knapp Turner M.A. of New College, Oxford.

Grey Friars is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1864 out of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Lawrence; the church, at the corner of the Caversham road, was re-constructed in 1863 from the ancient church of the monastery of the Grey Friars, the north transept being new from the foundations, and the west and south walls of the south transept, with the two eastern columns of the south arcade, rebuilt; it now consists of a very wide nave, aisles and transepts, but has at present no chancel, it being found impossible at the time to acquire the ground upon which it should stand; the aisles are separated from the nave by Pointed arches supported by clustered columns, and the west window, a portion of the ancient structure, is one of the largest and finest examples of reticulated tracery in existence; in its grooves fragments of stained glass of great thickness were met with, and a few old tiles of peculiar design, discovered in the flooring, have been relaid; under the north pier of the chancel arch, a perfect skeleton was found without any coffin, evidently laid in the foundations when the church was first built, and arched over with masonry: the church was reopened December 5, 1863, nearly 320 years after the ejection of its builders, by Bishop Wilberforce, in the presence of the Mayor and Corporation; the restoration was accomplished solely at the cost of the late Ven. W. W. Phelps, archdeacon of Carlisle, under the direction of the late Mr. Woodman, architect, of Reading; there are sittings for about 800 persons. The register dates from the year 1864. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £330, in the gift of trustees and held since 1874 by the Rev. Seymour Henry Soole M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

The iron room in North street is in connection with Grey Friars and is served by the same clergy.

Holy Trinity is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1875 from St. Mary's; the church, erected in 1826, and endowed by the Rev. George Hulme, of Shinfield, stands on the north side of Oxford street, and it is a plain quadrangular building of brick, with a stone front, in which are three lancet-headed windows; on the western gable is a small turret with 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £250, in the gift of the vicar of St. Mary's and held since 1869 by the Rev. John Cecil Grainger M.A. of University College, Oxford.

St. John the Evangelist is an ecclesiastical parish formed out of the parish of St. Giles in 1873, the church, standing on the east side of Watlington street, is a structure of Kentish rag stone, with dressings of Bath and Mansfield stone, erected in 1837, and rebuilt in 1872 and 1873, from the designs of Mr. W. A. Dixon; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts, and a tower with spire 150 feet in height; there is 1 bell; there are sittings for about 900. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a vicarage, with a variable income arising from pew-rents, in the gift of the Rev. Francis Trench and held since 1857 by the Rev. William Payne M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, hon. canon of Christ Church, Oxford.

St. Stephen's church, in Child street, New Town, is a building of dark red brick relieved with bands of white and grey, and was erected in 1866; it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, porch and a turret on the western gable, containing 2 bells. This church is attached to that of St. John the Evangelist.

St. Mary's episcopal chapel, situated on the north side of Castle street, and erected in 1799 as a dissenting chapel by seceders from the church of St. Giles, was afterwards conveyed to the Church of England and was re-opened in 1836, after various alterations, including the erection of a portico with five Corinthian columns supporting a pediment, and a rectangular pedimented bell tower above it. The living is a perpetual curacy, net yearly value £580, in the gift of trustees and held since 1852 by the Rev. George Ibberson Tubbs.

The Catholic chapel of St. James, erected on the site of the Abbey and the Forbury gardens, was built in 1840 at the expense of the late J. Wheble esq. of Bulmershe Court, from the designs of Mr. E. Welby Pugin; the font is formed from a square block of oolitic limestone, found within the limits of the Forbury, in 1835, the upper part of which forms a square of 27 inches, and has a deeply-cut chain-like pattern of stems and foliage running continuously along its four sides; below this, and at each corner, are remains of carved capitals, exquisitely wrought with wreaths and intertwining knots; in the presbytery are preserved a seal belonging to one of the abbots, and a massive iron key found in the abbey grounds.

There are four Congregational, five Baptist, three Wesleyan, one Presbyterian, one Unitarian, and two Primitive Methodist chapels, a United Methodist Free church, a Friends' meeting house, a room where the Brethren meet, and Salvation Army Barracks in Coley street; a professedly non-sectarian service is also held every Sunday at the Abbey Hall, King's Road. Trinity Congregational chapel was built in 1848 by seceders from Broad Street chapel, which is the oldest in the town, dating from 1680; St. Augustine's Chapel, in Friar street, also belongs to this body; the General Baptist chapel is in King's road, and claims, as a meeting-place for Nonconformists, some antiquity, the congregation having been obscurely traced to the reign of Henry VIII.; the principal Wesleyan chapel is in Queen's road.

Reading Cemetery, situated in the township of Earley, established in 1842, under the provisions of the Act 5 and 6, Vict. c. 19, occupies 10 acres of land, 6 of which are consecrated, and the remainder appropriated to dissenters; it has two mortuary chapels and a residence for the curator.

The free Grammar school (now the Reading school) was founded, according to Leland, in 1445, in which year John Thorne, Abbot of Reading, having suppressed the Hospital of St. John, was directed by Henry VII. to assign its revenues to some charitable institution, in pursuance of which command he established this school, one of his officers, William Dene, giving 200 marks in aid of its foundation. Queen Elizabeth granted the school a charter in 1560 and in the reign of Charles I. Archbishop Laud became its most generous benefactor. The great hall of the suppressed hospital was for many years used as a school room, until in 1790 the well known Dr. Valpy, who long held the head mastership, erected a new one at his own cost. The foundation stone of the present buildings, occupying a plot of ground in Redlands between 12 and thirteen acres in extent, and situated about a mile south-west of the town, was laid by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on July 1st, 1870, and they were formally opened by the Lord Chancellor on September 11th, 1871; they comprise a large central hall, twelve class-rooms and two masters' houses, holding about 80 boarders, a school chapel to hold 300 boys, a larger house for the head master, with 50 single dormitories, also a gymnasium, a large tepid swimming bath and a large detached sanatorium, erected in 1879; adjoining is a cricket ground and fives court. There is a classical side for those boys who are preparing directly for the universities; and a modern side, adapted more especially to the study of English, mathematics and modern languages; the lower forms in the course of instruction is the same for all boys and is such as to insure a sound elementary knowledge of English, Latin, French and arithmetic. The school year is divided into three terms with three vacations, which are spring, summer and Christmas. Cardinal Wolsey is said, on the authority of Archbishop Parker, to have been a short time master of the school, and among the eminent persons educated here may be named Archbishop Laud; John Blagrave, the mathematician; James Merrick, translator of the Psalms; Rev. C. Coates, author of the History of Reading; Thomas Turner, dean of Canterbury; William Shipley, dean of St. Asaph; Francis Annesley, first master of Downing College; and Robert Vansittart, professor of law at Oxford.

The Kendrick schools were founded from certain charities left by John Kendrick in 1624, and by Mary Kendrick, consisting of portion of a freehold farm at Tilehurst, two freehold cottages at Waltham St. Lawrence and a sum of £626 in Consols. These charities were diverted by the Endowed Schools Commissioners to educational purposes and a Middle Class school for boys erected in Queen's road, a similar school for girls being established on premises belonging to the corporation in Watlington street. These schools take an intermediate position between the National and Grammar schools, they are non-sectarian, and deserving scholars, after examination, are awarded exhibitions in the form of partial or total exemption from fees; the governors having also the power to defray the educational expenses of select pupils from these schools at the Grammar school, or some place of higher education, for a term of three years; the boys' school now numbers about 230 scholars and the girls' school 125.

The Blue Coat school, in Bath road, was founded in 1646 by Mr. Richard Aldworth, of Milk street, London, who gave for its endowment the sum of £4,000, augmented in 1666 with £1,000, given by Sir Thomas Rich; in 1720, by £1,200, given by Mr. John West; and with smaller bequests by Mr. John Pottengar and Mr. John Hall. In 1723, Mr. William Malthas gave a rent-charge of £90 per annum, for the education of 10 boys to be clothed in green; there are now 42 boys on this foundation, who are clothed, fed, educated and apprenticed.

The Green school for girls, in Broad street, was established in the Butts in 1779, for children of the three united parishes, and was endowed by Mr. Alderman Richards, the Rev. John Spicer, Awbery Flory esq. and Mr. Frognal, with sums amounting to £2,600. The yearly income derived from rents and investments is £203 13s. 4d.; the school is superintended by a committee of six ladies, the municipal authorities and certain clergy.

The municipal buildings, including the Town hall, Council chamber, Free Library and Museum and the Government Schools of Art, are situated in Friar street and Blagrave street. They are constructed of black and red brick, Gothic. The municipal buildings proper were erected in 1875, from designs by A. Waterhouse esq. and the remaining portion, begun in 1879, on the 3rd of November, in which year the foundation stone was laid by the Earl of Carnarvon, were completed and opened May 31st, 1882. The external features of the new buildings were designed so as to be in accordance as far as possible with the then existing buildings. A sculptured frieze, as yet unfinished, is intended to illustrate the more prominent incidents in the history of Reading, and may be taken as correctly representing the arts, manners and customs of the different periods dealt with. The niche in the gable over the library is to be filled with a marble statue of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by the wish and at the cost of Mr. W. I. Palmer. The general plan of the new building is as follows:—The approach to the Town hall is through the principal entrance in Blagrave street, reaching the main corridor or vestibule, 15ft. wide by 79ft. long, at the north end of which is a memorial stone, recording on a brass plate attached the foundation of the structure. At one end of the principal vestibule is a corridor running along the whole southern side of the Town hall, with an outlet to the lane next St. Lawrence institute; on the south side are two rooms for the use of the medical officer of health, and under the Town hall a passage leading into the supper room, 60ft. long by 22ft. 6in. wide, with space for storage on either side, adjoining which are ladies' and gentlemen's dressing rooms and lavatories. The Great hall, 60ft. wide, 97ft. long and 50ft. high, is entered on the east side by five large doorways; the doors are arranged to open outwards only and will remain in that position until released. At the east end of the hall and next the orchestra are two other doors opening in like manner. The orchestra is placed at the east end of the hall, and is reached by two oak staircases, one at each end, adjoining which are doorways leading to the interior of the orchestra staging. In the centre is the organ, the cost of which, built by Mr. Henry Willis, of London, was defrayed by the Reading Philharmonic Society. The hall has balconies round the north, south, and west sides. The ventilation has been carried out on the principles designed by Mr. R. Boyle, of Glasgow. The walls of the hall are cut up into panels by fluted pilasters, with moulded bases and gilt capitals. Over this is an enriched frieze immediately under the heavy cornice, from which spring the ornamental ribs of the cove lights. The entrance to the Library and Museum is at the north end of the west front. At the end of the corridor is to be placed a marble bust of the late Sir Francis Goldsmid, by Theed. On the right is the library, a reading room 25ft. by 30ft. 6in.; lending library, 21ft. by 30ft. 6in.; and another room, 48ft. by 42ft. to be arranged for reference library, ladies' library and librarian's room, by means of dwarf screens. From the vestibule, a stone staircase leads to the Museums, both of which are in immediate connection with the Schools of Science and Art. On the right hand side of the landing doors lead into the small museum, 31ft. 6in. by 28ft. Passing through a small corridor the large museum is reached, the dimensions of this room being 67ft. by 39ft.

The Schools for Science and Art are entered from Valpy street. On the ground floor is the gentlemen's lavatory, and the school of cookery and a scullery adjoin. Over these are the ladies' cloak room and science lecture room, all well-appointed and of good size. On the second floor are a small science class room and a chemical laboratory. Adjoining these are a small science room and a workshop. On the top room are the master's room and the antique painting room.

The Museum, under the will of the late Mr. Horatio Bland, has become possessed of the whole of his magnificent collection illustrative of natural history; on the walls of the Council chamber and in other parts of the buildings are portraits of Mr. Richard Aldworth, founder of the Blue coat school; Sir Thomas White, Lord Mayor of London in 1553, and a native of Reading; Sir Thomas Rich bart. ob. 1667; Archbishop Laud, executed 1644; W. Stephens esq. High Sheriff, Mr. John Kendrick, a local benefactor, ob. 1624; and Mr. Justice Talfourd, also a native of Reading, who died on the bench in 1854. The Town hall and other buildings recently added are from designs by Thomas Lainson esq. of Brighton, and were erected at an estimated cost of £50,000, of which £10,000 has been guaranteed by the ratepayers, and the remainder raised by subscriptions; W. I. Palmer esq. being a munificent contributor.

The Assize courts, situated in the Forbury immediately adjoining the abbey gateway, are in the Italian style and were built in 1861, they occupy the site of a hospital for poor pilgrims, founded in connection with the abbey, and form a block of buildings consisting of a façade with a colonnade along its lower stage and projecting wings the whole is built of freestone and is rusticated in both stages; the central portion terminating in a stone balustrading. The building contains a lofty hall conveniently arranged as a waiting hall to the Crown and Nisi Prius courts and Grand Jury room, with all which it communicates and also by a passage with the county police station.

The spring and summer assizes and sessions are both held here; formerly the summer assizes were held at Abingdon, but by an Order in Council, dated September 14th, 1868, both are to be held in this town. Courts of quarter sessions for the county are held in January, April, July and October. The quarter sessions for the borough are held at the Assize Courts in the same week as the sessions for the county. Petty sessions for the county (Reading division) are held every Saturday at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

The Corn exchange, built in 1854, is about 100 feet long and 50 feet wide and has a glass roof; it is approached by a narrow covered way from the Market place and over the entrance is a small tower with clock; the same covered way gives access to the Market house, a narrow, confined structure in Broad street, erected in 1854

The market days are—Saturday for corn and stock cattle, and Monday for fat cattle. Fairs are held on February 2, May 1 for cattle, July 25 for cattle, September 21 for cheese, cattle &c.

The new Cattle market and abbattoirs are on the west side of the Caversham road and close to the stations of the Great Western, the South Eastern and the South Western railways.

There are four banks—Stephens, Blandy & Co. J. & C. Simonds & Co. a branch of the London & County, and of the Capital & Counties Bank—and a Savings Bank founded in 1817.

Her Majesty's Prison, situated on the east side of the abbey ruins, includes within its precincts the foundations of the eastern portion of the church: it was erected in 1833, and is a castellated building of red brick, with white stone dressings, arranged to hold 224 prisoners; it was one of the first prisons built on the separate system.

The borough police force consists of a chief superintendent, 3 inspectors, 5 sergeants and 33 constables. The Police Station is in Highbridge and petty sessions are held there on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday at 11 o'clock.

The head quarters of the county constabulary are at Reading and the County Police Station is in the Forbury.

Reading is one of the military centres, constituted some years since in various parts of the county, and has barracks situated on the Oxford road, outside the limits of the borough, with ample drill grounds.

The Masonic Hall, in Greyfriars road, is a structure of brick and stone, relieved with emblematic designs, and is used for the meeting of the Union and Greyfriars lodges.

The Water Works are in the Bath road and the Gas Works in the King's road are both the property of the Corporation. The Baths are in Bath court.

The Royal Albert Hall, in Friar street, near the railway stations, is a very spacious and elegantly decorated chamber, 114 feet long, 38 wide and 40 feet in height and will hold 1,200 persons; it is used for public meetings, concerts, balls and fashionable entertainments.

The Reading Rowing Club has its head-quarters at the Upper Ship Hotel, the boat-house being at Caversham Bridge.

The Reading Abbey Boating Club was founded in 1872, and also has a boat-house at Caversham.

The Amateur Regatta usually takes place about the end of July.

The Reading and District Angling Association was formed for the protection and improvement of that portion of the Thames which lies between Goring and Shiplake locks. Annual subscription, 10s. 6d. The Association has a trout nursery at Caversham, and in 1881 turned into the river 284 large Wycombe trout, reared in the nursery and weighing from ½ to 3½ lbs. each.

The Public Dispensary, in Chain Street, was established in 1802, and has considerable funded property; out-patients receive attendance and medicine for one year, on the nomination of a governor: it is now mainly a provident institution, and has 13,881 members, but is otherwise supported by voluntary contributions.

The Royal Berkshire Hospital, opened May 27th, 1839, is an extensive stone building in the Domestic Classic style, with a noble projecting portico of six Ionic columns, supporting a pediment, adorned with the Royal Arms; two wings, added in 1882, comprise a new and more convenient operating room, library, museum, chapel with stained windows, laundry, servants' dormitories and dwellings for private nurses. There is a Convalescent Fund for discharged patients, administered by the Board of Management: it is supported by voluntary contributions raised in the county; it will hold 120 beds.

The Athenæum, established in 1842, is a stone building in Friar street, opposite the railway station.

There are four newspapers—the "Reading Mercury and Berks CountyPaper," established 1722, the "Berkshire Chronicle," the "Reading Observer," and the "Reading Express."

With the consent of the Charity Commissioners the different almshouses in Reading have been consolidated, the old houses vacated and the almspeople removed to new dwellings, provided with modern comforts and conveniences, erected on the south side of Castle street; these were commenced in September, 1864, and finished in September, 1865, at a cost of £3,000; William Henry Woodman esq. was the architect, they consist of two rows of houses on either side of a roadway, each row being divided into four separate blocks; in all they are available for 32 inmates, either men or women, viz.:—16 for the general charities and 16 for the church charities; the houses are built in the Gothic style, of red brick, with grey panels and white stone dressings; and the total income is stated at £919 18s. 2d.

The charities for distribution in St. Giles' parish are £45 6s. 4d. yearly; St. Lawrence, £216 6s. 4d. yearly; St. Mary, £56 0s. 11d.

There are besides, in the three parishes, sums amounting to £18 9s. 7d. yearly for education; £102 3s. 6d. for apprenticing; £170 10s. 4d. for endowment of the clergy and £30 for public uses. The General Municipal Charities amount to £3,166 4s. 10d. including Simeon's charity of £4,000 £3 per cent. Consols, the interest of which, now £121 6s. 11d. yearly, is applied in clothing children of Sunday schools.

The Workhouse for the Reading union, commenced in April, 1866, and occupied in June, 1867, is a building of plain Elizabethan character, designed to hold 300 inmates; it is constructed with the red brick of the district and is situated in the Oxford road, at the extreme western boundary of the borough; the approach is by a main central road, through a covered gateway, on one side of which is the porter's lodge and on the other, a board-room, with waiting-room attached; beyond these rooms, right and left, are the probationers' wards, with clothes stores and disinfecting rooms; the main building is devoted to the apartments of the master and mistress, with chief wards; attached to each ward are lavatories and bath-rooms; the dining-room, kitchens and offices are behind the master's apartments; the laundry buildings are in communication with the able-bodied female wards and workshops occupy a similar position on the male side: the infirmary is detached, behind the main building and has seven wards on the male and eight on the female side, with convalescent and padded rooms; the fever rooms are on the extreme north and entirely detached; the whole is lighted with gas; the entire cost was about £8,100. W. H. Woodman esq. was the architect.

Reading was formerly dependent on the country around for its trade, and being situated in the midst of a thriving agricultural district, all the supplies of the neighbouring population are drawn from the traders and merchants of the town. As a manufacturing town its chief business is to be found in its biscuit factories, iron foundries and engine works; and in seed growing, malting and brewing; the sale of corn, flour and cattle is also carried on upon an extensive scale; there are boat building establishments and pottery and brick works; and rope, mats, twine, sacks, brushes, broom handles, broom stocks and staves are made. The large biscuit factory of Messrs. Huntley and Palmer, in the King's road, covers many acres, and is the most extensive establishment of the kind in the kingdom; here more than 3,000 hands meet with continued employment in making the celebrated "Reading biscuits" and preparing and packing them for the home trade and for exportation; attached to the factory is a reading-room, with a well-stocked library. The Royal Berkshire seed establishment of Messrs. Sutton & Sons occupies more than 10,000 acres of land for the growth of their seeds in various parts of the United Kingdom and the continent, where the soil and circumstances are most favourable to their production; there is an experimental farm of 50 acres, on the London road, and flower seed grounds within a short distance of the town; the principal entrance to the business premises is in the Market place; here a large home and foreign trade is carried on by a staff of nearly 300 clerks and warehousemen; a reading-room and library, for the use of the members of the establishment, form part of the premises. At the top of London street are the tin works of Messrs. Huntley, Boorne & Stevens, where the whole of the tins for the biscuit factory are made; this establishment is probably unique of its kind and certainly unrivalled for the extent and ingenuity of the machinery employed. In Katesgrove lane are the Reading Iron Works, manufacturing large supplies of agricultural and other machines and implements; among the breweries that of Messrs. Simonds & Co. in Bridge street, is perhaps the most extensive; and the oldest and not least famous of Reading manufactures is its well-known "sauce," made by the Messrs. Cocks for nearly a century.

The Forbury, fronting the ancient gateway of the Abbey, is an open space on the north-east side of the town, laid out as a pleasure garden, with a fountain and ornamental works; it has been considered the pleasure-ground of the Reading townsfolk by prescriptive right, but this claim is not allowed by the Government, who regard it as a freehold and have demised it to private individuals; a Russian gun, presented by the Government to the authorities of the town, occupies an elevated position in the grounds; the view from here is very extensive, commanding a beautiful prospect over part of Oxfordshire; the Horticultural Society's shows are held in these grounds.

At Bob's Mount, overlooking the Katesgrove clay-pit, a Roman amphora was found and on the same spot flint instruments were disinterred by Capt. C. C. King. During the construction of the sewage works, bones of an enormous wild ox, standing 16 hands high, other remains of smaller animals, fragments of fossil oysters and pieces of ancient ware and glass were discovered along Plummery Ditch.

The soil here principally consists of alternate layers of clays and sands of many colors, with flint pebbles; the clays are made into tiles and drain-pipes, and the sands are mixed with the clays in brick making.

The area and rateable value is—St. Giles, acreage 537, rateable value £80,122 4s. 6d.; hamlet of Whitley, acreage 1,879, rateable value £9,923; St. Lawrence, acreage 315, rateable value £42,460; St. Mary's, acreage 1,242, rateable value £75,818 5s.; tything of Southcot, acreage 438, rateable value £1,869.

The population of the separate parishes was in:—

	1871.	1881.
St. Giles . .	13,288	20,234
St. Lawrence . .	4,718	4,674
St. Mary . .	14,318	17,142

WHITLEY is a hamlet of the parish of St. Giles, with a population in 1871 of 952 and 1881 of 1,324.

SOUTHCOT is a tything of the parish of St. Mary, with a population in 1871 of 64 and in 1881 of 109. Southcot House is a large ancient brick edifice, built by John Blagrave, the mathematician, to which family, for more than two centuries, this hamlet belonged.

REMENHAM is a parish 9 miles north-east from Reading, one mile from Henley railway station and 10 miles north-west from Maidenhead, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union and county court district of Henley, rural deanery of Henley, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Nicholas was completely restored in the Early English style in 1870: it consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and square western tower containing 3 bells: the chancel apse remains in its original form, which is very singular and is of great antiquity. The register dates from the year 1697. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400, with residence, in the gift of Jesus College, Oxford and held since 1878 by the Rev. Francis Kewley M.A. formerly fellow and tutor of that college. Tickells' and Batting's charities, together £10 yearly, are for bread. The principal landowners are John Noble esq. who is lord of the manor, the Right Hon. W. H. Smith M.P., D.C. and Charles Ellis, Henry Micklem and William Vidler esqs. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,590 acres; rateable value £5,290; the population in 1881 was 580.

Remenham Hill is a long and highly picturesque village in the parish of Remenham, surrounded by highly cultivated woodland scenery; it is separated from Oxfordshire by the river Thames, over which is a handsome stone bridge to Henley. The Great Western railway station at Henley is about a mile and a half distant. Park Place, the seat of John Noble esq. J.P., F.R.M.S. was for nearly twenty years the residence of His Royal Highness Frederick Prince of Wales, father of George III.; the mansion, rebuilt by J. Noble esq. in the French Italian style, is situated on the brow of a range of hills, 300 feet above the level of the river Thames and in the centre of a well-wooded park of about 900 acres, which is entered by seven lodges; one of the numerous attractions of Park Place is its picturesque scenery, which is scarcely equalled for its beautiful and varied prospects; to the east of the mansion is a magnificent cedar planted by His Majesty George III.

Parish Clerk, James Chamberlain.

SANDHURST is a village and parish 4½ miles south-east from Wokingham, 40 from London, 11½ from Reading and a mile and a quarter from the Wellington College station of the Reading and Reigate branch of the South Eastern railway, in the hundred of Sonning, union of Easthampstead, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Sonning, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The river Blackwater separates the parish from Hants. The church of St. Michael is a stone building, in the Early English style, possessing great beauty; it was restored in 1864 at an expense of £1,300; it has a chancel, nave, aisles, porch and tower with spire and 6 bells and a finely carved font, the carving of which was executed by one of the daughters of the late incumbent: there is also a brass with seven figures to one of the Haile family; the late rector, the Rev. Henry Parsons, erected a parsonage, principally at his own cost. The register dates from the year 1603. The living is a rectory, yearly value £150, with residence and 23 acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Hon. and Rev. Randal Parsons M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here are the remains of a Roman camp and two hills, supposed to be barrows. Sandhurst Lodge, a handsome structure, in the occupation of William Jas. Farrar esq. is the property of John Walter esq. M.P. lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is sandy; subsoil, sand and gravel. The chief crops are barley and oats. The area is 4,680 acres; rateable value £12,743; and the population in 1881 was 3,629, including the Royal Military College.

SANDLEFORD, formerly extra-parochial, is now a parish, a mile and a half south from Newbury, in Newbury union and county court district, situated on a small stream called the Auburn, which here divides the counties of Berks and Hants. The inhabitants attend the church of Newbury. By a decree obtained by Sir Francis More in his Majesty's Court of Exchequer in the reign of King James, Sandleford was declared to be "no part of the parish of Newbury, nor so to be reputed," and instead of the tithes and other ecclesiastical dues, which had been theretofore paid to the parson of Newbury, a charge of £8 per annum was substituted, which £8 per annum is still paid to the rector of Newbury. Like many other extra-parochial places, Sandleford formerly belonged to a religious foundation; the priory of Sandleford was founded before time of legal memory by Jefferie, Earl of Perch, Earl Marshal of England, and Maud his wife, and the church of Sandleford, being then the church of St. John the Baptist, with the lands of Sandleford, was by them "assigned and given to the perpetual service of God and of the Blessed Virgin Mary and All Saints, to hold in free alms as by the deed of the same foundation and gift now shewn forth appeareth, which gift was confirmed by King Henry III. in the seventeenth year of his reign by patent under the Great Seal of England and by an ancient Bull of Pope Gregory VI. in the year 1139; the Earl of Perch was one of the Norman barons who came in with William the Conqueror, who gave to him the town and manor of Newbury; the priory was annexed in the reign of Edward IV. to the King's Free Chapel of St. George, Windsor. Sandleford Priory is a portion of the original priory, situated in a well-wooded park and is the residence of William Pollett Brown Chatteris esq. D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravelly clay; subsoil clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is returned with Newbury; rateable value, £651; the population in 1881 was 34.

SHALBOURN is a parish partly in Wilts, 4 miles south-south-west from Hungerford, in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is one of about the thirteenth or fourteenth century; it was completely restored in the years 1872 and 1873 by Mr. Bodley, architect, when an aisle was added and the tower rebuilt: it consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and porch, with square embattled tower of three storeys at the west end, containing 5 bells; it will now seat about 300; there is an old monument of some beauty in the chancel to the memory of Francis Choke, formerly resident in the manor house, on which there is a rude and curiously spelt inscription; the restoration cost over £2,800, which was raised by subscription; the Marquess of Ailesbury and the Rev. T. H. Michell were the chief contributors. A piece of land to enlarge the churchyard was given by the Marquess of Ailesbury and consecrated in the year 1874. The register dates from the year 1677. The living is a vicarage, tithes commuted at £428 16s. with residence and 10 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1872 by the Rev. George Robert Davies-Cooke B.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. The rectorial tithe commuted rent-charge amounts to £845 5s. and belongs to the Dean and Canons of Windsor and is leased to the Marquess of Ailesbury. There is a Wesleyan Chapel in the parish. The charities are £11 yearly value. A Home for Motherless Girls was removed to this place in 1877 from Margate, having been established in London in 1858; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions and is under the management of a committee of gentlemen. Jethro Tull, the inventor of horse hoe and drill husbandry, resided at Prosperous Farm in 1730. Thomas Kingston esq. who is lord of the manor, the Marquess of Ailesbury, R. C. L. Bevan esq. J.P. and the Rev. Thomas Hmngerford Michell M.A. who is also lord of the manor of Bagshot, are the principal landowners. The soil is loam and sand; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley.

The hamlet of NEWTON and a portion of this parish (known as Shalbourn township) had a population in 1871 of 311 and is in the county of Wilts; the other part of Shalbourn including the hamlets of BAGSHOT and OXENWOOD, with a population in 1871 of 649, is in this county. The tithings of Shalbourn, Bagshot and Oxenwood (Berks) contain an area of 3,498A. 3R. 21P.; the tithings of Shalbourn township and Newton (Wilts) 1,766A. 16P.; rateable value, £5,594 0s. 9d. The entire area is 5,264 acres; the entire population in 1881 was 822.

SHAW-cum-DONNINGTON is a parish and village, situated on the northern bank of the river Lambourn which separates it from the borough of Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary, rebuilt in 1840, consists of a chancel and nave, the former being in the Norman and the latter in the Decorated style; the chancel, added to the church in 1878 at a cost of £2,000, contains memorial windows to the late H. R. Eyre esq. the Rev. G. F. Everett, late rector, and others: the organ was erected at the same time: in 1878, during the levelling of the ground on the north side of the churchyard, an ancient British cinerary urn, 18 inches high and 16 wide, was discovered, ornamented with zigzag lines, produced by means of some pointed instrument. The register dates from the year 1650. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £535 7s. with 27A. 2R. 14P. of glebe and residence, in the gift of Mrs. Eyre and held since 1872 by the Hon. and Rev. John Horatio Nelson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are several charities, amounting together to about £61 yearly, of which £24 is distributed in bread and fuel, about £30 in money and £5 is applied to church purposes and sermons. Shaw House, the residence of Mrs. Eyre, was built in 1581 by Thomas Dolman, clothier of Newbury and is a stately mansion in the characteristic style of that period, with a central façade of three gables, with porch, lighted by numerous large mullioned windows and flanked by deeply projecting wings, the whole front being more or less overgrown with ivy: the chief interest of Shaw House arises from its intimate connection with the second battle of Newbury, when it was garrisoned for the king; on Sunday morning, 27th October, 1644, the Parliamentary forces, coming down Clay Hill, passed the river by Shaw, and forced the guard near the house, but were thereupon attacked and routed by Sir Bernard Astley: subsequently the Earl of Manchester, with a large force, came down upon the house, then defended by Lieut.-Col. Page, but with the help of Sir John Brown and Col. Thelwall, the enemy was beaten "quite out of the field, leaving two drakes, some colours and many dead bodies behind them;" a huge heap of cannon balls, found about the grounds, may be seen near the house, and in the oak wainscot of the east bow-window in the drawing-room is a hole, said to have been made by a cannon ball aimed at the king while standing near the window; over the spot is a brass plate with a likeness of Charles I. and the inscription following:—

"HANC IVXTA FENESTRAM
REX CAROLVS PRIMVS
INSTANTE OBSIDIONE
SCLOPPO PETRÆ ICTV TANTVM NON
TRAIECTVS FVIT
DIE OCTOB. XXII. MDCXLIV."

Mrs. Eyre, of Shaw House, is lady of the manor of Shaw. The principal landowners are Mrs. Eyre and co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq. The soil is clay, loam and gravel; subsoil chalk, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 1,989 acres; rateable value, £4,127; the population in 1881 was 703.

DONNINGTON is a tithing one mile north-west. Donnington Castle, now in ruins, beautifully situated on a hill surrounded by trees, is about a mile north of Newbury; the existing portion consists only of the gateway, with tall circular towers, partly overgrown with ivy; the castle was first erected by Richard de Abberbury, guardian of Richard II. during his minority and formed nearly a square, its walls fronting the four cardinal points and defended by round towers at the angles; its western end terminated in a semi-hexagon and on the east front was the present stone gate house, 40 feet long, with its flanking towers and portcullis; its length east and west, reckoning the thickness of the walls, was 120 feet, and its breadth, including the towers, 85 feet: tradition, converted into history by successive writers, has associated Donnington Castle with the name of Geoffrey Chaucer, who, it has been said, owned the estate, the actual fact being that not the poet, but Thomas Chaucer, his reputed son, and chief butler to Richard II., did purchase this castle and manor, with other manors, in 1414-15 from Richard de Abberbury and his wife for 1,000 marks in silver: during the year 1644 the castle was held for the king with the greatest gallantry and intrepidity by Col. John Boys, who successfully repulsed the attacks of Lieut.-Gen. Middleton, Col. Horton, the Earl of Manchester and Gen. Waller; Col. Boys was knighted by the king for his brave conduct and only surrendered the castle in obedience to instructions from head-quarters, April 1, 1646; these "loyal ruins" are now the property of the co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq. Donnington Hospital consists of twelve almshouses and was originally founded by Sir Richard de Abberbury in the reign of Richard II.; after the Dissolution its estates continued in the Crown till about 1570, when, on the petition of Charles, Earl of Nottingham, Lord Admiral, and owner of Donnington Castle, they were restored to the Hospital, which was then probably rebuilt at the Earl's expense; the foundation consists of a master and twelve poor brethren, with an allowance of 15s. per week each; the yearly income is £348; George James Watts is master and minister. Donnington Grove, the seat of Head Pottinger Best esq. D.L., J.P. is a modern structure.

GREAT or WEST SHEFFORD is a parish situated on the south-western bank of the river Lambourn, 5½ miles north-north-east from Hungerford, 9 north-west from Newbury and 4 south-east from Lambourn, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a structure of flint stone, and is a very admirable specimen of a church of the time of Henry III.; it consists of chancel and nave and a circular western tower containing 6 bells; the lower part of the tower is Late Norman, built of flint, with massive walls; the upper portion is octagonal and of Perpendicular date; the tower arch is Transition Norman: there is also a fine south doorway of the same date, as is the font, richly carved with scrolls of foliage, in three bands, and terminated below by a fourth band, with an inverted border and pendent leafage: there are several memorials in the church, which was effectively but carefully restored in 1871, under the direction of Mr. J. West Hugall, of Oxford, when an organ chamber was erected, and the fine font, which had been resting, without a base, in a pew on the north side of the church, was repaired and set upon a new base. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1571; marriages and burials, 1599; the most remarkable entries in it are that the font was removed out of the church and the clergyman dispossessed of his living during the Great Rebellion. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £965 with residence and 110 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, and held since 1866 by the Rev. Frederick Menzies M.A. late fellow and vice-principal of that college and hon. canon of Christ Church. The Wesleyans have a chapel in the village and one at Woodlands; there is also one for the Primitive Methodists. The charities are:—Mrs. Mary Linton's of £20, the interest to be given to the poor at Easter; Mr. Gabriel Fulbrook and Mr. John Fulbrook's of £5 each, the interest to be given to the poor at Easter; and Mrs. Foster's of £20, the interest to be given away at Christmas; Mr. Thomas Fulbrook also left by will £100, the interest to be given yearly; and Mr. Anthony Barrett bequeathed £100, the interest to be given yearly. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Downshire, who is lord of the manor, J. T. Coxe esq. and Stephen Waldron esq. The soil is gravel, sand and chalk; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 2,196 acres; rateable value, £2,925; and the population in 1881 was 485.

LITTLE or EAST SHEFFORD is a parish 8 miles north-west from Newbury and 6 north-east from Hungerford, on the north-eastern bank of the river Lambourn, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Holy Innocents is a building of flint with Bath stone dressings, in the Early English style, and consists of large chancel and nave with five stained windows; it was built during the period 1868 to 1870, at a cost of £1,700, £200 of which was raised by subscription, the remainder being given by the late rector: the pulpit, lectern and other fittings were presented by various donors: the old church, situated on the north-east side of the river Lambourn, is a perfect specimen of Late Perpendicular and was originally the private chapel of the Manor House of the Fettyplace family: it consists of chancel, nave and south porch, but is now used only as a mortuary chapel: it contains several brasses to the Fettyplace family, bearing date 1524, and an alabaster monument, with figures of a man in armour and a lady, without inscription, but is the tomb of Sir Thomas Fetiplace, of Childrey, and Beatrice his wife, widow of Sir Gelbert Talbot, Baron Talbot, of Blakemere: on the north side of the chancel is a very fine marble tomb with effigies to John Fetyplace esq. and Dorathye his wife, ob. 11 Oct. 1524: hanging over the chancel is a helmet, or bascinet à bavierre, supposed to have belonged to one of the Fettyplaces. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1603; burials, 1614. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £400 with residence and 17 acres of glebe, in the gift of and held since 1881 by the Rev. Arthur William Robinson M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. Until a few years since the great hall of the old moated Manor House existed as a barn; a shield upon it bore the arms of Besils quartering Leigh. The manor at an early period belonged to the family of Fettyplace; the manor house is now unoccupied. The principal landowner is Charles Godwin esq. The soil is light and chalk; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 1,041 acres; rateable value, £1,624; the population in 1881 was 115.

SHIPPON is a township and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1865 out of the parish of St. Helen, Abingdon, 1 mile north-west from Abingdon, in the hundred of Hormer, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary Magdalen is a brick structure in the Decorated style from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A.; it was consecrated December, 1855, and consists of chancel, nave, north porch and bell-turret surmounted by a crocketed spire. The register dates from the year 1855. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £130 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1879 by the Rev. Henry Horatio Childs M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. The manor and the whole of the land belong to the Duchy of Cornwall. The soil is various; subsoil, stone brash and limestone. The crops are grain in succession. The area is 570 acres; the population in 1881 was 183.

SHOTTESBROOKE is a parish situated south of the great Bath road and adjoining White Waltham, 10 miles from Reading, 8 south-east from Henley, 8 north-east from Windsor and 4½ west from the Great Western railway station at Maidenhead, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist is one of the most interesting ecclesiastical edifices in England; for symmetry and beauty it has few equals; it is regarded as a perfect model, being remarkable for uniformity of design, even to the minor portions: it is a cruciform building in the Decorated style, having chancel, nave, transept, two porches and central tower, from which springs a light and elegant octagonal spire of graceful proportion: the interior was restored in 1852 under the superintendence of Mr. Street, architect: the founder's tomb, in the north transept, a truly beautiful specimen of Early Gothic, has resumed its ancient form: fragments of Norman mouldings and arches were discovered, proving the existence of an earlier edifice: beside the church is a venerable yew tree, planted 400 years ago and measuring in girth 20 feet. The register dates from the year 1585. The living is a rectory with the vicarage of White Waltham annexed, joint yearly value £456 with residence, in the gift of Coleraine Robert Vansittart esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Hardwicke Mills Dyer M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. Shottesbrooke Park is the seat of Chalfont Chute Ellis esq.; the mansion is a square white building. In 1337 Sir William Trussell founded here a small religious house, consisting of a college and chantry, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, for a warden and five priests; this college he endowed with the church of Shottesbrooke, but after sustaining much injury by fire, it was deserted by the entire establishment except John Bradford, the warden, who obtained a licence in 1380 to impropriate it to the church of Battlesden: the result was a considerable increase of revenue: the remains have been converted into a dairy. Coleraine Robert Vansittart esq. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is light and gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,316 acres; rateable value, £5,356; and the population in 1881 was 162.

SHRIVENHAM is a pretty village, parish and station on the Great Western railway, 71½ miles from London and 5½ south-west from Faringdon, containing several handsome villa residences, in the union and county court district of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situate on the borders of Wiltshire, from which it is separated by the river Cole. The railway station is one mile south from the village. The Berks and Wilts canal passes in the vicinity of the village. The church of St. Andrew is a handsome structure in the Early English style and in good repair, probably built, with the exception of the central tower, about the time of Charles II.: it consists of a chancel, nave, aisles and gallery at west end, square embattled tower containing 6 bells: there are some handsome monuments to the Barrington (dated 1734), Wildman (1713) and Pleydell families. The register dates from about the year 1580. The living is a vicarage with Watchfield annexed, yearly value £520 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1859 by the Rev. George William Murray M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford, surrogate. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. An endowment of £10 a year arising from rent of a certain field is for apprenticing lads residing in this parish. Sir H. Martin left ten almshouses and endowed them with £70 yearly, the rent of 40 acres. Beckett House, the seat of the Right Hon. Viscount Barrington, P.C., D.L., J.P., F.A.S.L., F.R.G.S. is a beautiful stone mansion in the Elizabethan style and delightfully situated in the fertile Valley of White Horse; the grounds extend over an area of 150 acres; a chain of hills in the distance, running into Wiltshire, bounds the view from the front: the grounds in the rear are of a more picturesque character, containing a fine sheet of water, many stately trees and several avenues. There is likewise a small stream running through the grounds. The principal landowners are Viscount Barrington, who is lord of the manor, and Amariah William Fairthorne esq. The soil is sandy and stone brash; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and green crops of every kind. The area of Shrivenham township, including Beckett tithing, is 2,675 acres; rateable value, £7,804; the population in 1881 was 721. The area of the entire parish is 8,430 acres; the population in 1881 was 2,964.

BECKETT is a tithing of this parish adjoining Shrivenham. Viscount Barrington is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

The parish of Shrivenham contains also the townships of LONGCOT, FERNHAM and BOURTON, all of which will be found under separate headings.

SONNING is a picturesque village and parish 3 miles north-east from Reading and 2 north-west from Twyford (Great Western railway) station and having a station at Earley, in this parish, on the Reading and Reigate branch of the South Eastern railway, 66 miles from London. The parish (lying in the counties of Berks and Oxford) consists of the liberties of SONNING TOWN and WOODLEY and SANDFORD, in the hundred of Sonning, and the liberty of EARLEY, in the hundred of Charlton, all in the union of Wokingham, county court district of Reading and county of Berks; and of the liberty of EYE and DUNSDON, in the hundred of Binfield and Longtree, union of Henley-on-Thames and county of Oxford, in the rural deanery of Sonning, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The village is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames, over which is an ancient bridge of 11 arches connecting the Berks with the Oxfordshire portion of the parish. The church of St. Andrew is a large edifice of flint and stone, dating from the fourteenth century, and consists of a spacious chancel with aisles, clerestoried nave with five bays, aisles, north porch, and a western embattled tower containing 8 bells; the arches on the south side of the chancel are elliptical; those on the north side are pointed, on clustered pillars, the easternmost being richly sculptured with figures in stone representing on one side Our Lord Blessing the Twelve Apostles, and on the other, kings and queens, with the Virgin and Child as the keystone, serves as a canopy to a tomb of rich and beautiful decorated work, with kneeling figures of three knights in armour and three ladies and an inscription of a poetical character is illegible: on the south aisle is a modern marble monument with brasses to various members of the family of Palmer, of Holme Park; and here also is a painted monument of marble to Katherine, Lady Litcott, 1630, with her effigy, kneeling at a desk; a mortuary chapel, separated from this aisle by an oak screen, is almost entirely allotted to memorials of this family; and the belfry contains a ponderous monument of black marble to Sir Thomas Rich bart. 1613, and his son, 1667; in the wall by the vestry door are two curious tablets, dated respectively 1533 and 1605: in the vestry, north of the chancel, is a mural inscription to Robert Wright S.T.P. Oxon, and others; below to Robert (1533) and Agnes (1579), probably children, with a shield of arms; on the floor of the nave are several brasses, now covered with carpet; and in the north aisle a fine tomb to Anna, wife of Sir John Clarke bart. of Salford, Warwick, 1654; and in the church to Lord Stowell, Viscount Sidmouth and E. Golding esq.; the church was restored throughout in 1853: opposite the south door is a beautifully carved font of Caen stone with a lofty and elaborately worked canopy of oak; in a niche over the door of the north porch is a figure of St. Andrew, the patron saint. The register dates from the year 1592. The living is a rectory with residence, gross yearly value £800, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held by the Ven. Alfred Pott B.D. archdeacon of Berks, formerly fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. There are charities of £50 yearly for apprenticing and £30 for distribution in bread, clothing and money, besides £45 for educational and £83 for church purposes. Here is a Congregational chapel. The Bishop of Salisbury had at an early period a country seat here, and hence has arisen the fiction that the place was once a bishop's see; Isabel, Queen of Richard II. resided at this house during the interval between the deposition and death of that monarch, and it appears to have continued as an episcopal residence until 1574, when Edmund Ghast, Bishop of Salisbury, gave the manor to Queen Elizabeth in exchange for estates in Dorsetshire. Near the village of Sonning is Holme Park, the seat of the Rev. Henry Golding-Palmer B.A.: the house is well situated on an eminence commanding a fine view of the valley of the Thames; the park and grounds are extensive. The principal landowners are the Rev. Henry Golding-Palmer B.A. Sir Julian Goldsmid bart. D.L., J.P. Viscount Sidmouth and J. J. Wheble esq. D.L., J.P. The entire area of the parish is 9,813 acres; rateable value, £38,976; the entire population of the parish in 1871 was 3,771 and in 1881, 6,067; rateable value of Sonning only, £3,799; the population in 1881 was 494.

Eye and Dunsdon will be found in the Directory of Oxfordshire.

Parish Clerk, James Sadler.

Earley (or ERLEIGH) is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1854, comprising the liberty of Earley and part of Woodley. At Earley is a station of the Reading and Reigate branch of the South Eastern railway. The church of St. Peter, an edifice in the Early English style, consecrated on September 21st, 1844 and till lately consisting of chancel, nave and transepts, is now (1882) being much improved and enlarged by removing the transepts and adding north and south aisles and a large new chancel, vestry and organ chamber at a cost of £3,600; the stained east window depicts scenes in the life of St. Peter; there is also a beautiful west window to the memory of the Rev. George Porcher and his two daughters; in the west window of the south aisle with four lights is a memorial to Mrs. Frances St. Aubyn: the church when completed will afford 600 sittings. The register dates from the year 1844. The living is a vicarage in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, it is of the yearly value of £360 with residence, and has been held since 1872 by the Rev. Havilland Durand M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford.

The district of St. Bartholomew was formed into a separate ecclesiastical parish in 1877, and the church was erected and consecrated in 1879, it is in the Early English style and is built of red and grey brick, and consists of clerestoried nave, aisles and a small turret containing 1 bell, and there is an excellent organ, the cost was about £4,000; all the sittings are free. The register dates from the year 1877. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £230 with residence, in the gift of George Palmer esq. and held by the Rev. Charles Robertson Honey, M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. The population of the parish is 3,649. The Reading Cemetery of 10 acres with two mortuary chapels is in this parish. Bulmershe Court, the seat of James Joseph Wheble esq. D.L., J.P. is a mansion of stone, standing in its own park-like grounds and commanding fine views of the surrounding country. The district of Earley contains several properties of note and interest; the ancient domain of Whiteknights, formerly possessed by the Dukes of Marlborough and famous for its elegant gardens, is now parcelled out into several properties for building purposes; the "Wilderness," once renowned for its collection of rare trees and shrubs, is now divided into several residences and occupied by Mrs. Marsland (Wilderness House), T. Porter esq. (Erlegh Whiteknights) and Arthur Edward Phillips esq. (Fox Hill), recently erected in the Elizabethan style by Alfred Waterhouse esq.; Maiden Erlegh, the old seat of the Goldings, is tenanted by John Hargreaves esq. J.P. master of the South Berks hounds. Earley Court, the property of Viscount Sidmouth, formerly the residence of Lord Stowell, is occupied by John F. Hall esq. The area is 2,000 acres; rateable value, £22,924; the population in 1871 was 1,832 and in 1881 4,461.

WOODLEY was formed into a separate ecclesiastical district in 1881 out of the parish of Sonning. The church of St. John the Evangelist, built by the late Robert Palmer esq. of Holme Park, Sonning, from designs by Henry Woodyer esq. of Guildford, is a building of flint and stone, in the Transition style between the Early English and Decorated, and consists of chancel, nave with one aisle, organ chamber and vestry; its peculiar feature is the triple arch between the nave and the chancel, supported on columns of dark Forest of Dean stone; there is a deeply recessed and beautifully sculptured reredos of Caen stone, combined with English and Italian alabaster and marble, representing the Crucifixion in the centre compartment; on one side the Centurion and Roman soldiers, on the other Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus; the east window is stained, and a beautiful arch partially filled by an oak screen encloses the organ chamber: the fittings are throughout admirably good. The living was endowed by the founder with £150 yearly, which has been increased by Miss Palmer and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and now amounts to £300 yearly: it is a vicarage in the gift of the Vicar of Sonning, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Ernest Angel Gray LL.M. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The rateable value is £12,253; the population in 1881 was 1,112.

SPARSHOLT is a parish consisting of the township of Sparsholt and Westcote hamlet, which is in the hundred union, and county court district of Wantage, and of Kingston Lisle township and Fawler hamlet, which are in Faringdon hundred, union and county court district, in the rural deanery of Wantage, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Sparsholt is near the Wilts and Berks canal, 4 miles west from Wantage and 3 south from the Challow station on the Great Western railway. The church of the Holy Cross, one of the most ancient churches in the county, existing before 963 and rebuilt in 1187, is now a structure chiefly of the Decorated period, and consists of chancel, nave, south transept and a western tower containing 4 bells and surmounted by a wooden spire; there is a modern east window, but the side windows of the chancel are lofty and of good Decorated work: the sedilia, piscina and a sepulchral recess have feathered arches, with crockets, pinnacles and finials; on the north side of the chancel is an ogee-arched recess, similarly ornamented and probably an Easter sepulchre: the nave has good windows of two lights and an open timbered Decorated roof; the north doorway is Early English, with a semi-circular arch and shafts with foliaged caps; on the south side is a similar doorway, now blocked; in the south transept are two recesses very richly ornamented, with ogee arches, beneath which are two altar tombs, supporting two female effigies of wood, with veils and wimples, these are supposed to be two wives of one of the Achards; in the chancel is also the wooden effigy of a knight, believed to represent Lord Talbot, and removed here on the destruction of the north transept; in the church is also a monument to Sir George Hyde K.B. ob. 1625. The register dates from the year 1559 and includes entries from Kingston Lisle. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Kingston Lisle annexed, net yearly value £358 with residence and 43 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Oswald Joseph Reichel M.A., B.C.L. of that college. The charities are about £20 yearly, of which £3 is for education, £6 for apprenticing, £8 for distribution and £3 for church purposes. There are 5 manors within the parish. Henry Hippisley esq. who is lord of the manors, and the trustees of the late E. M. Atkins esq. and Colonel Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. are the principal landowners. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The soil is what is called greensand and consists of chalk; subsoil, clay and chalk. The entire area of the parish is 6,340 acres; of Sparsholt township, 4,280; rateable value, £5,222; the population of the township of Sparsholt in 1881 was 440.

WESTCOTE is a hamlet in this parish 1½ miles west.

KINGSTON LISLE, with the hamlet of FAWLER, will be found under a separate heading.

SPEEN is a village and large parish comprising the tithings of CHURCH and WOOD SPEEN, BAGNOR, MARSH BENHAM, SPEENHAMLAND, and STOCK CROSS, partly in the hundred of Faircross and partly in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; Church Speen is about a mile and a half west-north-west from Newbury and bounded on the south by the river Kennet and the Kennet and Avon canal. The mother church of St. Mary, situated in a valley, was, with the exception of the ancient north aisle and chancel, almost entirely rebuilt in 1860 at the expense of the late vicar, the Rev. H. W. Majendie, and the tower has since been rebuilt as a memorial to him; it is in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles; there are several stained windows of great beauty and merit: in the north aisle is an altar tomb with the effigies, in armour, of John Baptiste Castillon, a Piedmontese, who died in 1597; also a monument to the wife of his son Sir Francis, Dame Elizabeth Castillon, who died 1623; she is represented habited in a farthingale and flowered gown and veil, almost covering the body; there are also monuments to the Craven family dated 1717. The register dates from the year 1629. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1870 by the Rev. Reginald Campbell Edwards M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The Romans had a station here called Spinæ. There are almshouses for two widows in Speenhamland, also £30 yearly from several charities. Sir Richard Francis Sutton bart. has a seat at Benham Park, formerly the residence of the late Margrave and Margravine of Anspach; it is in the Italian style, situated in a beautiful park of about 200 acres including wood, with a lake fronting the house. Head Pottinger Best esq. D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor of Bagnor, the Earl of Craven, who is lord of that of Speen, Sir Richard Francis Sutton bart. and W. H. Wyld esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is principally gravel, except the Kennet valley, which is chiefly water meadows; subsoil, chalk and clay, with peat and bog in the valley. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and some roots. The entire area is 3,780 acres; rateable value, £16,606; the population in 1881 was, without Speenhamland, 1,492.

BAGNOR, 1 mile north, STOCK CROSS, 1½ north-west, MARSH BENHAM, 2 west, and WOOD SPEEN, 2 north-west, are hamlets.

SPEENHAMLAND forms part of the town of Newbury and will be found fully described under that town.

Parish Clerk, William Purton.

Stock Cross is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1844 out of the civil parish of Speen; it is 1 mile north-west from Speen and 3 north-west from Newbury and includes the hamlet of Marsh Benham. The church of St. John was erected about the end of the year 1839; it stands on an eminence and is a brick building, consisting of chancel, nave and square tower surmounted by pinnacles: the east window is stained in memory of Godfrey Raymond Bosanquet, who died 1858: the pulpit was erected 1878 by some friends in memory of the late vicar, the Rev. J. Adams; the organ was presented by the late Sir Richard Sutton. The register dates from the year 1839. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1877 by the Rev. Theodore Francis M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, which was erected 1833. The principal landowner is Sir Richard F. Sutton bart. The area is 1,815 acres; the population in 1881 was 800.

STANFORD DINGLEY is a parish and village 4 miles north from Aldermaston and Midgham stations on the Great Western railway, 10 north-west from Reading and 8 north-east from Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Bradfield, county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Denis is an ancient and most interesting structure, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a wooden belfry at the west end, supported on wooden framework within the nave walls and seems to be Perpendicular: the chancel was rebuilt of brick about 1768 and has an arch of Transition Norman, pointed; the arches of the nave arcades are of the same date, with the exception of the two easternmost, which are plain Norman; the south doorway displays an unusual design, its inner head being trefoiled within a moulded pointed arch: there is a brass, dated 1444, to Margaret, wife of William Dyneley, esquire to Henry VIII. and others to John Lyford, citizen and merchant tailor of London, 1610, a native of Stanford; and to a civilian, with kneeling effigy: some highly glazed and richly designed bricks of an early date have been discovered and placed in the chancel wall; the walls of the church were originally covered with paintings, parts of which are still in good preservation; amongst other details, the scene of the Last Judgment is represented; there is also the figure of a royal personage, crowned and holding in his hand a heart, transfixed by three arrows; some of the patterns are extremely beautiful: the church was restored in 1870. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £275 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1864 by the Rev. Anthony Bird Valpy. There is an extensive tannery carried on in this village. The co-heiresses of the late W. H. H. Hartley esq. are ladies of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is loam and gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 914 acres; rateable value, £1,449; and the population in 1881 was 139.

STANFORD-IN-THE-VALE is a village and parish about 2½ miles from Challow station, 3 north-east from Uffington junction on the Great Western railway and 4 east-south-east from Faringdon, in the hundred of Ganfield, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated in the Vale of White Horse and on the river Ock; it was a market town from 1230 down to the Reformation. The church of St. Denis is a good example of the Early English and Decorated styles and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a fine western Early English tower, with additions in the Perpendicular style, 80ft. high and containing 6 bells: the church was built about 1280, to commemorate, it is said, the marriage of Richard duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III. with Lady Anne Nevill, and so much altered and added to as to be nearly rebuilt about 1350; in the year 1851 £500 was spent in its repair and restoration: the chancel is good Decorated and has windows with geometrical tracery, containing some original glass; it has a plain open timbered roof, a curiously fine piscina with semi-octagonal tabernacle above and a small oblong opening to it, probably a reliquary and on the north side a double locker; in the centre of the chancel is a brass to Roger Campdene, priest, 1379; a hagioscope and stairs to the rood-loft also remain; the nave has three wide arches on the north side, on octagonal piers, without caps; beneath the aisle roof are the original Early English clerestory windows, now blocked; the south door and porch are of the same date; there is a Decorated vestry; the oaken font, with canopy and pulpit are Elizabethan: five of the windows are stained: in the nave is a mural monument to Capt. Francis Knollys, ob. 1640 and in the churchyard a coffin slab of the thirteenth century. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage with that of Goosey annexed, tithes commuted for £275 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster and held by the Rev. Edward Penwarne-Wellings M.A. of University College, Durham, who was appointed by the Crown on the avoidance of the living by the appointment of the Rev. Christopher Wordsworth to the bishopric of Lincoln in 1869. There is a small Congregational chapel in the village. Shilton's charity, four-sevenths of which is appropriated to a school and three-sevenths expended in the distribution of bread, at present realises the annual sum of £21. Fawkner's charity, of £2 3s. 9d. yearly, called the Poor Maid's Gift, is for marriage portions, and Heigham's, called the Poor's Gift, of £35 yearly, is distributed in money; the Hatch Trust founded by deed, 1823, includes repair of tomb. Chinham Farm, in this parish, is said to be the site of the Roman station, Julianum; many coins have been found here and not far off are Cold Harbour and Bedlam farms, both of which derive their names from the proximity of a Roman station, "Cold-harbours" being originally the remains of Roman villas, used in the middle ages as refuges for the destitute and asylums for lunatics. At the Norman survey the manor of Stanford was granted to Henry de Ferrers, the greatest lay proprietor in the county and was held by that family until 1206, when, for rebellion, their estates were confiscated; it afterwards passed to the Fettyplaces and thence to the family of Knollys, one of whom, in 1618, built the present Manor House, several of the rooms in which contain some good old tapestry and singular panel-paintings. The principal landowners are S. E. Bouverie-Pusey esq. C. Morrison esq. the Rev. C. Girdlestone, Joseph Cowderoy Richards esq. who is lord of the manor and J. Stephens esq. The Stanford stone pits, in the neighbourhood, from which a great many fossils are dug, produce an inferior soft stone, principally used in the repairs of the roads. The soil is rich loam and clay; subsoil, clay and stone. A great portion of this parish is rich pasture land. The entire area is 3,829 acres; rateable value, £5,833; the entire population in 1881 was 929.

Parish Clerk, Charles Kean.

STEVENTON is a parish and station on the Great Western railway, 56 miles from London, 4¼ miles south-south-west from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the road from Abingdon to Newbury. The church of St. Michael consists of chancel, nave and south aisle and a tower on the south side containing 6 bells: on the south side of the nave are two arches of unequal span, one Early English, the other Decorated; the lower arches are good Decorated, with rich moulded imposts and curious and rich carving: the windows are chiefly Decorated and Perpendicular: there is a piscina in the chancel of the latter period, as is also the font: in the churchyard is a stone cross, restored in 1836. The earliest register of this parish, from 1553 to 1559, is in the British Museum and forms No. 2,395 of the Harleian MSS.: the earliest register in the parish chest dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster and held since 1877 by the Rev. Frederick Theobald M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel of brick, with stone dressings, built in 1861. In this parish was once a Benedictine priory, founded by Henry I. and dependent on the abbey of Bec, in Normandy, to which house the king had given the manor. The charities belonging to the parish amount to £83 13s. yearly, of which £26 is for educational purposes, £19 7s. for distribution in bread and clothing and £39 for public uses. There is an ancient causeway running throughout the entire length of the village, planted with trees on both sides and kept in repair by a trust fund bequeathed for that purpose. The principal landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are lords of the manor, Messrs. William Tyrrell, Richard Hopkins Betteridge and George Tyrrell Lay. The soil is rich loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 2,382 acres; rateable value, £6,594; the population in 1871 was 820 and in 1881 924.

STRATFIELD MORTIMER is a scattered village and extensive parish, partly in Hampshire, with a station called Mortimer on the Great Western railway, 43½ miles from London and 7½ south-south-west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a handsome stone structure, rebuilt in 1869 at the sole cost of Richard Benyon esq. J.P. of Englefield House; it has chancel, nave, aisles, two porches and tower, surmounted by a spire, together 160 feet high and containing 6 bells; the cost of the whole was £13,000: it contains some ancient monuments. The register dates from the year 1700. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £246 with residence, in the gift of Eton College and held since 1880 by the Rev. Chas. Leslie Lovett-Cameron M.A of Merton College, Oxford. A second church, or mission chapel, was opened in February 1882, under the Bishop's licence, to seat 200: it was erected at the sole expense of Mr. Benyon, of Englefield, from the designs of Mr. R. Armstrong and consists of a nave and chancel, the walls being of red brick with stone dressings and a tower, crowned by a shingled spire at the east end: Mr. and Mrs. Benyon made a special offering of the reredos and altar books; Sir J. R. Mowbray gives the communion plate, Sir Paul Hunter a large harmonium and Mr. John Cole, of Eton College, two handsome seven-lighted altar-standards: the vicar and Mrs. Cameron have provided the east window. Here is a Congregational and also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The charities are £14 yearly. A fair is held here on the 27th of April for cattle and on the 6th of November for Welsh cattle. Warrennes Wood is the seat of the Right Hon. Sir John Robert Mowbray bart. M.P., J.P.; Mortimer Hill, of Sir Claudius Stephen Paul Hunter bart. D.L., J.P.: Mortimer House, Maj.-Gen. Charles Geo. Hy. Coote; & Wokefield Park, Major Goodrich Holmsdale Allfrey J.P. Richard Benyon esq. D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light gravel; subsoil, heavy clay. The chief crops are wheat and beans. The area, including commons and waste land, is 6,400 acres; rateable value, £5,804; the population of the entire parish in 1881 was 1,240.

WOKEFIELD, 1 mile west, is a tithing; the area is 600 acres; the population in 1871 was 141.

MORTIMER WEST END is a tithing in this parish, but in Hampshire and now a separate ecclesiastical parish. The area is 1,810 acres; the population in 1871 was 434.

STREATLEY is a beautiful and picturesque village and parish, 10 miles north-west from Reading and 6 south from Wallingford, in the hundred of Moreton, union of Bradfield, Wallingford county court district, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Wallingford and diocese of Oxford; it is situated on the river Thames, which runs here in two streams and is crossed by a double bridge to the village of Goring in Oxfordshire, where there is a station on the Great Western railway. The church of St. Mary is an ancient fabric of Early English architecture; it has a chancel, nave, aisles and square tower of flint containing 6 bells. The register dates from the year 1679. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £160 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Townsend Henham M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge and (comitat. causâ) Oxford. The charities are of £30 yearly value for distribution and likewise a small endowment for the repairs of the church. There are several handsome residences in the neighbourhood, which from their situation on the banks of the Thames have a very pleasant appearance, and the surrounding scenery is beautiful and romantic; the village and neighbourhood are much frequented by artists. J. S. Bowles esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chalk and loam; subsoil, chalk. The crops are wheat and barley. The area was 1,500 acres but by enclosures it is now 3,478; rateable value, £4,181; the population in 1881 was 627.

SOUTHRIDGE is a hamlet 2 miles south-west, where there is a school with an endowment of £2 5s. left by Mr. Richard Tull.

WESTRIDGE is also a hamlet of this parish, 2 miles south-west, closely adjoining the village of Aldworth.

SUNNINGHILL is a straggling and extensive parish 24 miles from London, 6 from Windsor and 6 from Egham, in the hundred of Cookham, union of Windsor, county court districts of Chertsey and Maidenhead, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the Bath and Reading road and extending on one side to Windsor park. A branch of the South Western railway to Reading has a station on Ascot Heath in this parish. The church of St. Michael is an ancient brick edifice, showing remains of Saxon and Norman architecture, the chancel being about 900 years old, with square tower containing 3 bells: it was rebuilt in the year 1828 and was restored and re-seated with open benches in 1878: there is a yew tree in the churchyard supposed to be 1,000 years old. The register dates from the year 1640. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £270 with residence and 40 acres of glebe land, in the gift of St. John's College, Cambridge, and held since 1830 by the Rev. Alexander Malcolm Wale B.D. formerly fellow of that college. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Cheapside. The Congregationalists have a mission-house and reading-room at Bogside, where service is performed every Sunday. The charities of this parish are numerous: Miss Palmer's, distributed in bread every Easter, of £10 16s.; the Fuel Fund, arising from Consols, amounting to £26 yearly; Mr. Squires' charity, called the Mill Charity, of £7 yearly; Miss Ann Dawson's charity, of £6 6s.: Mr. John Staples', £10; Mr. A. Schutz's endowment to the schools, £34 yearly. At a place called the Wells is a chalybeate spring, formerly much frequented. Her Majesty the Queen, General Charles Crutchley (who is lord of the manor), Mrs. Stewart, Col. Blundell-Hollinshead-Blundell, Capt. Sir Reginald Cathcart bart. Lord Harlech, Thos. Holloway esq. and Wm. Quilter esq. are the chief landowners. There are several mansions in this parish, the principal of which are Sunninghill Park, the seat of General Charles Crutchley J.P. an ancient mansion situated in a densely wooded park. Sillwood Park, the seat of Mrs. Stewart; the old mansion has been taken down and replaced by a handsome modern Gothic brick building, with stone dressings, standing in a well-wooded deer park of 250 acres; Titness Park, a Gothic mansion, situated on an eminence in a small undulating park, is the property of Capt. Sir Reginald Cathcart bart; Buckhurst Park, the seat of Joseph Savory esq. is a modern building standing on an eminence in a picturesque park; Harewood Lodge, the seat of Col. the Hon. Charles Rowley Hay J.P. is a handsome residence standing in its own grounds; Tittenhurst Lodge, the seat of Thomas Holloway esq. standing on a declivity in a park, has tastefully laid-out pleasure grounds and terraces; Tetworth Park, the property of Lord Harlech, now occupied by Sir Edwd. Robt. Sullivan bart. is a modern mansion, standing in a park near Ascot Heath race-course; there are also many other good residences in this parish, notably Ashurst Lodge, Beechgrove, Farmwood, Frognal and Pembroke Lodge. The soil is gravel and sand; subsoil, gravel, sand and clay. The area is 3,173 acres, principally gentlemen's parks and heath; rateable value, £21,940; the population in 1871 was 2,236, and in 1881 was 3,040.

SUNNINGWELL is a parish in the hundred of Hormer, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles north from Abingdon, bounded on the east by the Thames; the township of Kennington, which is partly in this parish, the other portion being in Radley parish, was in 1866 constituted a separate ecclesiastical parish. The church of St. Leonard is a Gothic structure, with chancel, nave and square embattled tower containing 5 bells, and has also an octagon porch, built by Bishop Jewel; it contains a monument to Hannibal Baskerville esq. who died in 1688; also small slabs to the memory of the learned Dr. Samuel Fell, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and formerly rector of this parish, who died in 1648, and to Margaret his wife, who survived him: there is a handsome Reformation table, given by Bishop Jewel: the church was restored by subscription in 1877. The register dates from the year 1543. The living is a rectory, yearly value £318 with residence, in the gift of Sir Geo. Bowyer bart. and held since 1866 by the Rev. Graham Harvey Squire M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a charity of the yearly value of about £90, arising partly from land and partly from money in the funds, called Poor's Land Charity, the proceeds of which are devoted to the support of the poor; also one known as Beezley's Charity, of the yearly value of £1, to be given by the rector and churchwardens on Good Friday to the poorest inhabitants. Sir George Bowyer bart. is the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is clay, sand and limestone; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The population in 1881, including the portion of the township of Kennington, in this parish, was 308: the parish comprises 1,298 acres; rateable value, £2,997.

BAYWORTH is a hamlet ½ mile north.

SWALLOWFIELD is a pleasant village and parish 5½ miles south-west from Wokingham, 4 east from Mortimer station, 6 south-east from Reading and 10 north-east from Basingstoke, in the hundreds of Charlton and Reading, union of Wokingham, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Reading, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the rivers Loddon and Blackwater, which form a junction in the parish. A portion of this parish was in Wiltshire, but by the Acts 2 & 3 William IV. cap. 64 and 7 & 8 Vict. cap. 61, it was annexed to Berkshire. The church of All Saints, built in 1256 by John Le de Spencer, then the Baron of Swallowfield, and restored in 1871 by Sir Charles Russell bart. consists of chancel, nave, tower and wooden belfry; the tower is supported on wooden beams starting from the church floor, from which position the 5 bells are rung; it contains several monuments and brasses. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a vicarage, gross value £180, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford and held by the Rev. Maunsell John Bacon M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists and Baptists have chapels here. There are some charities for the poor, amounting to £9 yearly. Near the village is Swallowfield Park, the residence of Lieut.-Colonel Sir Charles Russell bart. V.C., D.L., J.P. At the time of the Norman conquest Swallowfield was a Royal domain: in the reign of Henry III. it appertained to the Earl of Warwick; in that of Edward II. it belonged to John Le de Spencer, then passed to the De la Beches and next to John, Duke of Bedford, who died seised of it in 1435: by his will it went to Henry VI. who granted it to John Penicoke: about 1600 it was possessed by the Backhouse family, from whom it passed to Henry, second Earl of Clarendon, by marriage with the widow of Sir William Backhouse; in 1719 it was sold to the celebrated Governor Pitt; it afterwards was purchased by the Right Hon. Sir Henry Russell, grandfather of the present bart. Swallowfield, as it now is, was built in 1678 by Henry, second Earl of Clarendon; it is a quadrangular edifice, having in the centre of the front a pediment of four Ionic columns; the arms and cyphers of the Clarendons still form part of the fragments of the old ceiling of the oval vestibule, and a rich cornice of the same age, wrought in fruit and foliage, is preserved in the breakfast room: here the celebrated Lord Chancellor Clarendon resided with his son upon his retirement from public life, and here he is said to have written, if not the whole, the greater part of his History of the Rebellion; two wings at the rear of the mansion, forming a quadrangular courtyard, are of much older date. Farley Hall, a substantial brick mansion standing in a park of about 80 acres, is the seat of Colonel William Gray D.L., J.P., in the entrance hall of which is a fine painted ceiling by Laneret; and Farley Castle of Mrs. Atkins. Farley Hill Court, a very pleasant residence, is the seat of John Brooks esq.: Loddon Court, a modern house standing in small grounds, is the seat of Thomas Boone Roupell esq. H. L. Hunter esq. of Beech hill, is part lord of the manor. Lieut.-Col. Sir Charles Russell bart. V.C., D.L., J.P. Colonel Gray D.L., J.P. Mrs. Atkins and T. B. Roupell esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is mostly of sand and gravel: subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The entire area is 3,712 acres; rateable value, East Swallowfield, £2,840; West Swallowfield, £4,552; the population in 1881 was of the former 313 and of the latter 1,039.

THATCHAM is a parish with a station on the Great Western railway, 50 miles from London, and situated on the high road between London and Bath, 3 miles east from Newbury and 14 south-west from Reading, in the hundred of Reading, union and county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Newbury and diocese of Oxford. Thatcham is intersected by the river Kennet and the Kennet and Avon canal, and is bounded on the south by the river Auburn, which separates this county from Hants. The church of St. Mary is a very fine structure of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a western tower containing 6 bells, and is calculated to seat 1,000 persons; it has been restored throughout; adjoining the chancel is a chantry chapel, called the Fulier chapel, containing a monument of that family, 1620, with memorials to Sir Archer Croft, bart. 1792, and his mother 1767; there is also an altar tomb to William Danvers, 1504, one of the judges of the Common Pleas, and floor stones of the Tull family, to whom the chantry now belongs; there are several stained windows in the church, and an extremely fine Norman doorway in the porch; the chancel arch is also Norman, but modern; the tower has a Decorated doorway and windows of the same date. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £460 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1866 by the Rev. Hezekiah Martin M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. There are several endowed charities, amongst which is Lady Winchcomb's Blue Coat School, for 40 boys, who are clothed and taught reading and writing, the parents also receiving assistance towards their apprenticeship to some trade; the income of the charity is £230; the remaining charities include a sum of £71 yearly for church repairs; £97 for the support of almshouses; £6 15s. for distribution in bread, and £68 for distribution in money. Thatcham formerly had a market, but it has long since been discontinued. Here are gas works for the lighting of the village. William George Mount esq. of Wasing, Albert Richard Tull esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late Lloyd Baxendale esq. Edward Fidler esq. Mrs. Eyre and Mrs. Shuter are the principal landowners. William George Mount esq. is lord of the manor of Thatcham and Albert Richard Tull esq. D.L., J.P. the lord of Crookham manor. Crookham Heath is in the southern portion of the parish. Crookham House, the seat of Albert Richard Tull esq. D.L., J.P. is a modern stone building, delightfully situated on an eminence commanding extensive views of the surrounding country. Little Park House the residence of Mrs. Shuter and James Shuter esq. is a handsome red brick building, beautifully situated, with fine views of the distant Hampshire hills. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, gravel, clay and peat. The chief crops are barley, wheat and roots. The entire area is 12,259 acres; rateable value, £15,706; population in 1881, 2,882.

AWBURY STREET is a tything.

CROOKHAM, 1 mile south-east, HENWICK, ASHMORE GREEN and COLTHROP are places in this parish.

Sexton, Francis Harris.

COLD ASH is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1865 out of the mother parish of Thatcham and occupies elevated ground in the northern part of the parish. The church of St. Mark is a well-proportioned brick building consisting of chancel and nave and was erected in 1864: in the chancel is a stained memorial window to the Rev. W. M. Pickthall, late vicar, and his daughter erected by his widow and the parishioners. The register dates from the year 1865. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £130 with residence and 4 acres of glebe, in the gift of the vicar of Thatcham and held since 1872 by the Rev. Walter Smith Grindle T.A.K.C.L. THEALE is a hamlet and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1832 out of the parish of Tilehurst, having a station on the Great Western railway, 41 miles from London and 5 west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; it forms one street situated on the road from Reading to Newbury. The river Kennet bounds the parish on the south. The church of the Holy Trinity is a building of freestone, in the Early English style, erected in 1832, in a costly manner, at the sole expense of the late Mrs. Sheppard, of Amport, Hants, and her brother, Dr. Routh, the late venerable president of Magdalen College, Oxford, from the designs of the late Mr. E. W. Garbett and consists of chancel, nave and a fine square tower, surmounted by pinnacles and containing a clock and 3 bells; the west front is a much reduced copy of that of Salisbury cathedral and the tower is to some extent reproduced from the old bell tower formerly in Salisbury Close; the interior is lofty, groined, and delicately coloured; an ancient chantry of Perpendicular date, removed from Magdalen College Chapel, Oxford, has been built on the north side of the chancel and two doorways from the same building have also been inserted in the walls: on the south side of the chancel is a low canopied tomb, a copy, simply, from an abbot's tomb of the thirteenth century, in Tewkesbury Abbey: many of the windows are stained. The register dates from the year 1832. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £774 with residence, in the gift of Magdalen College, Oxford and held since 1855 by the Rev. Thomas Butler B.D. late fellow of that college. There are two chapels, one Congregational, the other is connected with the Primitive Methodists, erected in the year 1868. John Henry Blagrave esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,000 acres; the population in 1871 was 852.

Parish Clerk, James Hill.

TIDMARSH is a village and parish 1 mile south-south-west from Pangbourne railway station and 7 miles west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Lawrence is a small building of Early English date and consists of apsidal chancel, nave, and a wooden belfry with steeple at the west end, containing 3 bells: the chancel and nave appear to date from about 1230, the former having a semi-octagonal apse with a small lancet window in each face; the vaulting is a modern restoration, carefully executed; the Norman doorway belongs to a period fifty years earlier than the rest of the west of the church and is richly carved with bands of chevron ornament, interlaced work and scrolls of foliage; on either side and at the top, is a flat semi-circular projection, the latter bearing a rude carving of a human face; the peculiar feature of this church is its octagonal apse, a very rare, perhaps unique, example in England; the triple thirteenth-century west window is also a remarkable and unfrequent design; the font appears to be of the same date as the church; the pulpit is of the fifteenth century: there are brasses of a knight in armour, c. 1530, and of Margaret, wife of Thomas Wode, one of the Justices of the King's Bench, 1409. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1730; marriages 1731. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £260 with residence, in the gift of Robert John Hopkins esq. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Henry David Morgan B.A. of Jesus College, Oxford. There are charities of £18 yearly, for distribution in fuel, clothing and money. Tidmarsh Manor is the seat of Robert John Hopkins esq. M.A., J.P. the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is peat; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 770 acres; rateable value, £1,623; the population in 1871 was 183.

TILEHURST is a village and parish 3 miles west from Reading, in the hundred of Reading, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The river Kennet passes on the south. The church of St. Michael, in the Decorated style, is a handsome stone building consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, porch and tower with spire containing 6 bells; it has an alabaster reredos and carved oak stalls and stained windows; it was almost entirely rebuilt in the year 1856; the north aisle and the base of the tower, on which rests an elegant spire, are the only remains of the old building. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory and vicarage,yearly valne £1,000 with residence,in the gift of MagdalenCollege,Oxford and held since 1855 by theRev. John W. Routh M.A. of that college. St. George is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1882. There is at present only a temporary iron church, to seat 300. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held by the Rev. Charles William Herbert Kenrick M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, who resides at The Elms, Reading. A site and grant has been made for a residence. The population is now(1883)about 1,200. Here is aCongregational chapel. The 'Roebuck,' a new and excellent hotel, has been erected on the banks of the Thames for the accommodation of anglers. There are some almshouses, endowed in 1851 by the late Mrs. Mary Lyne, of Burghfield, for six poor widows, or single women, who shall have been born in the parishes and attained the age of sixty, three from each of the parishes of Burghfield and Tilehurst. The poor's land of 30 acres produces £29 yearly. Fronting the Bath road stands Calcot House, the property of John Henry Blagrave esq. D.L. now occupied by Caledon Du Pré Alexander esq.; the surrounding park is well stocked with deer. Prospect House, one mile from Reading, the property of Capt. John Liebenrood R.N. is a large brick building standing in a fine undulating park of 120 acres, and commanding extensive views of the surrounding country. John Henry Blagrave esq. who is lord of the manor, and Captain John Liebenrood R.N. are the principal landowners. The soil is light loam and gravel; subsoil, gravel. The crops are various. The area is 4,164 acres; rateable value, £20,421; the population in 1871 was 1,556.

CALCOT is a hamlet about two miles west from Reading.

THEALE was separated ecclesiastically from Tilehurst in 1855 and will be found under a separate heading.

TUBNEY is a parish 4 miles west-by-north from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Abingdon, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Lawrence is a small Gothic structure of great beauty and simplicity, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and bell-turret containing 2 bells; it was built in the year 1848 in place, but not on the site, of the old church, which had long fallen into decay. The register dates from the year 1848. The living is a rectory, yearly value £152, in the gift of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held since 1881 by the Rev. John Bullock M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford, who resides at Frilford. Tubney House, situate in a park of 5 acres, is the residence of William Wasteneys esq. The manor and most of the land belong to Magdalen College, Oxford. The soil is sand, on the old oolite. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,144 acres; rateable value, £1,070; the population in 1881 was 165.

TWYFORD, situated on the banks of the Lodden water, is a village and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1876 out of the parish of Hurst, union of Wokingham, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Sonning, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles east from Reading, 8 south-west from Maidenhead, 5 south from Henley-on-Thames and 34 from London. Here is a station of the Great Western railway and the junction of the line to Henley. The church of St. Mary, which is in the Early English style, consists of chancel, nave and south aisle, was built in 1846, the bulk of the funds being provided by the late Rev. A. A. Cameron, vicar of Hurst, and Miss Currey. The register dates from the year 1847. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with house, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1876 by the Rev. Edward Gleadow Wilkinson M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Reformed Wesleyans have a small chapel here, erected in 1853. Here are almshouses, founded by Lady Frances Winchcomb, for six poor persons of the liberties of Whistley and Hinton in the parish of Hurst, each of whom receives 3s. fortnightly. Twyford is united with Ruscombe for school purposes. Lord Braybrooke is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are T. C. Garth esq. J.P. and Mrs. Barker of Stanlake Park. The population in 1881 was 812.

UFFINGTON is a village and parish in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. Uffinga was the English title of the sovereign of a district, from which Uffington or Uffinga's Town, is derived: it is pleasantly situated at the base of the White Horse Hill and distant one mile south from Uffington junction on the Great Western railway, 66 miles from London, 4 south-east from Faringdon and 7 north-west from Wantage. The Berks and Wilts canal passes north of the village. The church of St. Mary is known to have been in course of erection in the time of Fabricius, 19th abbot of Abingdon, 1105, to which monastery it was an appendage; but the present edifice is of a period a century and a half later: it is an Early English cruciform structure, with beautiful interior details: it comprises chancel, nave, transepts, south porch and central octagonal embattled tower with pinnacles and containing 5 bells and an ingenious clock, the work of a former village blacksmith: the chancel and choir are exceptionally good: all the windows, except a Decorated insertion on the south, are triple and double lancets with excellent shafts and mouldings: a sedile and piscina are also very good, the east window is stained: in the transepts on the eastern side are recesses, 2 in the north and one in the south transept; these were originally small chapels and each contains a piscina: they have gable roofs projecting eastwards with angular headed windows, unique and evidently coeval with the rest of the edifice: the south porch has a groined vaulted roof and a parvise: its original oak door exhibits excellent Early English iron scroll work: there is a small eastern porch to the south transept worthy of notice: in the nave is a good six-foiled circular window: in the north transept is a classical mural monument to Edward Archer, ob. 1503, near which is a beautiful triple lancet stained window: in the south transept is a recessed monument with reclining effigy to John Saunders of Woolstone J.P. founder of the school, ob. 1638; beneath is a brass to a former John Saunders, ob. 1509. The register dates from the year 1664. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £330 with residence, in the gift of Charles Eyre esq. and held since 1855 by the Rev. Henry Peter Gurney M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is an endowment of the annual value of £10, for education, now applied in support of a public elementary school for girls, boys and infants. Here is a small Baptist chapel and a public reading-room, formerly the school house. The White Horse Hill, situated in this parish, is remarkable for having the Saxon standard of a white horse cut in its steepest part; the horse is represented galloping; its length is 314 feet, and it extends nearly over an acre of ground; the outline is determined by deep trenches cut in the chalk about 10 feet broad; though generally supposed to be the work of Alfred, in commemoration of a victory obtained at Ashdown in the neighbourhood in the year 871, it is more probably the work of the Britons, whose coins frequently exhibit the impress of a similar figure; on the summit of the hill is Uffington Castle, an old Roman encampment, with an embankment and a deep fosse; from the base stretches the fine and fertile valley of White Horse, extending, though not in a direct line, from Swindon to Wantage. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loamy, stone brash and chalk; subsoil, clay and chalk. The chief crops are the usual cereals, seeds and roots. The area is 5,882 acres; rateable value, £7,134; the population in 1881 was 566.

UFTON (or UFTON NERVET) is a village and parish 3 miles south from Theale railway station and 8 south-west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union of Bradfield, county court district of Reading, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Peter is a building in a late and poor style of Perpendicular Gothic, and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle and a tower with a spire containing 4 bells; it was entirely rebuilt in 1862 by Richard Benyon esq.; in the church are various monuments of the Perkins family, including that of Francis Perkins esq. 1635, and his wife, with their effigies, beneath an arch supported by Corinthian columns: here also is buried Arabella (Fermor), wife of Francis Perkins esq. 1738. There were once two churches here: the remains of Ufton Greyshall, consisting now only of the fragment of a wall, may be seen just below the village, about a mile from the existing church, within an enclosure formerly a cemetery, and adjoining the Kennet. The register dates from the year 1636. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £530 with residence and 60 acres of glebe, let for £80, in the gift of Oriel College, Oxford, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Thomas Brooking Cornish M.A. late fellow of that college, and Hon. Canon of Chester. At the rectory Blanco White wrote his first work, the well-known "Doblado's Letters." The Marvin charity charged on the Ufton Court estate, consists of 10 bushels of wheat made into 164 loaves, also 12½ ells of canvas and 12½ yards of calico or flannel, which are distributed yearly. The fuel allotment of 31 acres produces £10 yearly. Ufton Court, an old Elizabethan mansion, now the property of Richard Benyon esq. D.L., J.P. and occupied by Capt. and Miss Sharp, was formerly the residence of the Catholic family of Perkins, one of whom, Francis Perkins esq. married Arabella Fermor, the "Belinda" of Pope's "Rape of the Lock;" the house stands on the brow of a hill which slopes abruptly from the broad terrace surrounding two sides of the mansion, down into a deep valley, at the foot of which a stream creeps along—and is itself an extensive and picturesque structure, with projecting wings and a series of continuous gables, overhanging the lower storey, while in the centre is a large projecting porch, with seats on either side; the lower floors have pavements of black and white marble, decorated ceilings and oak panelling; the walls of the chambers above are pierced by concealed passages, leading to a shaft in the cellar, from whence exit could be obtained to the garden, through another passage under the terrace: about 1830 a large chamber was discovered, entered by a trap door, from which depended a narrow ladder, and in this gloomy refuge were found two petronels and a crucifix, both not long since in the possession of Mr. Congreve, of Aldermaston House; a shelving apartment in the roof of the building, skilfully fitted with secret depositories for the preservation of plate and vestments, was used as a chapel; many of the rooms are now empty and tenantless: in the rear of the house may be seen a succession of fish-ponds, originally seven in number, disposed on the sloping grounds one below the other, and some of these are said to contain fish of enormous size. Richard Benyon esq. D.L., J.P. of Englefield, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is sand and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are barley and peas. The area is 2,080 acres; rateable value, £2,515; the population in 1881 was 302.

UPTON, in Domesday "Optone," was held at the time of the great survey by Turstinus, son of Rolf: it was formerly a chapelry attached to Blewbury, but was formed into a separate ecclesiastical parish, together with Aston Upthorpe, in 1862. Upton is a station on the Didcot and Newbury branch of the Great Western railway, and is situate on the turnpike road between Reading and Wantage, 16 miles from the former and 8 from the latter town, in the hundred of Moreton, union and county court district of Wantage, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary, given to Bermondsey Abbey in the year 1152, is a small and ancient Norman structure, of early date, with thick rubble walls and exceedingly small loop windows; it consists only of chancel and nave and a small wooden belfry on the western gable, containing 1 bell: the chancel arch, which is extremely low, with a round head, has a flat soffit; and the imposts bear the star ornament: the south doorway, also round-headed, is ornamented with zigzag moulding, partly covered by a square modern door; one of the windows also has the zigzag ornament on the exterior; the chancel is almost unique in its diminutiveness and is chiefly lighted by a small double round-headed east window, relieved by a few scraps of modern stained glass: the font, standing immediately at the entrance, is cylindrical, with a deep circular basin, quite plain and is very ancient: there are sittings for 100 people: in the churchyard are memorials to the Humfreys, a family of considerable antiquity in this locality, and others to labourers accidentally killed during the formation of the line from Didcot to Newbury. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is a vicarage, ecclesiastically united to Aston Upthorpe, under the title of Upton and Aston Upthorpe, gross yearly value £370, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1862 by the Rev. Richard Hooper M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge and surrogate. The tithes of the benefice are commuted at £370 4s. 1d. the Ecclesiastical Commissioners having surrendered the great tithes of Upton and a portion of those of Aston Upthorpe to the vicar. A substantial parsonage house of brick has been built at a cost of £1,500. The manor was granted to the monks of Bermondsey in the year 1290. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. The chief landowner is Nathaniel Humfrey esq. of Upton Lodge, others are T. and J. Humfrey and W. Church esqrs. The soil is chiefly loam; subsoil, upper greensand. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 1,339 acres; rateable value, £1,487; the population in 1881 was 415.

WALLINGFORD is a very ancient parliamentary and municipal borough, market and union town, a polling place for the county, head of a county court district and a terminal station of the branch line of the Great Western railway from Moulsford station, 15 miles north-west from Reading, 16 north-east from Newbury, 20 north-west from Maidenhead, 11 north-west from Henley and 46 from London, in the hundred of Moreton, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the banks of the river Thames, over which is a bridge of 14 arches connecting the town with Oxfordshire: the debt having been entirely paid off from the tolls, the bridge is now toll free to the inhabitants only. There was a bridge here, probably of wood, in the time of King Stephen, afterwards supplanted by a more substantial structure of stone and flint: in 1809, the Corporation, under an Act of Parliament, removed the decayed piers and abutments, and replaced them by three new arches of Bath and Headington stone, forming in length, with the piers, 140 feet, the old east end being at the same time widened 7 feet, at a cost, including the erection of a temporary bridge, of £7,000: since 1842, the structure, with its approaches, toll house and estate have been vested in the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of the borough, their rights and privileges with reference to tolls for passing over and under the bridge being reserved to them. The town is well paved and lighted and is governed by a corporation comprising a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors; the borough returns one member to parliament, the mayor being the returning officer. The Corporation act as the Urban Sanitary Authority. The borough has a commission of the Peace, The parliamentary borough comprises ten parishes and three liberties in Berks and three parishes in Oxon, mentioned at the end of this notice.

It appears from Leland that there were once in Wallingford no less than 14 parish churches,and although in his time(1538) only three, as now, existed the sites of the others were known. With the sinecure of All Hallows, in which there is no church, the town has now four parishes. The church of St. Leonard is situated at the south-east end of the town, near the river and the lower wharf, in a street formerly called Little Fish street, but now St. Leonard's Church lane; it is a small and plain building of rubble and flint, probably built or restored in the eleventh century, and consists of apsidal chancel, nave, south aisle and a western tower containing 1 bell: two arches in the chancel exhibit some interesting and perhaps unique Norman work; there is a Norman doorway on the north side of the nave, and in the chancel an ancient priest's door; during the siege of Wallingford the church was converted into barracks and greatly injured, the south aisle and original apse, it is said, destroyed by fire: after remaining for years in a dilapidated state, it was restored and reopened at Michaelmas, 1704, previous repairs and repewing having been effected in 1685, 1695 and 1700; in 1850 the structure was enlarged and partially restored and repewed, the apse and south aisle rebuilt and the tower added, the churchyard being at the same time extended; this work was effected at a cost of about £1,100, defrayed by voluntary contributions: the churchyard is bounded on the east by the brook, which once formed part of the circumvallation of the town; there are in the church 316 sittings, of which 280 are free. The register dates from the year 1711, but marriages solemnised here in the years 1690, 1691 and 1695 are found in the register of St. Mary's. The living is a rectory, yearly value £153, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Carlisle Sayer-Milward M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. A subscription list has been opened for the purpose of improving the value of the benefice. Previously to May 14th, 1868, the chapelry of Sotwell was annexed to this living, but by an order in Council of that date it was transferred to Brightwell, a portion of the tithes of Harwell being transferred to St. Leonard's in exchange. The church of St. Mary, formerly called "St. Mary the More," occupies the south side of the market place and appears from Dugdale (Monasticon) to have been in existence shortly after the Conquest: it is a structure of flint with stone dressings, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a western embattled Perpendicular tower, with octagonal turrets at the angles, surmounted by tall panelled and crocketed pinnacles, each terminating in a crown, above which rises a vane: it is probable that the tower was built and the fabric repaired about 1653 with the materials of the castle, which had been demolished in the previous year, and the crowned pinnacles are supposed to mark the era of the Restoration; the tower contains an illuminated clock, fixed in 1868 at a cost of about £230, and a peal of 8 bells, hung on a massive timber frame of oak or Spanish chestnut, which, from its ornamental mouldings, may also have been brought from the castle; over the stage the upper part of a piscina appears, built into the western wall of the belfry; the bells are highly finished and were cast in 1738: the chancel is debased Perpendicular, the nave arcades are Decorated, the arches springing from octagonal pillars with moulded caps; the south doorway and porch are Early English; on the north side of the tower, at a considerable height from the ground and now obscured from view by the south aisle, is a stone slab fixed in the wall,with the figure, in low relief, of a knight on horseback, in complete armour, with an escutcheon on his breast, in the act of fording a tempestuous river; the church contains several mural monuments, among which on the north wall of the chancel is one of grey marble, to Thomas Renda, of Wallingford Castle esq. several times M.P. for Wallingford, 1722; near it is a marble monument to John Cottingham esq. 1746, and Elizabeth his wife; and at the west end of the church is a monument to Walter Bigg esq. alderman of London, a benefactor to the town, 1659; on the north wall is a marble tablet to Henry Stampe, 1619, and there is also a memorial to the Rev. Thomas Pentycross, 34 years rector of St. Mary's, 1808: the church was repaired and enlarged in 1854, under a faculty dated 3rd September, 1853, at a cost of £2,484 14s. 7d. and contains sittings for 564 persons, of which 64 are assigned to the rector. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1638; marriages, 1653; burials, 1671; there are also records of marriages solemnised at St. Leonard's church in 1690, 1691 and 1695, and of marriages at Sotwell chapel in 1692: the living is a rectory, yearly value not exceeding £200 with residence completed and added during the year 1882 from designs by Mr. E. Dolby, at a cost of £1,000, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Rev. Charles Andrews Raymond M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge. There is a church estate producing £75 yearly. The parish of All Hallows, including the liberty of Clapcot, is partly within and partly without the borough, adjoining the Castle, and is a sinecure belonging to Pembroke College, Oxford; the tithes great and small and the glebe lands granted to the college in the early part of the reign of Charles I. yield about £375 a year. The church was destroyed in 1643 during the siege, but the use of the graveyard was maintained up to 1858, it contains a stone monument, erected in 1839 by the trustees of the public charities of the town, to Sir Thomas Bennett kt. citizen and alderman of London, and his father, Thomas Bennett esq. of Clapcot. The rector of St. Mary's has been appointed rector of Allhallows and receives from Pembroke College tithe rent charges amounting to £30 5s. 6d. a year, the parish having been annexed to St. Mary's for ecclesiastical purposes. St. Peter's church, situated in Thames street, near the bridge, was rebuilt in 1769, the original structure having been laid in ruins during the siege by the Parliamentary forces in 1642 or 1643, and it was reopened on 29th June, 1769, being St. Peter's day: it consists of nave only, without aisles, with four large circular-headed windows on either side, and a western tower, with lofty spire, rising from an open octangular base, and containing one bell: the lower stage serves for a porch and the total height to the top of the vane is 118 feet: in a vault beneath the chancel is buried Sir William Blackstone, the distinguished judge, who died in 1780; a black marble slab at the foot of the chancel steps, bearing his crest, but without inscription, marks the spot; there are memorials at the west end to Mrs. Ann Crouche, widow, 1620, and Mrs. Eleanor Crouche: the old church contained monuments to Sir Michael Malins 1615, and Elizabeth, Lady Malins, 1622, members of a family who had a seat at Clapcote, in All Saints' parish; and to the ancient family of James, who represented this borough in Parliament in the reign of Edward III.: the communion plate includes a chalice, paten and plate of silver, double gilt, and presented in 1778 by Mr. Justice Blackstone, who resided at Castle Priory, on the banks of the Thames, within this parish. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1711, marriages 1769. The living is a rectory, yearly value £100 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Alfred William Russell. The Wesleyan chapel, in St. Leonard's square, will hold 300 persons, and there are also Congregational, Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels, with meeting houses for Particular Baptists and Plymouth Brethren. A cemetery has been opened for all the parishes in common; it comprises 2½ acres and has two mortuary chapels.

The Town Hall, situated on the south side of the market place, was built in 1670 and repaired in 1822, and is a plain building, supported on stone pillars, with a balcony on the north front, from which the result of Parliamentary elections is proclaimed; the hall and council chamber occupy the first floor; in the former the quarter sessions and borough courts were held, the latter serves for municipal business and for the petty sessions of the Moreton hundred: on the walls are hung portraits of Archbishop Laud (a benefactor to the town); Jacob, earl of Radnor, high steward, by Sir Thomas Lawrence; Sir Francis Sykes bart. high sheriff and M.P. for the borough; Richard Benyon de Beauvoir esq. high steward and M.P. for the borough; William Seymour Blackstone esq. M.P. for the borough; Charles Atherton Allnatt esq. and John Allnatt Hedges esq. both painted at the expense of the corporation, and Widdows Golding esq.: on the upper floor is a large room used as a kitchen on the occasion of municipal banquets; behind the open space under the hall are other rooms appropriated as an engine house and volunteer armoury. In the centre of the market place is an obelisk, with the arms of the town, and around it a paved ring of light coloured stones called the "Bull Ring." A guild of merchants or traders, "Gilda Mercatorum," with liberties, laws and customs secured to the inhabitants by royal favour, existed here from the time of Edward the Confessor ; it was re-established 20th September, 1667, by letters patent from Charles II. The Corn exchange, situated on the east side of the market place, is a handsome building, erected in 1856 by a joint-stock company, and has a pedimental front, supported by flat pilasters with foliaged caps, and a roof of iron and glass ; it is furnished with stands and desks and is managed by twelve directors : previous to its erection the corn market was held in the open space beneath the town hall, first as a sample and in 1817 as a pitched market. The market day is Friday, for corn and cattle. There is on the 29th of September a fair for pleasure and hiring of servants. Here are two banks—the old bank of Messrs. Hedges, Wells & Co. and the London and County (branch). The Savings Bank was established in the year 1843 ; there is also a Penny Savings bank. A Police station for the division of Wallingford was erected in St. Mary's street in 1857, at a cost of £1,150 ; the building is of blue brick with stone dressings : the force consists of a superintendent, a sergeant and six constables, the police supervision of the borough being under the same control. Here is a Free Library with a Literary Institute, for the purposes of which a commodious building was erected in 1871 on the north side of St. Leonard's square, and is available also for concerts and other entertainments. There are two weekly newspapers published here on Friday, one called the "Berks and Oxon Advertiser" and the other the "Wallingford Times ;" there is also an agency for the "Reading Mercury." The Royal Berkshire Horticultural Society was established in the year 1831 under the patronage of the Queen and his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort ; shows are held in July and September. The Cottage Hospital, situated in the Reading road, on a site given by Henry Hawkins esq. mayor of Wallingford, owes its origin to the late Miss Mary Morrell, of White Cross, who died in June 1880, and has space for seven beds, with apartments for the matron, and is supported by voluntary contributions : a sum of £1,000 towards the building fund was contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Morrell, of Headington Hill, Oxford. The Almshouses, situated near the entrance to the town, on the east side of the Reading road, were built and endowed in 1681 by William Angeir and Mary his sister ; the income now amounts to about £73 a year ; the inmates, six in number, have comfortable apartments and a garden, with a weekly allowance of 4s. 6d. each. Sir Thomas Bennett kt. mentioned above, founded 17th January, 1616, a charity of £20 yearly, payable out of an estate at Kirton, Lincolnshire, and vested in the Mercers' Company of London, upon trust : by a decision of the Court of Exchequer, 30th May, 1826, the Charity trustees of the borough are entitled to one-sixth of the net proceeds of the estate, amounting in 1879 to £141, from which, together with dividends arising from money in Consols, fifteen poor persons receive £12 a year each. Major Bigg's charity consisted, up to the year 1835, of a net annual sum of £20 paid by the Merchant Taylors' Company, of London, to the Corporation and arising out of an extensive range of buildings on the south side of Soho square, conveyed to the Company by the donor, Walter Bigg, for the erection of a grammar school and the relief of ten poor persons : a report of the Master of the Rolls based on a decretal order dated 29th July, 1835, and confirmed by the Court, assigned to the charity two equal third parts of the net annual income of the property : the ten poor persons indicated in the bequest now receive 24s. each every half-year, and the grammar school has been established as elsewhere described. Archbishop Laud's charity consists of a sum of £50 per annum derived out of the manors of Hagbourne and Aston Upthorpe, and by a deed executed 12th March, 1706, the income is applied annually on 7th October towards apprenticing 5 boys each year for two years consecutively and each third year to provide marriage portions for 3 poor maids. Fludger's charity, founded in 1808 by the will of Henry Fludger esq. a member of the Corporation, now consists of £900 Consols, the dividends arising from which are distributed annually among 30 poor men and women. Golding's charity consists of sums of £550 Consols and £1,050 New £3 PerCent. Annuities, left to the Corporation on trust by Widdows Golding esq. a native of Wallingford, by will dated 5th August, 1818, the dividends arising therefrom are distributed at certain times in clothing, flannel and blankets, without any distinction or reservation as to religious belief. Morrell's charity consists of two sums of bank stock, now invested in £2,275 10s. Consols, originally left to the Corporation, under certain conditions, by the will of Charles Morrell esq. of Sloane street, London, and Bridge house, Wallingford, dated 25th October, 1855, which directs that the annual income therefrom derived shall be divided equally every year among 10 poor persons.

Castle Priory, formerly the seat of Judge Blackstone, is now occupied by Jas. Hayllar esq. The Castle, built within the ancient walls, was situated in the north-east quarter of the town, on ground comprising between 20 and 30 acres, and may be said to have overhung the Thames ; its original construction has been attributed by some to the Romans, and various still existing subterranean passages connected with the keep, with portions of early masonry, have been pronounced to be Roman work; the fortress, despoiled by the Danes A.D. 1006, was rebuilt by Robert D'Oyley, acting under the orders of William the Conqueror, between A.D. 1067 and 1071 : during the contest between Stephen and the Empress Maud it was held for the latter by Brian Fitzcount, and in 1146 sustained several attacks from the king, who had thrown up fortifications in a close in the parish of Crowmarsh still called "Barbican :" in the reign of Henry II. A.D. 1155, a parliament was held at the Castle to determine the succession to the crown ; and in that of Richard I. it was traitorously seized, during the king's absence in Palestine, by his brother John, who on succeeding to the throne, strengthened and garrisoned it against the barons ; Richard, king of the Romans, earl of Cornwall and brother of Henry III. spent vast sums upon it and made it his chief residence, and in 1246, the king being present, celebrated here with great rejoicings the birth of his son ; by Edward II. it was granted to his hapless favourite, Piers de Gaveston, on the death of the latter, A.D. 1312-13, to Hugh Despenser the younger, and subsequently, in 1317, to his queen, Isabella, who transferred it to her paramour, Lord Mortimer, upon whose execution Edward III. gave the castle to his brother John of Eltham, and it afterwards became the inheritance of Edward, the famous Black Prince ; in 1471, after the battle of Tewkesbury, it became the prison-house of the unfortunate Margaret of Anjou, who remained here till the payment of a heavy ransom by her father, King René, liberated her in 1475 : during the civil war, lines of defence were again thrown up within the interior area, and the fortress regained, in some measure, its ancient strength, many of the outbuildings having been dismantled and quantities of lead and other materials transported to Windsor during the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth for the construction of works at Windsor Castle : a warrant for this re-fortifying was issued by Charles I. in May, 1643, and the defence of the town and Castle entrusted to Colonel Blagge, an officer of great courage and military talent, who defended it with great resolution for sixteen weeks, and eventually surrendered, with a loss of only five slain, 27th July, 1646 ; he died 14th Nov. 1660, and is buried in the north cross of Westminster Abbey; after its surrender the Castle became the state prison, and in 1652 was demolished by an order of Council, dated 18th November : originally it appears to have been oblong in form, with three bastions on the north and two on the south, the keep intervening between the latter ; on the east was the glacis, sloping abruptly towards the river, on the crest of which now stands the ivy-clad ruin called the "Queen's Tower ;" the centre moat still exhibits traces of artificial works of great strength, and in the large ordnance map lately published the existing remains of the fortifications are set out with great minuteness. The proprietor, J. Kirby Hedges esq. J.P. has an Elizabethan mansion situate on a commanding eminence with picturesque grounds. The College of St. Nicholas and the church or chapel belonging to it, were situated at the south-east corner of the area circumscribed by the fortifications of the Castle and within the third dyke ; the still existing ruins show that the buildings were constructed of limestone (malin) intermixed with flints and cemented with concrete ; the south wall, of considerable height, is nine feet thick, and in the upper portion of the tower the use of blocks of concrete may be traced ; an extensive view over the surrounding country is obtained from the summit, which is approached by a path formed along the top of the wall ; the doorway and windows, constructed of freestone, four of which remain on the west side, bear traces of alterations late in the fourteenth or in the fifteenth century ; the burial ground is supposed to have adjoined the church on the south-east. The enclosure called the Kine Croft is appropriated as a public recreation ground, and an annual sum of about £16 is received for the right of depasturing cows ; it is fenced in on the north and west by earth works, forming portions of a Roman camp, which, by a perpetual injunction of the Court of Chancery, dated 21st July, 1881, are preserved from any future disturbance.

SCHOOLS:—
Grammar, situated in High street, was originally founded, as stated elsewhere, under the Charity of Walter Bigg, supposed to have been an innkeeper of St. Giles' in the Fields, London; by endowment, amounting to not more than £10 yearly, was directed to be applied to the erection of a free grammar school, the maintenance of a master, & the instruction of six boys, sons of parents residing in the town: no nominations were made to the school for many years, & the income relating to it was allowed to accumulate until the invested capital produced a yearly income of £200, which, with the aid of private subscriptions, has enabled the Trustees to erect suitable buildings for 110 scholars: constructed so as to be capable of easy enlargement, on a site to the west of the town, at a cost of about £3,000; & these were opened, with some ceremonial, 10th September, 1877, by Edward Wells esq. then M.P. for the borough; girls: Miss Jessie A. Landon, mistress; Miss Kate Williams, assistant mistress; boys: George S. Morgan, master; William H. Faulkner, assistant master
National, Kine croft, are commodious buildings, with separate class-rooms for boys, girls & infants, the average attendance being 290; they were erected in 1861 at upwards of £2,000 cost, exclusive of the site, which was granted by the Corporation; Thomas Waterer Tickner, master; Miss Ellen Barnes, mistress; Miss Fanny Kirby, infants' mistress

WALTHAM ST. LAWRENCE is a parish and very ancient village 2 miles long, in the hundred of Wargrave, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles from Reading, 6 west from Maidenhead, 7½ south-east from Henley, 3 from Twyford station and 11½ west from Windsor. The church of St. Lawrence is of considerable antiquity, supposed to be of the twelfth or thirteenth century; it is in the Norman and Gothic styles and consists of chancel, nave and aisles; it was in 1847 restored by the late vicar and inhabitants, in conformity with the original design: at the west end is a square embattled tower containing 6 bells, with a small turret at the south-west angle containing a staircase leading to the belfry and top of the tower; the tower contains a beautiful window with stone mullions: the pulpit is of stone: the font is in keeping with the original windows, which remain entire: in the north-east corner is a monument over the burial-place of the Neville family, also two others of some interest: a sculptured stone reredos, in three compartments, subjects, the Descent from the Cross, in the centre; on the right the Descent of the Holy Spirit, and in the left compartment, St. Paul Preaching at Athens: a memorial (east) stained window was given by the late vicar, the Rev. E. J. Parker, B.D. and his sister; another memorial window has been given by Mr. Hanson, being a copy from a beautiful window in Ratisbon Cathedral: close to the churchyard are four immense elm trees, quite hollow by age, forming a square and used as a pound for cattle. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, present net income £375, in the gift of Lord Braybrooke and held since 1873 by the Rev Adam Henderson Fairbairn M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here. The sum of £45 (the rent of the Bell inn) is distributed annually amongst the deserving poor. Lord Braybrooke, who is lord of the manor, Pembroke College and Mrs. John Sharp, are the principal landowners. The soil is various: subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,468 acres; rateable value, £9,556; the population in 1881 was 853.

SHURLOCK STREET is a small hamlet in this parish. Here is a district chapel in connection with the parish church. Billingbear Park, the property of Lord Braybrooke, and rented by Thomas Russell esq. is a magnificent park of about 400 acres; it has an avenue of oak trees a quarter of a mile long leading to the mansion, which is a fine red brick building.

WHITE WALTHAM (formerly Bury Town) with Waltham Abbotts (or ABBAS) form a parish and irregular village 10 miles east from Reading, 9 south-east from Henley, 7 west from Windsor and 3 from the station at Maidenhead, in the hundred of Beynhurst, union of Cookham, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; part of the village extends into the parish of Shottesbrooke. The church of St. Mary the Virgin was rebuilt in 1868, with the exception of the chancel and mortuary chapel, preserving the original Norman and Early English styles, with an addition of a north aisle and lofty stone tower, in which is a peal of 6 bells, principally at the expense of the late Charles Sawyer esq. of Heywood Lodge; Charles Ellis esq. of White Waltham Place, restored the mortuary chapel belonging to the estate: in taking down the walls of the old church a group of alabaster figures was found, supposed to have formed part of the reredos; the chancel walls appear to have been covered with mural paintings. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a vicarage, united with the rectory of Shottesbrooke, joint yearly value £456 with residence, in the gift of Coleraine Robert Vansittart esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Hardwicke Mills Dyer M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. There are sums amounting to £30 yearly for apprenticing, also £38 yearly for distribution. White Waltham Place, the seat of Charles Ellis esq. is a fine building in a well-wooded park, pleasantly situated on the brow of a hill, overlooking White Waltham and commanding a fine view of the surrounding country. Heywood, now occupied by Beaumont Hankey esq. is a handsome square building, situated in a fine park. Coleraine Robert Vansittart esq. is lord of the manor of Berry; Sir Gilbert Augustus Clayton-East bart. is lord of the manor of Feenes. The principal landowners are the lords of the manors and the trustees of Geo. Dunn esq. The soil is very various; subsoil, chalk, gravel and clay in some parts. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 2,576 acres; rateable value, £9,669; the population in 1881 was 821.

WANTAGE.

WANTAGE, called by the Saxons "Wanating," from "Want," a mole, is a market and union town, a polling place for the county and head of a county court district, in the hundred and rural deanery of its own name, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 60 miles from London, on a branch of the river Ock, about 2½ miles south from the Wantage Road station on the Great Western railway, 9 south-east from Faringdon, 10 south-west from Abingdon and 18 miles by rail from Oxford, on the road from Oxford to Hungerford.

The town is not incorporated, but in the year 1828 an Act of Parliament was obtained for the establishment of a Board of Commissioners, 19 in number, who have the supervision of the paving, lighting and watching of the town.

The Berks and Wilts canal passes about three-quarters of a mile distant from the town, with which it is connected by a branch; there is a tramway to the Great Western railway station at Wantage Road, laid in 1875, on which steam is used as the motive power.

The church of SS. Peter and Paul, built either wholly or in part by the benefactions of the Fitz-Warren family, is a large and fine cross church, consisting of chancel with clerestory, north and two south side chapels, central battlemented tower containing a peal of 6 bells, transepts, nave with clerestory, aisles and north and south porches with parvise: it was originally designed to have a nave without aisles; these seem to have been added in the reign of Edward I. about which time the chantry chapels, which vary considerably in style and date, were also built: the chancel is in its general design of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, as are also the aisles: the east window, inserted in 1857, was one of the Earliest Gothic works of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. then a resident in Wantage: the church is remarkable as being complete in its general plan from the beginning, the subsequent series of additions not having destroyed the original design: among other details worthy of mention are the very perfect and interesting remains of Pointed woodwork, consisting of a screen in the south chapel, parcloses shutting off the chancel and eighteen stalls, with carved miserere seats and beautiful poppy heads; two very fine brasses, one of a priest said to be of the family of the Fitz-Warine, the founders of the church, and another with effigy in armour to Sir Ivo de Fitz-Warine, a knight who attended the Earl of Buckingham in his expedition to the coast of France and was with him at the siege of Nantes; he died 1414: there is also in the chancel the canopied marble tomb of Sir William Fitz-Warine K.G. distinguished in the French and Scotch wars of 1361, with recumbent figures of himself and wife: several others to the Wilmotts of Lambourne and memorials to the family of Grove: there is also a memorial window to the Hon. and Rev. E. Nelson (brother of the present Lord Nelson), formerly curate of Wantage; the old altar-stone of early date still exists in perfect condition. In Leland's time an ancient Norman church also stood in the churchyard; the remains of which, as long as they existed, indicated that it had been restored or rebuilt in the twelfth century; the Norman doorway of this building was removed some 20 years since to the grammar school, with which it is still incorporated. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £755 with residence and 5 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Thomas Henry Archer Houblon M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford.

The Grammar school formerly stood in the churchyard, having been erected there in the time of Queen Elizabeth; in 1840 advantage was taken of a millenary festival in commemoration of the birth of King Alfred to raise funds for the erection of a more convenient building, and in the following year new Grammar school buildings were erected on the south side of the town; these are in the Early English style, forming three sides of a quadrangle, and retain the fine old Norman doorway of the previous structure; the school admits upon its foundation twelve senior and twelve junior scholars of the parish of Wantage, the former being taught free of charge, the latter paying a small fee; both are chosen by competition; private boarders and scholars are also received, and the school buildings have lately been very much enlarged; there are now about 70 scholars, of whom 30 are boarders. Here are large National schools, an Industrial school for training female servants, another for training schoolmistresses for village schools, and a school for the daughters of the middle and upper classes; there is also a Penitentiary called St. Mary's Home, founded in 1856 and conducted by Sisters of Mercy in connection with the Church of England.

The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here; the latter, situated in Newbury street, is a building of rag stone with Bath stone dressings in the Decorated style, erected in 1844 at a cost of £1,200; it will hold 500 persons and has attached day and Sunday schools, and a minister's house; the former, built in 1860 at the cost of £1,450, is capable of holding 300 persons.

The Corn Exchange, erected in 1865 at the back of the Red Lion Inn, is a building of red brick, 90 feet long by 20 broad, and well adapted for the purpose of a pitched market: it is also let for public meetings, balls and concerts.

The Town Hall is situated in the Market place.

Petty Sessions for the town and neighbouring parishes are held on alternate Wednesdays in the Town hall. There is also a subscription reading-room in the Town hall.

The charter of a market was granted by Henry III. to the Fitz-Warines, a noble family, who were for some considerable period connected with Wantage: the market day was fixed for Saturday, and although a pitched market was established in 1817 it gradually receded into its former condition as a sample market, and business was usually transacted in the afternoon and evening between a limited number of neighbouring farmers and a few local dealers; at the commencement of the year 1845 a second attempt was made to establish a pitched market and the result has been eminently successful; for the soil of this district is conducive to the growth of prime samples of corn, and the growers finding the proximity of the Great Western railway contributed to the attendance of competing purchasers from London, Bristol, and intermediate places in both directions, have from the commencement furnished a good supply; the corn market is now held on Wednesday.

Fairs are held on the first Saturday in March and the first Saturday in May, and on the 18th July for cherries; a sale for agricultural stock is held once a month.

The manufacture of sacks and other hempen articles was formerly carried on here, the trade has however gone northward, and is now only pursued on a limited scale. The general trade of the town depends mainly upon the surrounding agricultural population. The iron and brass foundry established here by the late Mr. Charles Hart, and known as the "Vale of White Horse Ironworks," employs a considerable number of hands; it is now the property of Messrs. Gibbons and Robinson, whose reputation as manufacturers of steam threshing machinery and agricultural implements in general extends throughout the kingdom.

The charities of the town are valuable; the town lands consist of 156 acres, six houses and several cottages, the yearly value of which is £587 12s. 8d. besides a sum of £392 invested in Consols and producing £11 15s. 2d. yearly, a portion of the total gross income is appropriated to the support of almshouses for 18 persons, each of whom receives 5s. 6d. weekly; there is also a distribution to the general poor of money amounting to £221 8s. 8d. and a yearly sum of £80 to the Grammar school Stile's almshouses are for 12 persons who each receive 6s. a week; the income of this charity, derived from 238 acres of land, is £100 yearly; the remaining charities produce £68 7s. 9d. yearly, which is chiefly assigned to the almspeople, or distributed in kind, except £9 2s. 9d. bequeathed for education.

The Vale of White Horse in this neighbourhood is celebrated in ancient story as the scene of English victories over Danish invaders, perpetuated through subsequent ages by a memento simple but enduring; on one of the hills forming the south boundary of the vale and known as the White Horse Hill, is the figure of a white horse in a galloping position on the upper part of the hill, 314 feet in length, and occupying nearly an acre of ground; its shape is determined by trenched lines cut in the white chalk between two and three feet deep and about ten broad; the head, neck, body and tail are composed of one line varying in width, and one line or trench has been made for each of the legs; this figure has been generally accepted as a memorial of the great victory of Æscendune fought in 871, in which Alfred signally defeated the Danes and slew their king Buegsieg; the battle is believed to have been fought on this spot, and this view is supported by Dr. Wise and more recently by Mr. Hughes, author of "Tom Brown," but other authorities fix the site of the encounter more to the east, on the swelling hills above Aston Upthorpe, one point in which has long been known as "King's Standing"; though the situation of the figure effectually preserves it from all danger of obliteration, yet the inhabitants of the neighbouring parishes hold from time to time a rustic fête, on which occasion they clear away any accumulation of weeds. It is a tradition recorded by Baskerville (1677-8) and Lysons (1806) that some neighbouring lands were held by the tenure of cleaning the figure, i.e. cutting away the evergreen turf at regular intervals; this obligation or custom had, however, died out in 1780, but was revived with much success in 1858, by the late E. M. Atkins esq. of Kingston Lisle, an event which has been amusingly perpetuated in Mr. Hughes's "Scouring of the White Horse."

On the summit of the hill is a magnificent Roman camp, known as "Uffington Castle," after the village lying below; it is 700 feet in diameter from east to west and 900 from north to south, and is surrounded by a high inner vallum and a slighter one on the outside, both of which are regarded as Danish; half a mile further north-west is another camp, called "Hardwell Castle," nearly square in form and surrounded also by a double vallum; its dimensions are 140 by 180 feet. Right down below the White Horse is a curious deep and broad gully called "The Manger," into one side of which the hills fall in sweeping curves known as "The Giant's Stairs;" the other side of the Manger is called "Dragon's Hill," or more properly "Pendragon's Hill," from a chief slain in battle and buried here.

About a mile westward from White Horse Hill near the Ridgeway leading over the Downs is the interesting and historical relic called "Wayland Smith's Cave," built up of megaliths called "Sarsden stones," found in the neighbourhood; Weland the Northern Vulcan, is one of the mythic heroes of the Scandinavian legend, who fabricates the arms of the heroes of the Early Sagas, and the tradition here is that this spot was formerly inhabited by an invisible blacksmith who good-naturedly shod any horse that was left there, provided a piece of money was deposited at the same time to reward the labours of the workman; the monument, as it now exists, consists principally of four flat stones, three slanting edgeways and a fourth placed flat upon them; the spot was formerly surrounded by others, arranged probably in an oblong form, extending due north and south, the existing stones occupying the eastern side of its southern extremity; though bearing a Saxon name and connected with a Saxon legend, it is probably only a Celtic grave.

About 5 miles from Wantage, on the estate of E. M. Atkins esq. is the famous "Blowing Stone," a mass of red sandstone about 3 feet high, 3 feet 6 inches broad and 2 feet thick, pierced in a singular manner on three sides, with holes which, if blown through, produce a dull moaning sound, audible, if the blower have strong lungs and some skill, at a distance of several miles.

Wantage is famed as being the residence of some of the early English monarchs and especially as being the birthplace (Oct. 25, A.D. 849) of one of the most illustrious among them, King Alfred the Great. The palace of the Saxon kings is believed to have stood in an oblong piece of ground of about six acres, bounded on three sides by the hollow way into the town from Faringdon by Mill street and by some running water which divided the "high garden" (originally a Roman work) from the lower; near to it is an orchard, still called "Court close," and about a quarter of a mile from the town between Limborough and the river is a brick paved Roman bath and a well, both associated by name with the great king, who is said to have died at Faringdon, and to have been first buried, A.D. 903, in the cathedral of Winchester, and afterwards re-interred in 1116 at Hyde Abbey, without the walls of that city; the remains of the king are further asserted to have been discovered on this site, January 1, 1866, by Mr. John Mellor, of Derby, and to have been afterwards placed in two mortuary chests and conveyed to the church of St. Bartholomew, Winchester. Another account, Alfred was buried in the church of Little Driffield, Yorkshire. In 1849, the thousandth anniversary of King Alfred's birth was celebrated at Wantage with much ceremony and great rejoicing, on which occasion a medal was struck, bearing the king's profile, an oration delivered by Mr. Martin F. Tupper, and a "Jubilee song," specially composed, was sung by a great concourse of people. Col. Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. of Lockinge Park, has presented to the town a Sicilian marble statue of King Alfred, executed, at a cost of 2,000 guineas, by H.S.H. Count Gleichen, which is placed in the centre of the market place, and was unveiled by T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales, July 14th, 1877; the figure is 9 feet high, and, with its pedestal, 17 feet, and the face, as well as the costume, has been modelled from the best existing authorities. Dr. Butler, Bishop of Durham, the celebrated anthor of "The Analogy of Natural and Revealed Religion," was born here in 1692 in a house called "The Priory," on the south side of the churchyard.

The Commissioners of Wantage are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Edward Ormond esq. the trustees of T. Brown esq. George Curtis esq. Mrs. Wasbrough and Messrs. Worthington.

The area of the entire parish is 7,530 acres; and the population in 1881 was—township, 3,488; parish, 4,338; rateable value of Wantage, £10,496.

The parish comprises the township of GROVE, which is given under a separate heading, and the hamlets of WEST LOCKINGE, 2 miles east, and found under a separate heading. CHARLTON ½ mile north-east; at the latter place there is a chapel of ease: the population is 253; rateable value of Charlton £3,220. The principal landowners are Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P., J.P. Sir C. J. Palmer bart. B. Castle esq. and Messrs. John and Henry Barnard.

WARFIELD is an extensive parish 2 miles from the Bracknell station, 5 north-east from Wokingham, and 9 south-west from Windsor, in the hundred of Wargrave, union of Easthampstead, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael and All Angels is a very ancient stone building in the Early English style, of which it is considered a fine specimen ; it consists of a chancel, nave, north aisle, the private chapel of Lord Braybrooke, and square embattled western tower with 5 bells : the church was thoroughly restored in 1876 under the direction of the late G. E Street esq. R.A. at a cost of about £3,000, raised by subscription ; it contains a very handsome carved oak screen with delicate tracery, a reredos and good organ ; it also contains a monument to Sir John Walsh and several other fine monuments of great antiquity. The register dates from early in the fourteenth century, fragments only of which now remain, the rest having been destroyed by fire in 1848. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. R. Faithfull and held since 1860 by the Rev. Francis Turner Gill M.A. of Downing College, Cambridge ; a handsome vicarage house was erected in the year 1862. The 61 acres of fuel allotment have been sold and the invested funds produce £65 yearly for fuel : £30 from several charities are distributed. There is a Wesleyan chapel at Moss End. Warfield Park, a brick mansion surrounded by an extensive and beautiful park, is the seat of Lord Ormathwaite ; Warfield Grove, a plain brick house standing in a park of some extent, is the seat of Frederick Cazenove esq. : Warfield Hall, a pleasant brick-built residence with a park of about 60 acres, is the seat of William Charles King esq. D.L., J.P. Lord Braybrooke, who is lord of the manor, Lord Ormathwaite and Wm. Chas. King esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay and gravel ; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley ; the area is 3,239 acres ; rateable value, £10,651 ; the population in 1881, including the district of Bracknell, which is principally situated in this parish, was 1,986.

Parish Clerk, William White, jun.

WARGRAVE is a parish and village 3 miles south-east from Henley, 7 north-east from Reading, 2 north from the Great Western railway station at Twyford and 8 north-west from Maidenhead, situated in a valley surrounded by picturesque woodland scenery, on the bank of the Thames, which separates it from Oxfordshire and is crossed by a ferry to Shiplake station ; it is in the hundred of Wargrave, union of Wokingham, county court district of Henley, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Henley and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a Gothic structure of great antiquity ; it has chancel, nave, and an embattled tower and belfry containing 6 bells ; the west window is stained, representing the four Evangelists ; there are twelve marble monuments in the chancel and ten in the church, the most prominent of which is to the memory of Thomas Day, esq. the author of "Sandford and Merton." The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £226 with residence, in the gift of Lord Braybrooke, and held since 1859 by the Rev. Simon Sturges M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. The Rev. Walter Sellon, vicar of Ledsham, in the county of York, left in 1793 the sum of £400 in the £3 per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, the interest of which to be given as follows:—£10 to a servant man of good character who has lived three years in one place, and to a servant woman the following year on the same principle and so on every alternate year for ever; 10s. to the vicar or curate who shall preach a sermon on every Michaelmas day, setting forth the reciprocal duties of master and mistress and their servants. There are other charities, value £20, for distribution. Lord Braybrooke is lord of the manor. The area is 4,314 acres; rateable value, £13,544; the population in 1881, was 1,882.

HARE HATCH is a small hamlet in the parish of Wargrave, on the Bath road, 1½ miles east-south-east.

KILN GREEN is a small village in this parish, 2 miles east-south-east.

UPPER CULHAM is also in this parish, 2½ miles north. Culham Court, the seat of Mrs. Egerton, is a square red-brick mansion, pleasantly situated on a hill rising abruptly from the Thames; it commands most delightful views; the plantations are extensive and the park is enriched with fine ornamental timber.

CRAZIES HILL is a small hamlet in the parish of Wargrave. A school for the poor children of the neighbourhood, with rooms for the teacher, has been built by the vicar and parishioners, and service is performed on Sundays alternately morning and afternoon. The Rev. Herbert Court Sturges M.A. of University College, Oxford, is curate.

Parish Clerk, John Parritt.

WATCHFIELD is a township in the parish and hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, one mile from Shrivenham, 3½ miles south-east from Highworth, 4½ south-west from Faringdon and 2 north-by-east from Shrivenham station on the Great Western Railway, separated from Wiltshire by the river Cole, on which is a mill. The church of St. Thomas was erected by subscription in 1858; it is a small stone building in the Early English and Decorated styles and consists of chancel, nave and bell gable and 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1858. The living is a chapelry annexed to Shrivenham, joint yearly value £520, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1859 by the Rev. George William Murray M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford; the Rev. Robert Litson Robinson M.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, is curate in charge. There is a National school for infants only, also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The Earl of Radnor and Viscount Barrington are lords of the manor and chief landowners. The soil is stone brash; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and turnips. The acreage is returned with Shrivenham; rateable value, £2,164; the population in 1881 was 361.

WELFORD, anciently Weligford, the "willow-ford," is a parish with the chapelry of WICKHAM and the hamlets of EASTON, WESTON and HOE BENHAM, in the hundred of Faircross, union and county court district of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks, rural deanery of Newbury and diocese of Oxford; Welford is 6 miles north-west from Newbury on the river Lambourn. The church of St. Gregory consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a circular western tower with octagonal spire: the chancel and nave are Early English, and the south aisle and porch Perpendicular: the tower, a thirteenth-century Early English work, is almost unique in its way and is circular for the greater part of its height, when it becomes octagonal and is surmounted by a spire of the same form, ribbed with eight good double windows under triangular heads: the sedilia afford a good example of the style peculiar to the reign of Henry III., and the font is singular from its Norman form and Early English details, and in particular the sixteen interesting arches surrounding it and presenting evidence, as is supposed, of a Transitional character: the church also contains a monumental slab, supposed to be that of the founder, and an altar tomb to Anne, daughter of Sir William Read, 1585, wife, first to Sir Adrian Fortescue and next to Sir Thomas Parry, besides mural and other monuments to the families of Mundy, Archer and others. In the churchyard, on the south side, is an ancient cross, consisting of an octagonal shaft on a square base and surmounted by an ornamental rounded head: the church has been very carefully restored. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, with the chapelry of Wickham annexed, joint yearly value of the tithe commuted rent-charge £1,400 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1879 by the Rev. Alfred Stephen Batson M.A. of St. Alban Hall, Oxford. Thomas Sheafe, rector here, who died in 1639, was the author of "A Plea for Old Age." The rectory house, situated in Wickham, has been rebuilt in the Gothic style, and contains many beautiful works of art: attached to it is a very large conservatory, in which are preserved some portions of stone work taken from Welford church at the time of the restoration. There are, perhaps, few English villages presenting an earlier or more continuous history than Welford; the Romans, it is evident from the numerous coins and relics found here, frequented it, even if they had no permanent settlement; and there are extant various Saxon charters by successive monarchs, the chief interest of which lies in their minute description of then existing boundaries. At the time of the Domesday Survey, 1083-6, Welford, then called "Waliford," was in the hundred of Roeberg (Rowbury), with two churches, and seems to have been a prosperous place. The manor belonged, from the tenth century, to the abbot and convent of Abingdon. Welford House is the seat of Charles Eyre esq. D.L., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner; the park contains 200 acres and is stocked with deer. The soil is light and gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 5,173 acres; rateable value £6,945; the population in 1881 was 943.

EASTON, three-quarters of a mile south-east, HOE BENHAM 2 miles south, are hamlets. WESTON is a hamlet half-a-mile north-west. The manor of Weston was purchased of Sir William Percy by John Aubrey, who conveyed it in 1364 to John de Cokking and his heirs; this manor, in Queen Elizabeth's time, was in the family of Hungerford. Sir Francis Burdett bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

WICKHAM chapelry is one mile and a half south-west from the parish church and is situated on the line of the great Roman highway connecting Gloucester and Silchester with London; a branch from Wickham leading by High Street Lane to Boxford. The church of St. Swithin consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and a tower containing 1 bell, and, with the exception of the tower, was entirely rebuilt in 1846-9, from designs by Mr. B. Ferrey, in a kind of fourteenth-century style, with a profusion of ornamental carving; the tower is the only portion of the ancient church now remaining, and may possibly belong to the close of the eleventh century; it has a balustre belfry window and quoins which appear like Saxon long and short work: the walls are of great thickness and the masonry consists of alternate layers of flint and mortar about three inches thick: the new work has been executed in the most sumptuous manner, and the sculpture of the foliage on the capitals and bosses is considered by some as equal to the best examples of ancient work: a handsome font-cover, from the Exhibition of 1862, was presented to the church by Lieut.-Col. Nicholson.

WHITCHURCH is a parish in Bradfield union, partly in this county but principally in Oxfordshire; full particulars will be found in Kelly's Directory of the latter county.

WINDSOR.

WINDSOR (or NEW WINDSOR) anciently called Windlesora, the "winding shore," A.S. ora, shore, is a municipal and parliamentary borough, a polling place for the county, head of a county court district and a market and union town, in the hundred of Ripplesmere, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the navigable Thames, 22 miles from London, 19 from Reading, 14 from Hampton Court and 6 south-east from Maidenhead. The town consists of New Windsor and part of the suburb of Clewer, on the west. Over the Thames, connecting the borough with Eton and Slough, is a bridge 200 feet long and 29 feet wide, supported by three arches of cast iron, the middle one being 55 feet span, resting on piers of granite; it is a toll bridge for horses and carriages and was built in 1823. Lower down the river are two bridges, the Victoria bridge to Datchet and the Albert bridge from Old Windsor to Datchet. The town was given by Edward the Confessor to Westminster Abbey, but seems to have first acquired importance by the building of the castle, in which William the Norman is said to have lived. In 1276 it was made a free borough, and from the year 1302 (though not uninterruptedly till 1424) sent two members to Parliament, until the passing of the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," by which it returns only one. By the "Boundary Act, 1868," portions of Clewer and Eton are included in the parliamentary limits.

The corporation consists of a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with a high steward, recorder, treasurer and town clerk. There is a separate commission of the peace, consisting of fifteen justices, who hold petty sessions twice a week and quarter sessions. The town is divided into the "Out" and "In" wards, and is well built, paved and lighted. For the supply of the many wealthy residents and visitors the town has establishments and shops of a higher class than are usually met with in a place of its size.

The South Western Railway Company has a branch line from Wandsworth through Richmond and Staines which crosses the river below Windsor and has its terminus in the Datchet road, immediately adjoining the northern boundary of the castle, into the grounds of which a private entrance has been made for the convenience of Her Majesty. The Great Western railway has a branch from Slough, crossing the river a little above the town by a bow bridge of peculiar construction and terminating in George Street on the west side of the castle: in March, 1882, a miscreant named Maclean, fired at Her Majesty as she was leaving this station, but happily without effect.

The parish church of St. John the Baptist, situated in the High street and rebuilt in 1822 at an expense of £14,040 17s. 3d., of which £1,005 was subscribed by the King and Royal Family, is an edifice in a nondescript style of modern Gothic, 90 feet in length by 60 wide, with later additions at the east end in much better style, and consists of apsidal chancel, nave of six bays, aisles and a western embattled tower with pinnacles containing 8 bells, two of which were presented by Lord Masham, cofferer to Queen Anne, in 1707; the rest are said to be Elizabethan: within, the church has a generally fine appearance, although, from being surrounded by galleries on three sides, the effect is somewhat heavy: the chancel is decorated with mosaics by Salviati, representing angels and objects symbolical of the Crucifixion: the windows of the apse are stained, that in the centre being a memorial to the late Mr. Ellison: on the south side is a kind of chapel, forming a royal pew attached to Frogmore House, and occasionally occupied by the Princess Christian; it has a separate entrance from the churchyard and is chiefly remarkable for its fine carved screen of oak, the work of Grinling Gibbons, formerly in St. George's chapel; the chairs in the sacrarium were presented to the church by H.R.H. the late Princess Augusta: on the wall of the north-west vestibule are two ancient black-letter inscriptions, almost illegible, one of which, dated 1509, commemorates William Canon, Mayor of Windsor, and Elizabeth his wife; here is also the monument of Sir Thomas Reeve, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, who resided at Windsor and died in 1736; it consists of a sarcophagus and pyramid of veined marble, with bust of himself and his wife, and was erected at the cost of Dr. Head; in the north aisle is a quaint undated monument of the sixteenth century, inscribed to Edward Jobson, Elynor his wife and their family, with kneeling effigies of all, and above a shield of arms; there are also other memorials to Sir Thomas Reeve, of Holyport, ob. 1777; Topham Foot esq. ob. 1712, with a bust by Scheemaker; John, son of Sir William Dugdale, ob. 1570; Dr. William Heberden, ob 1801; and to the families of Braham, Starkey, Hale, Topham and Litton; in the west gallery is a large picture of the Last Supper, discovered in 1707 behind the wainscot of one of the chantries in St. George's chapel and used as the altar-piece there till 1788, when it was presented by George III. to the parish church, together with the organ: the windows of the apse and two others are stained; there are 1,200 sittings, of which about 500 are free. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £350 with residence, to which has been added, by a modern Act of Parliament, two-thirds of the proceeds of one of the suspended canonries of St. George, the remaining third being given to the rectory of Holy Trinity; it is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Richard Gee D.D. of Wadham College, Oxford, canon of St. Alban's, reader in Her Majesty's chapel at Windsor and surrogate.

All Saints, a chapel of ease to the parish church, is a building of brick, in the Early English style, situated in Frances road, and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and a bell-turret; the first stone was laid on the 21st November, 1868, by the Crown Princess of Prussia. The church is served by the clergy of St. John the Baptist.

Holy Trinity is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1843 out of the parish of Clewer. The church of The Holy Trinity, in Trinity place, erected in 1842-3, is a cruciform building of brick, in the Early English style, consisting of apsidal chancel, nave, aisles, transepts and a tower with spire: galleries surround the interior on three sides, on the face of which are inscribed the names of the officers and men of the Guards who fell and died during the Crimean war, 2,120 in all: in 1881 handsome carved oak choir stalls were erected at the cost of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, to the memory of his nephew, who was drowned at Windsor weir: in 1882 a stained window was inserted in the chancel by public subscription to commemorate the deliverance of Her Majesty from assassination at Windsor, communion rails of carved oak being erected at the same time: the church also contains monuments to the late Sir Thomas Biddulph, Lord Rossmore, Sir Algernon Peyton and Earl Ranfurly; the stained east window was given by the Grenadier Guards, others in the south and west by the Coldstream Guards, the pulpit by the Scots Guards and the font by the non-commissioned officers and privates of the 2nd battalion Grenadier Guards; the reredos was painted by Mrs. Robins, wife of the rector: the church will seat 1,400. The register dates from the year 1843. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £380 with residence, in the gift of the Queen and held since 1873 by the Rev. Arthur Robins M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, chaplain to Her Majesty's Household troops and hon. chaplain in ordinary to the Queen.

St. Saviour, in Bier lane, erected in 1876, is a chapel of ease to Holy Trinity and is a building of brick and stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, eastern porch, and a bell turret at the east end containing 1 bell: the foundation stone was laid Nov. 25th, 1875, by H.R.H. the Princess Christian, Mr. Stephen M. Wyborn of Windsor, being the architect: there are 150 sittings, all free: the services are taken by the clergy of Holy Trinity.

St. Stephens is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in the year 1872, from the parish of Clewer. The church, situated in Vansittart street and Oxford road, was erected in 1872 and consecrated in 1874 and is an edifice of white brick with stone dressings, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, low side aisles and a central crocketed flèche, containing 1 bell: the chancel windows are stained and there is a fine reredos: the church has 530 sittings, all free and unappropriated. The register dates from the year 1874. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £150, in the gift of the trustees of the Community of Sisters of St. John the Baptist and held since 1873 by the Rev. George Davenport Nicholas M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford.

Attached to St. Stephen's church are St. Stephen's College for ladies, a middle-class school and National schools, under the care of the Community of St. John the Baptist, Clewer.

The Wesleyan chapel in Alma road, erected in 1876-7, is a stone building in the style of the fourteenth century and will seat 700 persons. The Congregational chapel, built 1832, is in William street and will seat 800. The Baptist chapel in Victoria street was built 1839 and will hold 450; and there is also a Baptist chapel in Adelaide square, built 1881, to hold 120. The Primitive Methodist chapel is in Victoria cottages and seats 130. The Particular Baptist chapel is in Spital road and the Brethren have chapels in Sheet street and Spital road.

The Catholic chapel of St. Edward in the Alma road is a building of Kentish ragstone, erected at a cost of about £4,000 and consists of nave, aisles and chantry; it will seat about 500.

The Cemetery, situated at Spital, one mile south from the town, is five acres in extent and has a mortuary chapel.

There are charities amounting to £140 13s. yearly for apprenticing; £270 18s. 1d. for education; £3 for a sermon; £2,307 10s. 1d. for almshouses &c.; £129 14s. 6d. for distribution in kind; £189 10s. in money; and £37 18s. 9d. for the general uses of the poor.

The Town Hall is a plain building supported by columns and arches of Portland stone, erected in 1686 from a design by Sir Christopher Wren; the interior columns were added at the request of the Corporation, who thought Wren's floor unsafe, but the architect, relying on his work, arranged that they should not touch the beams, as may be seen on close inspection: on the north side is a statue of Queen Anne, with the legend: "Arte tua sculptor non est imitabilis Annæ; Annæ vis similem sculpere sculpe Deam"; on the south side is the effigy of her consort, Prince George of Denmark, in Roman military habit and wearing a periwig, with the inscription: "Serenissimo Georgio Principi Daniae Heroi Omni Sæculo Venerando.": the hall contains portraits of Queen Elizabeth, after Lucas de Heere, James I. by Miraelt, Charles I. by "Old Stone," Charles II. James II. by Sir Godfrey Kneller, William III. by I. Riley, Mary II. Anne, George III. and Queen Charlotte after Sir J. Reynolds, George IV. by Sir T. Lawrence, Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Consort, presented by Her Majesty; Prince Rupert by D'Agar, Theodore Randue, Archbishop Laud, Charles Earl of Nottingham by Zucchero and William Pitt by Gainsborough; together with a marble bust of Charles Knight, the publisher, a native of Windsor, by the late Joseph Durham A.R.A.: the area beneath the building forms a Corn Exchange, and a corn market is held on Saturdays; adjoining is a market place for meat, poultry and butter, markets being held every Wednesday and Saturday.

Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday for cattle, on the 5th July for cattle and wool, and on October 24.

The Theatre Royal, in Thames street, was built in 1815, at a cost of nearly £6,000 and will hold 500 persons.

The Masonic Hall in St. Albans' street is the work of Sir Christopher Wren and the freehold property of the Windsor Castle Lodge, No. 771; the Etonian Lodge, No. 209 and the Windsor Castle Chapter of the Royal Arch also hold their meetings here.

The Eton and Windsor Royal Humane Society, established in 1835, has its headquarters at the King's Arms, Eton, and consists of about 40 working members and 100 honorary, subscribing 6s. per annum. During the Eton College vacation a waterman is specially stationed at Cuckoo Weir bathing place.

The Windsor Volunteer Fire Brigade consists of a captain, foreman, engineer, sub. and honorary officers and 20 pioneers; the headquarters are in Bachelors' Acre, where a steam fire engine is kept; a manual engine being housed at the Police Station, Sheet street and a fire escape stationed in St. Albans' street.

The Windsor and Eton Angling Preservation Association was formed for the preservation and improvement of the fishery from the City Stone, Staines, to Monkey Island.

The Royal Tapestry manufactory in Peascod street was established about 1872 by Mr. Henry, under the auspices of T.R.H Prince Leopold, Princess Helena and Princess Louise; it now employs 100 hands, mostly French and is rapidly developing a distinctly English style.

An Amateur Regatta for Windsor and Eton is held annually, when challenge and presentation prizes are offered for competition.

Race meetings are held at different periods of the year; the course, situated on Ray's Island, above Clewer, about a mile from the town, is on a flat, with a straight run of 6 furlongs.

The principal hotels are the "Castle" and "White Hart."

On account of its Royal Castle, Windsor is an important military station, one regiment of the Household cavalry and one battalion of the Guards being stationed here. In Victoria street are Infantry Barracks for 1,000 men, which were considerably enlarged in 1867-8. The Cavalry Barracks, in Spital road, will hold an equal number.

Bachelors' Acre, on the west side of High street, is, by prescription and award, an old public recreation ground, in which stands an obelisk, erected in 1810 by the bachelors of Windsor, in memory of George III.: an annual revel and extraordinary rejoicings were formerly held upon this green.

The Naval Knights of Windsor, seven in number, occupy a house in Datchet road, called Travers' College, on the north side of the castle and erected in 1802; this order was founded in 1728, under the will of Mr. Samuel Travers, for the relief of superannuated or disabled lieutenants of the Royal Navy, and retired commanders; the building consists of seven distinct apartments and a dining-room and small library: on the south side of the Lower Castle ward are the residences of the Military Knights, first instituted by King Edward III. and afterwards increased in number by Sir Francis Crane, from a benefaction left in 1631 by Sir Peter le Máire, have their residences on the south side of the Lower ward: there were originally 26 knights, but two more were subsequently added, to make them of like number with the Knights Companions of the Order of the Garter, each of whom had the right of appointing one Alms Knight: in the reign of Elizabeth the number was reduced to 13 and the knights were then nominated by the Queen, and called "Knights of Windsor," and these constitute the present Royal foundation: the five knights on the Lower, or Sir Peter le Maire's, foundation are also now appointed by the reigning Sovereign: the name by which the order is now known was assigned by William IV. and it at present consists of one governor and 12 knights on the Royal and 5 on the Lower foundation.

The Albert Institute, situated in Sheet street and opened by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in January, 1881, is a building of red brick, with stone dressings in the Tudor Gothic style; over the entrance is a fine marble statue of the late Prince Consort, presented by Mrs. Richardson-Gardner: the building contains reading, billiard, ladies' and class-rooms, a library with between 3,000 and 4,000 vols.; a large lecture hall, capable of holding 500 persons and a museum. The government school of art classes are held here.

The Working Men's Institute, in Church lane, contains reading-room, library, bagatelle and class-rooms.

The Windsor Association for Improving the Condition of the Working Classes, was originated by H.R.H. the late Prince Consort and is intended to stimulate and cherish a spirit of industry and self-respect and thus to raise the social condition of the cottagers in and around Windsor: at the annual meetings rewards and prizes are bestowed for neat cottages, well-cultivated gardens, long service, well brought-up families, thrift, and skill in various kinds of handicraft, of which an exhibition is at the same time held; the distribution of allotments and the erection of model dwelling-houses also come within the limit of the society's operations.

The Windsor Royal Dispensary and Infirmary, situated in Victoria street, is a building of white brick, with cement dressings and contains male, female, accident and convalescent wards: the Dispensary was founded in 1818, the infirmary in 1857 and the convalescent ward in 1873; in 1881 a storey was added and other additions made under the superintendence of Mr. S. M. Wyborn, architect, Windsor: there are 30 beds: the total number of in-patients admitted in 1881 was 274 and the number of out and dispensary patients treated in the same year, 3,532: the institution is mainly supported by subscriptions, donations and legacies.

The Lying-In Charity is an institution for the assistance of poor women and distributes alms to the amount of £120 yearly in bread, besides furnishing annuities of £10 each to 14 poor widows; it also expends £37 yearly in medical relief.

The Windsor Almshouses, in Sheet street, founded in 1503 by I. Tomson and W. Huntred, chaplains and I. Combe, gent. are for 32 persons, each of whom receives £4 per year, with coal and bread; the endowment of these almshouses, first bestowed in 1510 by Thomas Brotherton and increased by Richard Gallis, has recently been augmented by bequests from Alderman Hunt and the late Mr. James Griffin.

Chariott's Almshouses are for 8 persons, who receive 5s. per week.

WINDSOR CASTLE, occupying a lofty and isolated eminence of chalk, on the right bank of the river Thames, was begun by William the Norman and enlarged by Henry I. who held here, in 1122, his marriage feast with Adelais, of Louvaine. In 1170 Henry II. held a parliament here, at which time he also entertained William, King of Scotland and his brother David. King John retired here during his dispute with the barons and went hence to Runnymede, 15th June, 1215, to sign the Great Charter: in the time of his son, Henry III.

it was frequently attacked by the contending parties. The next succeeding kings lived at Windsor, where several of their children were born, including Edward III. hence known as Edward of Windsor; this monarch re-built the greater part of the Castle, the famous William of Wykeham, then one of the king's chaplains, acting as architect; this great undertaking was carried out from 1356 to 1373 and included the Palace, St. George's Hall, the east and south sides of the Upper Ward, the Round tower, St. George's chapel, the canon's houses, and the whole circumference of the walls, with the towers and gates. The existing chapel was, however, built by Edward IV. and the nave, roof and choir added by Henry VII. and Henry VIII. Most of the succeeding monarchs contributed in some way to the building, but George IV. was its chief restorer, and devoted nearly a million to the beautifying of this the most magnificent building of the kind in Europe, the whole of the work being effected from the designs and under the superintendence of James Wyatt, the king's surveyor-general. The Castle comprises two quadrangles or Upper and Lower wards, between which is the Round tower or keep, raised on an artificial mound, surrounded by a moat, and formerly separated from the Lower ward by a moat with a drawbridge, and affording from its summit a view extending into twelve shires, the height from the level of the Little park to the top of the flagpole being 295 feet; in 1868 a bell weighing 17 cwt. taken at the siege of Sebastopol, was hung in the keep. The Upper court or ward contains, on the north side, the state apartments, the Queen's private chapel, the hall of St. George and the library; it includes with these King John's tower, George IV.'s tower, the Cornwall and Brunswick towers and the Prince of Wales's tower; on the east side are the Queen's private apartments; on the south those reserved for visitors and comprising the Victoria tower, the York and Lancaster towers, flanking George IV.'s gateway and King Edward III.'s tower: these three sides are almost completely surrounded by a most noble terrace, faced on all sides by a rampart of solid freestone and commanding, northwards, a prospect, the beauty and extent of which is scarcely to be excelled; below the north terrace, 1,870 feet in length, are "the slopes," thickly planted with every variety of tree and shrub, intermingled with grottoes, fishponds and cascades and intersected by rustic bridges and sequestered walks, and at the foot of the east terrace, the Queen's private gardens, adorned with statues of bronze and marble, vases and a fountain and enclosed by a pentagonal terrace, beneath part of which is an extensive orangery and a photographic studio. Within the court, on the north side, is the state entrance, at the south-east angle the Sovereign's entrance and opposite to it that for equerries; at the west end is an equestrian statue in copper, by Slada, of Charles II.; at the extreme south-west corner is St. George's gate, leading to Castle Hill, while on the opposite side of the Round tower the Norman gate conducts to the Lower ward, the outline of whose buildings forms a slightly obtuse angle with those already described, the apex being towards the north; this ward contains the chapel of St. George, placed almost centrally, and immediately adjoining it, on the east, the Albert chapel, with the deanery and cloisters; north of these and of the chapel are the residences of the canons, and west of the chapel the Horseshoe cloisters, with houses appropriated to the organist and the minor canons; on the south side of the chapel is a spacious open court, in part laid down with turf, of which the southern boundary is constituted by the dwellings of the military knights, while the Guard house, erected originally by Sir Francis Crane, shuts it in on the west; the whole is surrounded, like the Upper ward, by a wall and a series of towers, the chief of which are Henry III.'s tower, the Salisbury and Garter towers and Julius Cæsar's or the Curfew tower; the last named was frequently used, especially during the reign of Edward III. as a prison, and many names of persons confined there are visible upon its walls; the upper portion or belfry was rebuilt under the direction of the late Prince Consort and it now contains a clock with chimes and a peal of 8 bells. The Round tower or Keep, formerly called "La Rose" and built by Edward III. has been the prison house of John, King of France, David and James I., Kings of Scotland, the Earls of Surrey, Lauderdale and Lindsay and the Marshal de Belleisle; at its foot is a small garden, in summer time ablaze with flowers, where James I. of Scotland first saw the Lady Jane Beaufort, afterwards his queen; the tower was raised 39 feet and its flag turret added by George IV. Access is obtained to the State apartments by the Norman tower and thence through King John's tower; the entrance hall is a portion of the cloisters as erected by Edward IV. The Audience chamber has a ceiling with an allegorical painting by Verrio, in which Catherine of Braganza, queen of Charles I., is represented as Britannia, on a car drawn by swans; magnificent Gobelins tapestry, with subjects from the story of Esther, decorates the walls, and pictures by Honthorst and Janet. The old ball room, now called the Vandyck room, is entirely hung with portraits by that master, including the famous picture of Charles I. and his family and the scarcely less remarkable portrait in which the king's face is seen from three points of view; here are also some magnificent cabinets, including one by Gouthier, of delicately worked ormolu, of the best period of Louis XVI., valued at £10,000. The Queen's State Drawing room or Zucarelli room contains some of that master's finest landscapes. The State Ante-room has a painted ceiling by Verrio, representing a banquet of the Gods, and exquisite carvings of fish, game, flowers and fruit, by Grinling Gibbons, this apartment having been, in Charles II.'s time, the king's public dining room. The Waterloo chamber was constructed during the reign of William IV. and its peculiarity of design, resembling the cabin of a ship, is said to have been suggested by that king: it is 98 feet long, 45 feet high, and 47 broad and contains portraits of the sovereigns, statesmen and generals connected with the great European war terminated by the battle of Waterloo in 1815; this fine apartment forms one of a splendid series including the Throne room, St. George's hall and the Grand Reception room: the latter is 90 feet long, 34 broad and 33 high, splendidly decorated in the style of Louis XIV. and hung with Gobelins tapestry of 1744-90, depicting scenes from the history of Jason and the Golden Fleece. St. George's Hall is 230 feet long, 34 broad and 34 high; the north wall is hung with portraits of the kings from James I. to George IV. and the ceiling and walls are studded with the armorial bearings of the knights of the Order of the Garter from its first institution; at the east end is a music gallery with organ and beneath a chair of state: the banners and arms of the original companionship of the Knights of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, as founded by King Edward III. in 1344, consisting of 26 banners, viz. those of Edward III., the Black Prince and the 24 original knights, have been hung along the top of each wall, just beneath the richly-decorated ceiling, and greatly add to the beauty of the interior of this magnificent apartment. Upon the oak panels in the recessed windows overlooking the grand quadrangle of the Castle, the names of the original knights have been inscribed in the following order:—1. Edward III.; 2. Edward Prince of Wales; 3. Henry, Duke of Lancaster; 4. Thomas, Earl of Warwick; 5. Sir Piers Capitow de la Bouche; 6. Ralph, Earl of Stafford; 7. William, Earl of Salisbury; 8. Roger, Earl of March; 9. Sir John Lisle; 10. Sir Bartholomew Burghersh; 11. Sir John Beauchamp; 12. Sir John Mohun; 13. Sir Hugh Courtenay; 14. Sir Thomas Holland; 15. Sir John Grey; 16. Sir Richard Fitz Simon; 17. Sir Miles Stapleton; 18. Sir Thomas Wale; 19. Sir Hugh Wrottesley; 20. Sir Neele Loringe; 21. Sir John Chandos; 22. Sir James Audeley; 23. Sir Otto Holland; 24. Sir Henry Eam. The prelate of the Most Noble Order of the Garter is the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Oxford being the Chancellor and the Dean of Windsor, registrar. The king's closet and the Queen's closet, to which the public are sometimes admitted, contain fine pictures by the old masters, and the Council chamber, Rubens room and Throne room are occasionally shown. The private apartments are separated from the State apartments by the grand corridor, in which is a group in Carrara marble, by Mr. Theed, representing Her Majesty and the Prince Consort in the Saxon costume of the ninth century; this corridor is of immense length, extending round two sides of the Castle for 520 feet, and is crowded with magnificent cabinets and old Oriental work, all of rare workmanship, and containing an unequalled collection of Chelsea, Oriental and Sévres china; choice examples of Canaletto, Romney, Reynolds, and Gainsborough line the walls, and other spaces are filled with faultless bronzes and superb Oriental vases; in the north corridor, fitted up as an armoury, is the wonderful tiger's head of solid gold, studded with gems, taken from Tippoo Sahib at the storming of Seringapatam and said to be worth £30,000; into the main corridor open the White Drawing room, decorated in the style of Louis XVI., and the Green Drawing room, lined with green satin and containing the famous service of Sévres made for Louis XVI.; other grand pieces are distributed about the room, the ceramic contents of which are estimated at £200,000; the Royal Dining room is a plain apartment containing a wine cooler of silver-gilt, several feet long and designed by Flaxman. The Rubens room has fine specimens of the great Flemish master. The Throne room is used for installations of Knights of the Garter and is decorated with cognisances of that order; the throne of carved ivory was in the Exhibition of 1851. In the Oak room is a wonderful portrait of Her Majesty, by the Baron Von Angeli. The Royal Mews, the entrance to which is on the south side of Castle Hill, was built by Her Majesty between 1839 and 1842; the stables and other buildings cover a space of about four acres, with a stud of about 90 horses, and there is a riding school 165 feet long and 51 feet wide.

St. George's collegiate chapel, begun by Edward IV. and completed by Henry VIII., is a fine example of the Perpendicular style and consists of choir, with aisles, nave, aisles and various side chapels; the nave is of seven bays and has a vaulted roof richly traceried and adorned with the arms of garter knights and the "rose en soleil," the favourite device of Edward IV.; all the windows are filled with stained glass, the great west window being filled with glass collected from various parts of the chapel by Canon Lockman; at the west end of the south aisle is the Beaufort chapel, containing an altar tomb, with effigy of the founder, Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester, ob. 1526, and his lady; and a splendid monument to Henry first Duke of Beaufort, ob. 1699; in the same chapel lies Henry Marquis of Worcester, *ob.*1646. Immediately opposite this chapel and between the first two western piers, is the elaborate altar tomb, with recumbent effigy, erected by Her Majesty to the late Duke of Kent, designed by the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. and executed by Boehm. At the north-west angle is the Urswick chapel, so named from Dr. Christopher Urswick, dean of Windsor, who died in 1521 and is here buried; in this chapel is the well-known and striking cenotaph of the Princess Charlotte, by Wyatt, and near it, the statue monument by Boehm, erected by the Queen, to the late King of the Belgians; and more recently a memorial has been placed on the wall of the north aisle to George V. late King of Hanover: in the south aisle lies buried Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, ob. 1545: on either side of the entrance to the choir, and forming shallow semi-octagonal transepts, are the Bray and Rutland chapels; the former was founded by Sir Reginald Bray, who died in 1502 and was interred here; the chapel is separated from the aisle by a beautiful screen bearing his arms and crest and enclosing in particular the cenotaph erected by Her Majesty to the late Prince Imperial of France; this consists of a panelled altar tomb supporting a recumbent figure of the Prince in the uniform he wore in Africa, his hands clasping his sword, which is laid perpendicularly on his breast, his head resting on a cushion powdered with bees, and his feet upon a helmet, the whole executed in the purest white marble by Mr. J. E. Boehm; here also are memorials to Giles Thompson, Bishop of Gloucester, ob. 1612; Ralph Brideoake, Bishop of Chichester, ob. 1678; Sir Richard Wortley, ob. 1603; John Douglas D.D. Bishop of Salisbury, 1807; Daniel Waterland, D.D. 1740 and others. The Rutland chapel was founded by Sir Thomas Sellynger (St. Leger) for the interment of his wife Anne, Duchess of Exeter, sister of Edward IV. who died in 1475 and on the north wall is a plate of gilt copper, engraved with figures of the founder and his wife in heraldic dresses; here also are brasses to Robert Honywode LL.D. canon of Windsor, ob. 1522, and to John Robyns S.T.P. also a canon, ob. 1558, with 16 verses and various other memorials. The choir, also of seven bays, is a magnificent architectural effort the superb effect of which is rendered still more rich and imposing by the banners, helmets and insignia suspended over the stalls of the Knights of the Garter, the backs of which are lined with gilt plates recording the style and titles of past and present knights; on the pedestals of the knight's stalls the life of our Saviour is represented in carved work, and on those of the Royal Family the deeds of St. George. The Sovereign's stall, placed immediately on the right of the entrance, glows with purple and gold. On the north side of the choir, near the altar, are carvings illustrating the attempt of Margaret Nicholson to assassinate George III., the thanksgiving by that king at St. Paul's in 1789, and the charity school of Queen Charlotte. The windows on either side are filled with the blazonry of the Sovereign and Knights Companions of the Garter: the east window, replacing one containing a representation, by Sir Benjamin West, of "The Resurrection," was presented in 1863, by the Dean and Canons, as a memorial to the late Prince Consort; beneath it is a beautifully sculptured reredos of alabaster, representing "The Ascension." In the centre of the choir is the royal vault, where repose the remains of Henry VIII. Queen Jane Seymour, Charles I. and an infant daughter of Queen Anne; on the north side of the altar are three royal closets, one of which was built by Henry VIII. for Queen Anne Boleyn; below are the iron gates said to have been wrought by Quentin Matsys, the painter-blacksmith, of Antwerp, for the tomb of Edward IV. of which only a black marble slab, inscribed "King Edward IV. and his Queen, Elizabeth Widville," now remains, his armour and a surcoat of crimson velvet embroidered with rubies, pearls and gold, having disappeared during the Civil war. North-west of the choir is the Hastings chapel, built by Elizabeth, wife of William, Lord Hastings, beheaded in 1483 and here buried: it is dedicated to St. Stephen, whose history is depicted in four compartments, on the south side; near it is a monumental statue of Field Marshal William, Earl Harcourt G.C.B. ob. 1830. The windows in the north aisle commemorate Edward IV. and his Queen, the Rutland (Manners) family and the Hanoverian sovereigns of the Garter and include the tombs of the Hon. Fred Keppel D.D. Bishop of Exeter, ob. 1778; Dr. Samuel Pratt, Dean of Rochester, ob. 1723 and others. At the east end of the south aisle is the Lincoln chapel, containing the monument with effigies of Edward, Earl of Lincoln, Lord High Admiral, ob. 1584. Lower down is a floor stone inscribed to George, Duke of Bedford and his wife; a chapel built in 1522 by John Oxenbridge, Canon of Windsor, and still more to the west, a chapel built by Dr. Oliver King, Bishop of Bath and Wells ob. 1492, and known as the Aldworth chapel, from its containing memorials to that family, for many years lessees of Frogmore; Bishop King is buried here, as well as Bruno Ryves, Dean of Windsor, ob. 1677, and Francis Junius, the critic, ob. 1678. At the west end of the south choir aisle, on the north side, is a table monument of marble, with four bas-reliefs in panels, erected by the Queen in 1859, to the late Duchess of Gloucester, her aunt. In the retro-choir are memorials to Theodore Randue esq. ob. 1724, Sir Jeffrey Wyatville (formerly Wyatt) the architect of Windsor Castle under George IV., and to Major General Brudenell. Of the tomb of Henry VI. nothing remains but his arms upon an arch. The Chapter house, in which is preserved the sword of Edward III. is placed at the north-east angle of the north choir aisle, where also a door communicates with the Dean's cloisters, which contain a number of mural tablets and inscribed flagstones. Opening from the cloisters a covered way, passing the east end of St. George's chapel, leads to the Albert chapel, originally built by Henry VII. as a burial place for himself but abandoned in favour of Westminster Abbey; Cardinal Wolsey afterwards obtained a grant of it from Henry VIII. and began the erection of a magnificent tomb therein for his own interment; this costly structure was demolished in the Civil War April 6, 1646, and its imagery of gilt copper sold for £600, nothing then remained but the sarcophagus of black marble which in 1805 was transferred to St Paul's and placed above the tomb of Lord Nelson in the crypt. On the accession of James II. Verrio, the famous Neapolitan artist, was employed to decorate the ceiling with allegorical paintings, and the building was fitted up for the performance of Catholic rites; in 1742 it was used as a school-house and was subsequently converted by King George III. in 1810, into a tomb house for himself and his descendants, for which purpose an excavation was made in the chalk rock beneath the chapel to the depth of 15 feet, the length and breadth being 70 feet and 28 feet respectively, corresponding with the dimensions of the building; the receptacles for bodies on the sides of the tomb are formed by massive octagonal columns of Bath stone, supporting four ranges of stone shelves, admitting on each side 32 bodies; at the east end are five niches and in the centre, twelve low stone tables are placed to receive the remains of Sovereigns: the sepulchre will thus contain 81 bodies; from the columns a vaulted stone roof supports the floor above; the entrance to this solemn resting place is in front of the altar steps in St George's chapel. In 1873 Her Majesty personally inspected the chamber by means of a narrow flight of steps constructed at the back of the altar: among the royal personages here interred are George III. George IV. William IV. Queen Charlotte and Adelaide, the Dukes of York and Kent, the Princesses Amelia, Charlotte and Augusta, the Duchess of Brunswick and several of the royal children who died in infancy. Shortly after the death of the Prince Consort Her Majesty determined to restore the chapel as a memorial to her husband, and the edifice in its completed form now presents one of the most splendid interiors of any ecclesiastical building in the world; the entire vaulted roof is covered with subjects worked in Venetian enamel mosaics, by Dr. Salviati, the nave having angels bearing shields and heraldic devices, and the chancel other shields, with symbols of the Passion; the blank window occupying the entire west end, over the entrance door, is similarly treated, each space between the mullions being filled with a full-length figure of some illustrious person connected with St. George's chapel: the stained windows round the chapel, thirteen in number, represent on the north and south sides, with their heraldic bearings, the ancestors of the Prince Consort from Witekind the Great, A.D. 803; the five windows in the chancel illustrate various subjects from Holy Writ; the wall under the windows is entirely inlaid with marble work, consisting of a series of scriptural subjects, those in the nave being chosen from the Old Testament, while those in the chancel represent various incidents of Our Lord's Passion; these magnificent pictures are produced by a new process of etching on marble and are the work of the late Baron Henry de Triqueti, who died in 1874; above each picture is placed a bas-relief in white marble of a member of the Royal Family, sculptured by the late Miss Susan Durant, who died in 1873, and below runs a wall-bench of dark green marble, beneath which extend a series of bronze grilles bearing royal monograms and badges; the marble flooring, an incomparable work of its kind, is the work of Messrs. Poole & Sons and includes numerous varieties of richly-tinted marbles, arranged in diamonds and circles. In the centre of the chapel is the cenotaph, consisting of an altar tomb of marble, exquisitely sculptured by the late Baron Triqueti, supporting a full-sized recumbent figure of the Prince Consort, in white marble, clad in armour covered with the mantle of the Garter and wearing the collar and George; the head of the Prince rests upon a pillow supported by angels, and at his feet lies his favourite hound, Eos, while he himself, in dying, sheaths his failing sword; statuettes of the Queen, with other figures, surround the sides of the tomb, on the upper margin of which is the inscription following: "Albert, the Prince Consort, born August 26th, 1819; died December 14th, 1861. Buried in the Royal Mausoleum at Frogmore. I have fought the good fight; I have finished my course." The reredos is a magnificent work designed by the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. and comprises a base of richly-coloured marbles supporting three canopied panels, containing bas-reliefs in Sicilian marble, by Baron Triqueti and surmounted by a cross. The communion table is formed of a single slab of Levanto marble. At the western end of St. George's chapel is the grand entrance, flanked by octagonal turrets rising above the roof; a broad double flight of steps descends to the area in its front, which is enclosed by the Horseshoe cloisters and the houses of the minor canons; these buildings, erected temp. Henry VIII. are picturesquely constructed of brick and timber and are arranged in the form of a fetlock, the favourite badge of Edward IV. On the north side of the grand entrance, in a little grass plot, is buried Prince Alamayu, son of Theodore, King of Abyssinia, to whose memory an inscribed brass has been placed by Her Majesty within the chapel; over the place of his interment rises a tall cross of stone. The old organ of St. George's chapel is being remodelled and altered from an F to a C instrument; the new arrangement will comprise choir swell, great and solo organs with pneumatic action and four manuals: the pipes and old action are in course of removal from the case in the gallery but some time must necessarily elapse before the instrument will be again ready for use.

There are two parks, the Home or Little Park and the Great Park. The Home Park, adjoining the castle, contains 400 acres, and is about 4 miles in circumference: avenues of stately elms and noble groups of various forest trees adorn its wide expanse, conspicuous among which are a number of magnificent oaks; here stood for six centuries the celebrated Herne's Oak, immortalised by Shakespeare in his "Merry Wives of Windsor," this venerable tree fell on the 31 August, 1863, having reached, it is believed, the great age of 650 years, the remains of the tree were, by Her Majesty's command, converted into various forms for distribution and the site is now marked by a young oak planted by the Queen, September 12, 1863, with a suitable inscription. The Long Walk, a noble avenue of oaks and elms, stretches from the grand entrance to the Castle in an undeviating line for 3 miles, and at the end of the walk is a bronze equestrian statue of George III., by Westmacott, 26 feet in height and raised upon a rocky pedestal of like elevation. The trees were planted in 1680, and there is a carriage drive in the centre with footpaths on each side. Queen Anne's Ride, commencing at the end of King's road and extending to the boundary of the park near Ascot Heath, is also 3 miles in length. In the neighbourhood near Cranbourn Lodge, on the Forest, said to have been a favourite resort of William the Norman, stands the "King's Oak," 26 feet round and hollow; this tree is not visible from the public road, but a remarkably fine and picturesque specimen, called the "grandfather of the forest," can be seen close to the highway leading from Forest Gate to High Standing Hill, on the Winkfield road.

Frogmore, also mentioned by Shakespeare in the "Merry Wives of Windsor," belonged to Queen Charlotte, who purchased it about 1800; the Duchess of Kent died here in 1861, and since then it has been occupied by the Prince of Wales, whose eldest son was born here, and by Prince Christian; the gardens contain about 32 acres, artificially laid out with mock antique ruins, a hermitage and a temple. In the grounds stands the Royal Mausoleum, erected by her Majesty to receive the mortal remains of the late Prince Consort, a magnificent tomb, erected, from the designs and under the superintendence of Mr. Humbert and Professor Grüner, by Messrs. Dines and Co. of Pimlico, at a total cost of upwards of £200,000; the ground plan forms a Greek cross, from the centre of which rises a dome 70 feet in height; the arms of the cross, extending to the same distance, form transepts, with aisles surrounding the central portion and communicating with each transept; the whole floor is supported by massive vaults of brick, in one of which is the foundation stone laid by the Queen; the approach to the building is by a grand flight of granite steps, and a porch carried on monolithic columns of granite; immediately over the door is the inscription:—

"Alberti Principis quod mortale erat
Hoc in sepulchro deponi volvit vidua
Mœrens Victoria Regina A.D. MDCCCLXII
Vale desideratissime!
Hic demum conquiescam tecum
Tecum in Christo consurgam."

Through the porch, gates open into the Eastern transept, conducting to the central chamber, the walls of which are covered with exquisitely designed marble panelling, adorned with bas-reliefs and paintings in fresco; in niches between the transepts are statues of David, Isaiah, Daniel and Solomon; the dome has a blue ground studded with golden stars, and below it is a clerestory pierced by eight three-light windows, all stained; a lamp of gilt bronze hangs in each transept; the whole floor is of polished marble inlaid, and in the centre is placed the sarcophagus of Aberdeen granite, containing the mortal remains of the late Prince, on a plinth of black marble given by the late King of the Belgians; on its summit reposes a full-length effigy in marble of the Prince, by the late Baron Marochetti, and at the angles are kneeling figures of angels in bronze; the side bears a short and simple inscription. On the anniversary of the Prince's death, Dec. 14th, 1861, a memorial service is held here, attended by her Majesty, the Royal Family and servants of the late Prince, after which the clergy, the Royal tradesmen of Windsor, the inhabitants of the Castle, and principal residents are permitted to visit the Mausoleum, near to which is that of the Duchess of Kent (ob. 16 March, 1861), an edifice erected at the express desire of her late Royal Highness, circular in form, with a dome supported on sixteen Ionic columns of Penrhyn granite, 10 feet high, with bronze capitals and bases; the interior is appropriately decorated and lighted by panels of stained glass in the dome; in the centre is a statue, by Theed, of the Duchess, whose remains are deposited in a sarcophagus of polished blue granite, in the vault below.

In a niche below the Mausoleum is a marble bust of H.S.H. Feodora, late Princess Hohenlohe, the Queen's half-sister, by Mr. Theed, erected by her Majesty in 1873; and in front of it a monumental cross, also erected by Her Majesty, in memory of Lady Augusta, wife of Dean Stanley; it is of fine blue Cairngall granite, beautifully enriched on the front and sides with entwined ornaments, after the style of the early Christian crosses in the west of Scotland; and stands upon an unhewn block of granite, the total height being about seven feet. On the stem of the cross in gold letters is inscribed the following:—"To the dear memory of Lady Augusta Stanley, fifth daughter of Thomas Bruce, seventh Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, this cross is erected by Queen Victoria in grateful and affectionate remembrance of her faithful labours for 30 years in the service of the Queen, the Duchess of Kent, and the Royal Family. Born, April 3, 1822. Died, March 1, 1876."

Adelaide Cottage, in the Home Park, at the end of the slopes, is a secluded dwelling in the midst of a pretty garden, and was a favourite resort of the late Queen Adelaide; in the enclosure attached to the cottage is "Luther's Beech," a tree raised from the beech near Altenstein, in the Duchy of Saxe Meiningen, under which Luther was arrested in 1521; it was planted by Queen Adelaide near the house in Bushey Park, and by her wish transplanted hither. In the Home Park are also Frogmore Cottage; the Royal dairy, built in 1852, from a design by the late Prince Consort, adjoining which is the Dairy Farm; the Queen's Aviary, a semi-Gothic building, containing a rare and valuable collection of fowls; the Kennels, built by Her Majesty in 1840; Shaw Farm, the model farm of the late Prince Consort, and the Royal Gardens, with a range of 920 feet of glass-houses. The Great Park, which is open to the public, is about 14 miles in circumference, and contains about 1,800 acres; it abounds in delightful walks, affording rich glimpses of forest scenery, and is well stocked with herds of red and fallow deer, white harts and Cashmere goats &c. Oaks and beeches are very numerous, some specimens of which are known to be several centuries old. In the Great Park are Cumberland Lodge, now the residence of T.R.H. the Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, and once occupied by William, Duke of Cumberland, who won the battle of Culloden, and created Virginia Water; the Royal Lodge of George IV. inhabited by Lt.-Col. G. G. Gordon, equerry to Prince Christian; Holly Grove, enclosed from the waste in 1773, the residence of Col. the Hon. George Augustus F. Liddell, Deputy-Ranger; Sand Pit lodge; All Saints' Chapel Royal, for the use of residents in the Park; the Royal Vinery and the Norfolk Farm.

VIRGINIA WATER, formed by William, Duke of Cumberland, is a large artificial lake upwards of a mile and a half long, and of varying width, 5½ miles from Windsor, at the extreme south of the Great Park, and is partly in the parish of Egham, county of Surrey; it extends over what was once a wild, swampy district, whose waters drained into a basin of considerable dimensions and then flowed into the Thames at Chertsey, and its banks, laid out by George IV. with all the resources of the landscape gardener's art, are charmingly diversified; near the lake, in a beautifully secluded corner of the park, are several marble columns and plinths of a Corinthian temple, and in the neighbourhood are some fir trees of great height; access to the lake and park from the Surrey side is obtained through the grounds of the Wheatsheaf Hotel; about 1½ miles distant is the Virginia Water station of the London and South Western railway.

A large portion of the Castle is always open to visitors, and the state rooms can be seen in the absence of Her Majesty, on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, by tickets, to be obtained only at the Lord Chamberlain's office in the Castle yard; the Albert chapel is open every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday without tickets and St. George's chapel, every day except Wednesday, from 12.30 to 4.

About half-past nine o'clock on the night of Saturday the 19th of March 1853, a fire broke out in the Prince of Wales's Tower at the north-east angle of the Castle, which threatened serious consequences and was not extinguished until half-past four o'clock the next morning: the Queen and Royal Family had arrived at the Castle for their Easter sojourn only a few hours previously to the breaking out of the fire, which was confined to the tower where it originated, the damage being estimated at £6,000.

The Queen causes to be distributed on New Year's day, in the Riding School of the Royal Mews, quantities of beef and coals, tickets for which are dispensed by the aid of the local clergy, to the poor of the parishes of Windsor and Clewer.

Windsor offers many attractions to the excursionist, who may easily reach by water the beautiful scenery of Maidenhead and Cookham; and inland, Ascot, Sunninghill, Winkfield, Warfield and Binfield. Freshwater fish of all kinds are abundant and very fine trout are taken every season in the weir at the back of the New Inn, Eton.

Her Majesty is lady of the manor.

The population in 1881 was:—

Clewer parish (part of)	4,628
New Windsor parish (part of)	7,645
Municipal limits (including 916 military)	12,273
Clewer (part of)	3,341
Eton (part of), Bucks	3,466
Total Parliamentary limits	19,080

The area is 3,237 acres; the rateable value of New Windsor is £47,350.

The Castle was formerly deemed extra-parochial, but the Lower ward is now assessed with New Windsor; the remainder of the Castle, being in immediate occupation of the Crown, is not rateable, and is without the municipal limits. Her Majesty and Court were present when the census of 1881 was taken, the number who slept in that portion of the Castle inhabited by Her Majesty and the Royal Household being upwards of 300.

DEDWORTH, a hamlet of New Windsor, will be found under Clewer.

OLD WINDSOR is a village and parish adjoining New Windsor, on the banks of the Thames, in the hundred of Ripplesmere, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 2 miles from the Great Western railway at Windsor, 2½ from Egham and 2 west from Datchet. The church of St. Peter is a flint structure in the Early English style; it was thoroughly restored in 1864: it has chancel, nave, north chapel, a tower and spire and 5 bells, porch, an organ, several stained windows and a brass to the memory of John Michell, a great benefactor to Queen's College, Oxford, and a monument to Colonel Powney, the companion and friend of Charles II. The register dates from the year 1754. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £350, with residence and four acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1876 by the Rev. Thomas Eustace Harwood M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. St. Luke's licensed mission room, half a mile distant from the church, is a small red brick building. There is also a chapel situated in Windsor Park, called the Royal chapel, All Saints, erected by Her Majesty for the inhabitants residing in the Park, where divine service is performed every Sunday under the care of the chaplain, the Rev. Edward Luxmoore Tuson B.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. Here is a National and Infant school for both sexes, endowed by Mrs. Hamersly with £89 and by Lady Onslow with £22 a year. In Windsor Park, near the Royal chapel, are the Royal schools, founded in 1845 and supported by Her Majesty for the children of her servants; the school contains at present about 120 boys and girls, who are partly clothed and boarded; the charities are of about £60 yearly value for distribution. The workhouse for the Windsor union is in this parish; it is a brick building, built in 1835 on ground given by the Crown, after designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. in the Elizabethan style, and will hold 300 inmates; full particulars of the union are given under Windsor. Beaumont College, formerly the property of the late Lord Ashbrook, once occupied by Warren Hastings, is now occupied as a Catholic college with a chapel. Moat Farm, said to have been the hunting seat of the Saxon kings and also the place where Earl Godwin died; Cumberland Lodge, within Windsor Park, is a handsome red brick building, once the seat of William Duke of Cumberland, and is now the residence of their Royal Highnesses Prince and Princess Christian, of Schleswig-Holstein; the front facing the south has a battlemented roof with small turrets at the angles; adjacent is the Royal Lodge, once the summer residence of George IV. and now occupied by Lieut.-Col. George Grant Gordon; Holly Grove is the residence of Col. the Hon. George Augustus Liddell, deputy-ranger of Windsor park; Woodside, of Lieut.-Col. Robert William Webb Follett; Ouseley Lodge, of Rev. William Henry Rooper M.A.; the Dell, of Baron John Henry William Schröder; Pelling Place, of Lady Bulkeley; and there are several other handsome residences scattered over the parish, such as Burfield, The Grange, The Manor Cottage, The Friary and the Priory. Her Majesty the Queen is lady of the manor. The chief landowners are Her Majesty and Queen's College, Oxford, and there are many other smaller owners. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and peas. The acreage is 5,457, which includes a great portion of Windsor Park; rateable value, £6,313; the population of the parish in 1871 was 2,112, and in 1881, 2,523, of which about 1,000 are in Sunningdale ecclesiastical parish, which see.

Parish Clerk, George Allen.

WINKFIELD is one of the largest parishes in the county, consisting of CRANBOURNE, WINKFIELD ROW and ASCOT SIDE, being more than 8 miles across; it abounds with gentlemen's seats, in consequence of the beauty of its scenery and its vicinity to Windsor, from the church of which it is distant 6 miles south-west; it is in the union of Easthampstead, hundred of Ripplesmere, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Maidenhead, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a plain stone building, faced with flint, in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave and square western tower: the nave is divided in the centre by solid oak pillars, placed there in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, on one of which appears the date with a crown and her initials: it contains an organ and has a handsome carved stone reredos, representing the Lord's Supper: several of the windows are stained: the tower contains a peal of 6 bells: the principal monuments belong to the Metcalfe family, Blane family, the first lady Ellenborough and Admiral Sir Henry King; there is also a brass representing one of the Montagues in the act of distributing bread. The register dates from the year 1577. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, and held since 1881 by the Rev. John Daubeny M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. There is an endowment by the Earl of Ranelagh of £380 yearly, for which a scheme was formed in 1878 for its distribution between the parish of Winkfield and the ecclesiastical parishes of Cranbourne, Ascot Heath and Bracknell to provide school accommodation for the Winkfield said parishes, and £30, a portion of which is applied for apprentices fees, and Lock and Poynter's charity for apprenticing, amounting to £60 yearly; Pilcher's charity of £50 yearly, bequeathed in 1858, is for six poor widows. The fuel allotment has been sold and the proceeds invested, which produce £140 yearly. H. Smith's charity of £37 yearly is for clothing, and Winder's of £20 for bread. Ascot Place, the seat of Charles Cotton Ferard esq. J.P. is a noble mansion situated in a well-wooded park having tastefully laid-out pleasure grounds and a fine sheet of water. New Lodge, the seat of Lt.-Col. Victor William Bates Van de Weyer, is a handsome Tudor stone mansion. Foliejohn Park, the seat of Thomas Law Blane esq. is situated on an eminence in an undulating park, extending over an area of 550 acres. Courts leet are held at the White Hart. The principal landowners are The Crown, Charles Cotton Ferard esq. (who is lord of the manor), Thomas Law Blane esq. and Lt.-Col. Victor William Bates Van de Weyer J.P. The soil is mixed, strong clay, loam and gravel, with a large portion of heath; subsoil clay, gravel, flint and sand. The chief crops are wheat, oats and peas. The area is 8,982 acres; rateable value, £18,286; the population in 1871 was 3,291, and in 1881, 4,195, of which 969 are attached to the mother church, the remainder being in the ecclesiastical parishes of Ascot Heath, Bracknell, Braywood, Cranbourne and Sunninghill.

WINKFIELD ROW, a pleasant hamlet of Winkfield, is situated 1½ miles south from Winkfield church, and 2 north from Ascot Heath railway station. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here.

ASCOT SIDE is ecclesiastically attached to Ascot, which see.

LITTLE WITTENHAM is a village and parish on the banks of the Thames, 4¾ miles north-west from Wallingford and 6 south-east from Abingdon, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Wallingford, rural deanery of Wallingford, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford; on the south-east is Sinodun Hill, celebrated for its perfect encampment. The church of St. Peter is in the Early English style and was rebuilt in 1863 with the exception of the tower: it has chancel and nave and contains a monument to William Dunche esq. his lady and family. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of W. E. Hilliard esq. of Cowley House, Uxbridge, and held since 1861 by the Rev. John Ashby Stafford Hilliard B.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. The interest of £30, which is in the hands of the Charity Commissioners, is distributed to the poor yearly. George Charles Cherry esq. of Denford House, Hungerford, is lord of the manor and chief landower. The soil is clay and chalk; subsoil clay and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The parish contains 870 acres, including about 41 acres of glebe land; rateable value, £1,429; the population in 1881 was 112.

LONG WITTENHAM is a village and parish 4 miles south-east from Abingdon, 5 north-west from Wallingford and 2½ south-east from Culham railway station, in the hundred of Ock, union and county court district of Wallingford, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, situated on the river Isis. The church of St. Mary, which is of Norman, Early English, Decorated, Late Perpendicular and Elizabethan styles, was restored in 1850 and the chancel rebuilt by Exeter College, the impropriators of the great tithes: the tower is 75 feet high; in the chancel several members of the Prowse family are interred. The register dates from the year 1561 to 1629; from this date to 1726 the register books are missing, said to have been destroyed by accident. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of Exeter College, Oxford, and held since 1830 by the Rev. James Charles Clutterbuck M.A. formerly fellow of that college. The glebe is 94 acres. There is a charity (of £52 10s. a year), the rent of 25 acres of land, which is given in coals to the poor. The Manor House is occupied by William Goddard esq. The chief portion of the land is copyhold or held on lease under the President and fellows of St. John's College, Oxford, who are lords of the manor and chief landowners. The soil in the southern part of the parish is the upper green sand, the remainder gault clay covered with drift gravel, nearly all arable, bearing chiefly wheat, barley and roots. The area is 2,280 acres; rateable value, £3,701; the population in 1881 was 562.

WOKINGHAM is a market and union town, parish and polling place for the county, in Reading county court district, rural deanery of Sonning, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, distant 7 miles south-east from Reading, 14 south-west from Windsor, 11 south-west from Maidenhead and 32 from London. A portion of this parish was included in Wiltshire, but by the Acts 2 & 3 William IV. cap. 64 and 7 & 8 Vict. cap 61 it was annexed to Berkshire. The Staines and Wokingham railway, which joins the South Western line at Staines, gives access to London in one hour and a half, and the Reading, Guildford and Reigate branch of the South Eastern line affords easy communication with the coast, and, through Reading, with all the stations on the Great Western railway. The town occupies an elevated and healthy situation within the ancient limits of Windsor Forest, and consists of several irregularly-built streets, meeting in a central spot used as a market place. The government of the town is vested in an alderman and burgesses, who derive their authority from a charter of Queen Elizabeth, granted in 1582, which confirmed and enlarged powers and privileges conferred by earlier charters. Half-yearly sessions for minor offences are held by the corporation. The sanitary arrangements of the town are under a Local Board of 12 members. The parish church of All Saints is an old and handsome stone structure, principally in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts, porch and square embattled western tower, containing 8 bells; it was thoroughly restored by public subscription in the year 1864: there is a flat stone to the memory of Dr. Thomas Godwin, bishop of Bath and Wells, who was a native of this town and died in 1590: the font is very old: there are several stained windows, one in the south aisle, erected by the parishioners to the Rev. Thos. Morres M.A. who was for 53 years rector; the organ was added in 1870. The register dates from the year 1674. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, under an exchange with the Dean of Salisbury, the former rector and patron: the deans, in their character of rectors, were the appropriators of the tithes, which had been leased upon lives from time immemorial and were purchased by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who have since given them as an endowment for the see of Oxford, in lieu of a former money payment; the tithe owners have always paid the incumbent £40 a year and this payment is now made by the Bishop of Oxford; the impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,700 a year; the Rev. Edward Sturges M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and surrogate has been rector since 1873.

St. Paul's is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1863, from All Saints; the church was built by John Walter esq., M.P. and was consecrated July 23, 1864; it is in the Decorated style of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries and consists of chancel, nave and tower surmounted by an elegant spire, with two aisles added by the liberality of Mr. Walter, assisted by £500 from the parish, in 1874: all the windows are stained; the west window represents the Life of St. Paul up to his conversion; the windows in the north and south aisles set forth the chief incidents in the Apostle's subsequent life. The register dates from the year 1864. The living is a rectory and was endowed with £200 a year, contributed in equal portions by Mr. Walter and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and a further annual grant of £50 was made by the latter to meet £50, the funds for which were provided in equal moieties by Mr. Walter and the present rector. A large and commodious rectory house was built by Mr. Walter, who is the patron; the Rev. Joseph Thomas Brown M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, has been rector since 1867. The area is 3,660; the population in 1881 was 1,838.

St. Sebastians is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1871; the church, 2½ miles from the town, was built by subscription in 1864 at a cost of about £800; it is a red brick building with stone facings, consisting of chancel and nave only. The register dates from the year 1864. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 (paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners) with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1882 by the Rev. Arthur Carr M.A. formerly fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. The population in 1881 was 394.

Wokingham contains places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. The Baptist chapel, which is very large, has been rebuilt. In the centre of the town stands a block of buildings, consisting of the Town Hall, Market House, Police station and Reading Room, erected, at a cost of £3,500, on the site of the old Town Hall: in the town hall is a parochial library of 1,000 volumes. The Drill Hall, in Denmark street, is a handsome red brick building, erected in 1881, by Capt. A. F. Walter. The market, once celebrated for its supply of poultry, but now unimportant, is on Tuesday. John Westende, of this town, left in 1451 eight almshouses for deserving poor, each of whom receives an allowance of coal, grocery and meat weekly. At Chapel Green, a mile from the town, is a hospital, originally founded in 1663 by Henry Lucas esq. for 16 poor men, who receive £20 yearly and other perquisites, to be chosen from 16 of the neighbouring parishes, but now 12 brethren are admitted, who have £25 yearly each, with a plot of ground: the hospital contains a chapel and a residence for the minister; the Rev. Reynold Harwood is the master. Wokingham is endowed with many charities, producing over £400 yearly, for food and clothing and fuel, and there is a bequest by Archbishop Laud of £50 a year, to be expended every third year in portioning poor maidens and the other two years in apprenticing boys of the parish. Heathlands House, about 2½ miles from the town, a well-built brick residence standing in pleasant grounds, is the seat of Sydney Alers Hankey esq. D.L., J.P. Keep Hatch, a pleasant residence, standing on an elevated site, is the seat of the Rev. George Edward Denis-De Vitré M.A. Bill Hill, the seat of John Leveson-Gower esq. D.L., J.P. is about 1½ miles from the town, on the Twyford road. Buckhurst, a modern red brick house with stone facings, is the seat of Chas. T. Murdoch esq. J.P. About 2 miles from the town is Marchfield House, the residence of Mrs. Bunbury. The Rev. H. Golding-Palmer, of Sonning, is the possessor of the manorial rights. The soil is a rich loam; subsoil, sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 8,131 acres; rateable value, £24,333; the population in 1871 was 4,652 and in 1881, 5,043. A detached portion of the parish is contiguous to Arborfield and Barkham, 3 miles distant.

WEST WOODHAY is a parish 6 miles south-west from Newbury, 6 south-east from Hungerford and 3 miles south from Kintbury railway station, on the borders of Hampshire, in the hundred of Kintbury-Eagle, union and county court district of Hungerford, rural deanery of Newbury, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The parish church of St. Lawrence was built A.D. 1882 by W. H. Cole esq. to replace the former church, a heavy brick structure, built A.D. 1717, said to be from designs of Inigo Jones, which stood close to the manor house; this in its turn had taken the place of the original church of which no trace however remained except some few architectural fragments and a quantity of encaustic tiles found embedded in the walls and foundations of the latter building; the present church, which stands about a quarter of a mile from the manor house, is built of flint with Bath stone dressing and consists of chancel, nave and square tower with 1 bell; the style is Early Pointed. The register dates from the year 1580. The living is a rectory, yearly value £260, with residence, in the gift of W. H. Cole esq. and held by the Rev. John Day Beales B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. This place had anciently a market on Tuesdays, granted in 1318 to one of the barons of St. Amand; from the St. Amands, West Woodhay passed by marriage to Sir Gerard Braybrooke, one of whose co-heiresses married Sir William Beauchamp, afterwards Lord St. Amand. John de la Pole had a grant of this manor in 1484; from 1512 the collateral descendants of Sir F. Cheyne held it, and it then became the property of the Darrells. John Darrell was created a baronet in 1622; not long after it passed to the family of Rudyerd, of whom it was purchased by the grandfather of the late General Sir R. Sloper K.B. and is now the property of William Henry Cole esq. who is owner of the rustic parish. The Manor House, which is the seat of William Henry Cole esq. is a handsome specimen of the architecture of Inigo Jones and has been enlarged by the addition of a south wing. The soil is light subsoil, chalk and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 1,407 acres; rateable value, £1,764 18s. 6d.; the population in 1881 was 115.

WOOLHAMPTON is a parish and a pleasant village on the London and Bath road, with a station on the Great Western railway called Midgham station, 47 miles from London, 7 east from Newbury and 10 south-west from Reading, in the hundred of Theale, union and county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Peter, situated on an eminence, is a handsome Gothic structure with stained windows; it was rebuilt at the expense of the late James Blyth esq and opened in June 1861. The register dates from the year 1636. The living is a rectory, yearly value £290 with residence, in the gift of Robert Burn-Blyth esq. J.P. and held since 1875 by the Rev. Robert Boyle Monck Mason M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Catholic church dedicated to St. Mary; also a small Congregational chapel built in 1768. Charities amounting to £70 yearly value. Woolhampton House, the seat of Robert Burn-Blyth esq. J.P. is a handsome red brick building situated in a well-wooded park of about 150 acres. Robert Burn-Blyth esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor, W. Mount esq. J.P. and James George Frankum esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel, clay and loam, with peat in Kennet valley; subsoil varies very much, principally clay and gravel. The area is 694 acres; rateable value, £2,585; the population in 1881 was 493.

WOOLSTONE is a township in the parish of Uffington, in the hundred of Shrivenham, union and county court district of Faringdon, rural deanery of the Vale of White Horse, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, 6 miles south from Faringdon, 19 from Newbury and 2 south-west from Uffington Junction on the Great Western railway; it is very pleasantly situated at the foot of the White Horse Hill. The church of All Saints is an ancient fabric in the Norman and Early English transition style, with chancel, nave and southern transept, south porch and western bell gable with 1 bell; the windows are mostly Decorated insertions; there is a piscina in the chancel, another in the transept and a locker in the nave; the font is a lead basin on an Early English stone pedestal; the north door is Norman; the edifice was restored throughout in 1867. The register dates from the year 1846, previous to which the registers were kept at the mother church at Uffington. The living is annexed to Baulking, joint yearly value £65, in the gift of Charles Eyre esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Edmund St. Maur Macphail M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford, who resides at Baulking. It is said to have formerly belonged, in whole or in part, to the abbey of Abingdon. Many Roman antiquities have been from time to time found in various parts of this parish. The old Roman Icknield Street passes through the parish, also the old British way. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is not very rich, consisting of a strong clay and white gravel: subsoil, principally clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats. The area is 1,819 acres; rateable value, £3,618; the population in 1881 was 201.

WYTHAM is a parish 3 miles north-west from Oxford, in the hundred of Hormer, union of Abingdon, county court district of Oxford, rural deanery of Abingdon, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford. The village is situated at the foot of a hill, on the summit of which was a castle, supposed to have been built by Kinewulf, king of the West Saxons, during his wars with Offa, king of the Mercians, who, after it had fallen into his hands, made it his residence; the battle through which Offa obtained possession of it was fought traditionally at a place called Sandfield, in which neighbourhood Hearne, in his 'Liber Niger,' says that armour, swords and human bones have been found. The parish is bounded on three sides by the Isis. The church of All Saints, first built by the monks of Abingdon, was rebuilt by the late Earl of Abingdon, who here most carefully preserved some of the very interesting fragments of Cumnor Hall; the structure is in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave and tower with clock and 3 bells; it contains some brasses of the Wyghtham family, the original owners of the manor. The register dates from the year 1700. The living is a rectory, yearly value £180 with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Abingdon and held since 1881 by the Rev. Henry Duffield Meyrick. Wytham Abbey, the mansion of the Earl of Abingdon, was originally erected about the reign of Henry VI.; the gate-house in the centre of the front and the hall are fine specimens of ancient architecture. Wytham Wood extends over 700 acres. The Earl of Abingdon is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is various; subsoil, clay, sand and limestone. The chief crops are a succession of grain and grass. The area comprises about 1,670 acres; rateable value, £1,604; the population in 1881 was 198.

YATTENDON is a village and parish 12 miles north-west from Reading and 7 north-east from Newbury, in the hundred of Faircross, union of Bradfield, county court district of Newbury, rural deanery of Bradfield, archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on an acclivity. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a building of the Perpendicular period, consisting of chancel, nave, south and west porches and a western tower: it was rebuilt about 1450 by John Norreys esq. as recorded in an inscription formerly in a window in the church and preserved by Ashmole: the east window is of five lights: the chancel arch is destroyed, but part of a rood-screen and the staircase turret to the rood-loft remain: the nave windows are all good, three-light Perpendicular: the pulpit is Jacobean and there is an octagonal font: in the church is a monument to Sir John Norreys knt. second son to Henry, first Lord Norreys of Rycot, ambassador to France and a distinguished military commander in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; he died at Yattendon, July 3, 1597: here also is buried, in a vault on the north side of the chancel, the Rev. Thomas Carte, historian, who died at Caldecot, near Abingdon, April 2, 1574. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £413 with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Loveday and held since 1873 by the Rev. Arthur Loveday M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. Yattendon has been considered by the historian Carte, and later antiquaries, as the "Ethandune" of the Saxon Chronicle A.D. 878, where Alfred fell upon the Danes and pursuing them to their camp, forced a surrender; in digging the foundations for Mr. Waterhouse's residence, 450 feet above the sea level, and at about two feet below the surface, 59 pieces of bronze, mostly portions of warlike implements, were found and have been carefully preserved by Mr. Waterhouse; the date of the deposit was probably anterior to that of the Roman irruption. There is a free library, reading room and coffee room, erected by and maintained at the sole expense of A. Waterhouse esq. There is a charity of £2 5s. yearly, derived from Deane's bequest to the General Municipal charities of Reading. Yattendon House, the seat of Alfred Waterhouse esq. A.R.A. is a handsome building of red brick, with buff terra-cotta dressings, and has a tower 500 feet above the level of the sea, from which a beautiful view of the surrounding country is obtained. The principal landowners are W. Dewe, R. Floyd, T. Floyd and J. Breach esqrs. A. Waterhouse esq. A.R.A. is lord of the manor. The soil is clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 1,393 acres; rateable value, £2,601 14s.; the population in 1871 was 279.
